AMERICAN

REVOLUTION:

WRITTEN IN

SCRIPTURAL,

ANCIENT HISTORICAL STYLE

" HONE SOLT QUE MAL Y' PENSL."

By RICHARD SNOWDEN.

Baltimore:

Printed by W. PECHIN, No. 10, Second-street

Andrew Care of the land.

COPY-RIGHT SECURED.

Calabara in in in its and fer

P

th B

me

fen at Ho

fro Hil

tur

Contents.

menter and the Tablem

CHAP. I.

THE East-India Company ship their Teato America, charged with a Duty for the purpose of raising a Revenue.

Chap. II. page 19. The Tea arrives on the coast of America, and is destroyed at Boston—The port of Boston is shut up.

Chap. III. page 24. Dr. Franklin prefents the Petition of Congress to the Parliament of Great Britain.

Chap. IV. page 29. General Gage fends a party to destroy the Military Stores at Concord—The first commencement of Hostilities at Lexington.

Chap. V. page 35. Fresh troops arrive from Great Britain—The battle on Bunker's Hill.

Chap. VI. page 40. General Gage returns to England—fucceeded by General Howe—The Americans fit out Privateers— The burning of Falmouth by the British.

Chap. VII. page 44. Colonels Allen and Arnold surprise Ticonderoga. Subseovent operations in Canada.

L

OI OI

th

of

T

ing

cu

in tre

fen

be

my

Th

Pri

par

Chap. VIII. page 52. St. John's taken—Col. Allen captured and fent to England—Montgomery flain.

Chap. IX. page 59. Transactions in Virginia during the Administration of Earl Dunmore.

Chap. X. page 64. The embarrassments of the King's Troops in Boston—They evacuate the town, and remove to Halifax in Nova-Scotia.

Chap. XI. page 70. Fresh Troops are fent by Congress to Canada—A large force arrives from Great Britain—The war in that province assumes a new force.

Chap. XII. page 77. The Canadians complain of the conduct of the Army—The naval engagement in Lake Champlain.

Chap. XIII. page 86. The Parliament of Great Britain hire foldiers from Germany, for the purpose of subjugating the Colonies—Unsuccessful expedition against South Caro-kna—Commodore Parker wounded.

CONTENTS.

Chap. XIV. page 90. Sir William Howe leaves Halifax, and is foon followed by his brother Admiral Howe, with a land force—Independence is declared—The battle on Long-Island.

Chap. XV. page 99. The Commissioners declare their power for settling the disputes subsisting between Great Britain and the Colonies.

n

r-

n-

sey

ax

are hat

ians

The

nent

any,

es-

aro-

Chap. XVI. page 105. The American officers conclude to evacuate New-York—The battle at the White-Plains—Fort Washington taken.

Chap. XVII. page 113. Fort Lee evacuated by the Americans—The Militia defert in great numbers—General Washington retreats, through the Jerseys.

Chap. XVIII. page 118. General Howe fends forth a Proclamation—many take the benefit thereof, and make their peace.

Chap. XIX. page 121. The American army retreat over the Delaware—General Lee captured—The Hessians taken at Trenton—The battle of Sanpink Bridge.

Chap. XX. page 128. The Expedition at Princeton—The Americans recover, great part of the Jerseys.

A 2

Chap. XXI. page 133. The British army retreats to Brunswick—Skirmishes with small parties.

Chap. XXII. page 138. Governor Tryon's Expedition to Danbury—Destroys the American stores—His party attacked by Arnold, Wooster and Silliman—General Wooster slain.

Chap. XXIII. page 143. Manœuvres of General Howe frustrated—The British army go on board their ships—They land at the Head of Elk.

t

d

n

a

Chap. XXIV. page 149. Battle of Brandywine near Chadd's Ford—Successful on the part of the British.

Chap. XXV. page 156. General Howe marches in Philadelphia—The battle of Germantown—the Delaware Frigate captured.

Chap. XXVI. page 163. Operations against Fort Missin, on Mud-Island—and Red-Bank—The former finally evacuated by the Americans.

Chap. XXVII. page 168. Fort on Red-Bank—The Hessians under Count Donop are defeated—Finally evacuated on the approach of Lord Cornwallis with a large force—Count Donop dies of his wounds.

arith

oys by eral

vres arthe

ranon

owe Ger-

Red-

Redp are oach ount Chap. XXVIII. page 174. The Heffians retreat through the Jerseys, and plunder the inhabitants.

Chap. XXIX. page 179. The American armies go into winter quarters—Sir Guy Carlton is fucceeded by General Burgoyne—The Militia, under General Herkimer, fall into an ambuscade of Indians and Tories, led by John Johnson and St. Leger, who were upon an expedition against Fort Schuyler.

Chap. XXX. page 186. St. Leger attempts to terrify the Garrison in Fort Schuyler (formerly Stanwix) is unsuccessful—Col. Willet and Lieutenant Stockwel undertake to go to the camp at Still-Water—General Schuyler sends a detachment under Arnold—The Indians retreat with precipitation (occasioned by a stratagem of Arnold) and the British follow their example.

Chap. XXXI. page 192. General Burgoyne advances, fends a detachment to fieze the stores at Bennington; they are repulsed with vigor, and a great part of the detachment cut off.

Chap. XXXII. page 199. The British army encamp on the heights and plains of Saratoga; and the American army at the Still-Water—a smart engagement ensues, wherein the Americans are successful. General Clinton makes a diversion to relieve Burgoyne and attacks Fort Montgomery.

ed

co

C ec

th

Cl

m

mo

fle

Br

ble

tiò

GI

and

COI

Co

Sa

Chap. XXXIII. page 206. The British army distressed and nearly surrounded—their provision begins to grow scarce—endeavor to extricate themselves, but are repulsed with considerable loss. Intrepidity of General Arnold. General Frazier slain.

Chap. XXXIV page 211. The army commanded by General Burgoyne, after feveral fruitless endeavours to escape, finally capitulate.

Chap. XXXV. page 217. Sir William Howe prepares to embark for England; is fucceeded in command by Sir Henry Clinton. Unfuccefsful expedition of the Marquis la Fayette.

Chap. XXXVI. page 224. The light-infantry land in the night, near Gloucester, on the Jersey Shore; and proceed to Haddonfield. The militia, commanded by Col. Ellis, have notice of their coming—they narrowly escape.

Chap. XXXVII. page 228. The news of the army under General Burgoyne, arrives in England: in consequence of which, the French Court acknowledges the Independence of the United States; and Dr. Franklin, Silas Deane, and Arthur Lee, Esqrs. are treated with, as Commissioners. Lord North's conciliatory bill passes both houses of Parliament; is sent to America, and rejected by Congress.

e

h ir

h

al

17

e-

lly

is is la

ht-

er,

on-

ol.

CWS

ves the nce

Chap. XXXVIII. page 234. The French equip a fleet, for the purpose of blocking up the English in the Delaware. Sir Henry Clinton, being timely informed of their intentions, escapes to New York: the land-forces marches through the Jerseys. Battle of Monmouth.

Chap. XXXIX. page 244. The French fleet arrive at the Delaware, and pursue the British fleet. Their design frustrated—disabled by a storm—rendezvous at Boston. Action on Rhode Island.

Chap. XL. page 247. Major General Grey, with a party of the British, surprise and put to death with their bayonets, nearly a whole regiment of American dragoons, commanded by Col. Baylor, at Old Tapaan.

Chap. XLI. page 250. The British forces are successful under General Prevost, and Col. Campbell, and establish themselves in Savannah.

Chap. XLII. page 253. General Wayne's successful expedition at Stoney Point—the fort, after being in possession of the Americans a few days, is evacuated, and re-posted by the British.

Chap. XLIII. page 257. Spain declares war against Great Britain. Proceedings of the British in Carolina.

Chap. XLIV. page 262. Major Lee furprises the British garrison at Powles Hook. Unsuccessful expedition against Penobscot.

Chap. XLV. page 267. Southern expeditions—General Prevost marches towards Charlestown, &c.

Chap. XLVI. page 273. General Prevost before Charlestown—Sundry propositions rejected by the British: who being informed of the approach of the Americans, siled off towards the Islands near the sea.

Chap. XLVII. page 277. Count D'Eftaing arrives on the coast. Unsuccessful expedition of the French and Americans against Savannah.

Chap. XLVIII. page 286. Subsequent operations to the Southward. General Clinton besieges Charlestown. General Lincoln capitulates, &c. op

dei

mu por ber an

is f

of

trea ecu

is a arm cefs ingt

dividual of S

from make Chap. XLIX: page 292. Subsequent operations in South Carolina.

Chap. L. page 296. The battle of Camden, successful on the part of the British.

of

ee

k.

ot.

oe-

ds

re-

osi-

inns,

Ef-

ex-

ainst

uent

Clin-

coln

Chap. LI. page 301. Major Ferguson of the 71st. Regiment, an active partisan, stimulates the disaffected to take up arms in support of the British government—a great number of this description embodies, and after an obstinate resistance are deseated—Ferguson is slain, and the residue made prisoners.

Chap. LII. page 306. General Arnold's treachery discovered. Andre taken and executed.

Chap. LIII. page 314. General Green is appointed to the command of the Southern army, in the room of Ceneral Gates. Successful expedition of Lieutenant Col. Washington, &c.

Chap. LIV. page 321. General Green divides his force. The division under General Morgan goes to the Western extremity of South Carolina; defeats Tarleton at the Cowpens.

Chap. LV. page 328. A reinforcement from Virginia, stimulates General Green to make a stand against Cornwallis—Is defeated, and retires to Speedwell Iron-works.

CONTENTS.

Chap. LVI. page 335. General Green, with the American Southern army, encamp within a mile of Camden. Lord Rawdon, with nine hundred men, are in Camden—They make a fally upon the American army, and gain the victory.

Chap. LVII. page 342. Cornwallis is strengthened by the royal forces, under Phillips and Arnold—Traverses the country—Is feebly opposed by the Americans.

Chap. LVIII. page 349. General Washington puts the American army in motion; and in conjunction with the French forces, marches to York-town. Count de Grasse arrives with the French sleet, at the Chesapeake. The British under Cornwallis, are closely invested, and finally capitulate.

The

p

Geor

fron

part

cree

land

Chap. LIX. page 355. The news of the capture of Cornwallis, arrives in England—Debates in Parliament.

Chap. LX. page 357. The Independence of the thirteen United States, acknowledged in Europe. Peace is declared.

TO WHICH IS ADDED,

THE AMERICAN WAR-A POEM,

By the same Author.

PROPOSORORARA

court factorial original production of the court of the c

American Revolution.

constant and transmission and were material

at a ciner was a fact and maga to the inand the property of the contract of the contract of

The East-India Company ship their Tea to America, charged with a Duty, for the purpose of raising a Revenue.

In the thirteenth year of the reign of George the king, whose dominions extended from the island of Britain to the uttermost parts of the earth!

2. The same year the king made a decree to tax the people of the provinces in the land of Columbia, for they had paid no tri-

Baise Sale and B

mp

ny,

s is hil-—Is afhon; ces,

refaare

f the

lence

M,

bute to the king, neither they nor their fore-

- 3. Nevertheless, they gave the king every year a free-will offering (not as tributaries) for they were freemen, and were never in bondage to any:
- 4. Neither were they seditions to the interest of Cæsar, they loved the king, and meddled not with those who were given to change: his enemies were their enemies, and they fought the battles of the king.
- White-hall (the palace,) and it was sealed with the king's signet.
- 6. And the governors of the provinces were commanded to make the thing known to the people.
- 7. Now when the people of the provinces had seen the writing of the decree, and knew that it was sealed with the king's signet, they were sorely grieved, and there was a very great murmuring, the sound

th

pa th

to the tain

the

yet

wat drii

nam

thereof was like the rushing of mighty waters!

re-

ry

es)

in

in-

and

to

and

Sin:

rom

aled

nces

own

aired

pro-

cree,

ing's

here

ound

- 8. And there were at that time a company of merchants in the town of Lud,* that ancient city, who had a navy of ships that went once in three years to a far country to traffic with the merchants of the East for the Indian weed.
- 9. And the merchants sold the weed to the people of the kingdom of Britain at a certain price, and it brought much wealth into the treasury of the king.
- 10. Notwithstanding it was no better than the herbage of the field, or the hysop which groweth in the garden of the husbandman; yet the people loved to have it so.
- weed into fine earthen vessels, and they put water into the vessels, and they poured out drink offerings thereof into cups of enamel
- * London anciently called Lud, after a king of that work; and it was their morning and evening potation.

- 12. And the merchants who trafficked in the Indian weed, spake before the king and said,
- 12. Thou O King! hast made a decree, that the people of the provinces in the land of Columbia, shall pay tribute to the king in like manner as we do here in Britain.
- 14. Be it known unto thee O King! that our store-houses are filled with the Indian weed, by the gains thereof the strength of thy kingdom is greatly increased.
- realm of Britain, are not able to consume the one half of that which now is in our store-houses, before the ships will arrive from the country of the East; so the merchants will suffer loss, and the revenue of the king will fail:
- 16. Now if it please the king, let the ships of the merchants be laden therewith, and let

th bu

OV

inl th:

wh

ser

see of rea

ple

and

them be sent to the land of Columbia, to the people of the provinces, that they may buy thereof, and pay a tribute to the king over and above the price of the merchants.

- 17. For lo! thy servants have heard they inhabit a fat land! a land of corn and wine, that bringeth forth fruit in its season, and where all the fruits of the forest do grow!
- 18. And moreover it hath been told thy servants, that they drink out of vessels of gold and vessels of silver! which is not seemly for any to do except it be the servants of the king, whom he hath set over the realm, and dignified with great honor.
- 19. And the sayings of the merchants pleased the king and his nobles; and he commanded that it should be even so as the merchants had desired.
- 20. Then were all the store-houses set open, and the Indian weed was brought forth in chests made of the fir-tree, and the chests

B 2

dg

in ee, of like that dian h of the the tore-

thips

will

were lined with broad sheets of lead, to preserve the weed from the waters.

21. And the chefts were put upon carriages that were part of wood, and part of iron, and horses were put to the carriages, (now there were no such carriages in the days of Solomon.)

22. And they went by the way of the street of the city, until thou comest to the tower of Lud, which looketh towards the river, where was a fair haven for ships.

23. Now when the ships had taken in their lading, the mariners spread their sails to the wind, and unloosed their rudder-bands, and launched out into the great deep; and after they had set a compass, they steered a strait course to the land of Columbia, that lieth to the westward of Britain, twenty-four thousand furlongs.

circle made of the fires, and the

Th

- ada

31.7

H.

bee

the

sou

sea the fort

coal

ven

the Hally discrimed resembles like lather GHAP. II. Las tenan

The Tea arrives on the coast of America, and is The port of Beston is destroyed at Boston. shut ub.

AND it came to pass, when it was known to the people of the provinces, what had been done in the island of Britain, and that the merchant ships had sailed.

- 2. They were greatly moved at the report thereof; and the moving of the people was like the moving of the tall cedars, when the south wind bloweth upon them!
- 3. And the people arose, as the sand of the sea for multitude, to oppose the decree of the king; and the number that conspired against receiving the weed, was more than forty thousand men'l of the it bate.
- 4. And when the ships had arrived on the coast of Columbia, and the mariners were gone down into the fides of the ships; lo! seventeen lion-like men from the province of

.

enw ficking ... as

cart of ges,

lays

4.1

the the the

their

the and after

Arait eth to

thou-

the East,* disguised themselves like barbarians,† and went into the ships; and it was about the fourth watch of the night:

- 4. And they cast the Indian weed into the waters of the river, and it was all swallowed up of the waters!
- 6. Now when the morning was come, there was no small stir amongst the soldiers; and they made diligent fearch for the confpirators; but they had hid themselves, and the thing was not known.
- 7. And letters were sent into every province, exhorting the people, far and near, to lumb choose deputies from amongst the people that they might take counsel concerning this Brita thing : and it was fo.
- 8. And it came to pass when the deputies had gathered themselves together, that they also chose other deputies, men of wisdom, out of hi And they all met at on called of every province.

Maffachusetts: + Like Indians

plac hed

they pro Buff

saw the l a tui

selve

had made

13 rbawas

the low-

ome, iers;

e that place; and these were called the great Sanhedrim* of the people.

- 9. And the rest of the provinces, although they destroyed not the Indian weed, as the provinces of the East had done, yet they suffered not the mariners to unlade the ships.
- 10. Now when the captains of the ships saw that the people abhorred the decree of con- the king, they forbore to unlade the ships, lest and a tumult should be made.
- 11. And when they had refreshed thempro-selves, they departed from the coast of Coar, to lumbia, and sailed to the island of Britain.
- 13. And when tidings came to the king of this Britain, how that the people of the provinces had refused to obey the decree that he had putie made, and had destroyed the Indian weed.
- t they 13. He was exceeding wrath, and the form m, out of his visage was changed; and he halfily at on called his nobles, his counsellers, and his wise men, that they might advise together touching this matter.

^{*} Congress.

the king, who was chief counsellor in the realm of Britain, spake before the king and said, the provinces refuse to obey the decree thou halt made; if it seem good unto the king to hearken to the counsel of his servant, then let the king make another decree;

sent to the governor of the king's garrison, in the town of Boston, which lieth nigh unto Salem, in the province of the East:

17. And if it please the king, let the governor, and the captain of the king's ships be commanded, that they take away from the town, the whole stay of bread, and the whole stay of water; the ships and the merchandize: and instead of plenty let there be a famine, and instead of peace, a sword!

* Lord North.

ther his the was

·I

unto

and tall

had watc

20

and 1

21

ple of breth they 22

to th

even

18. And when the lord had done speaking, there was a great shout among the people; his counsel was as the counsel of Abithopel, in the days of David, king of Israel! and he was set over the whole realm, and was next unto the king.

151

ear

the

id,

of 101

to to

hen

e be

son,

un-

go-

hips

the hole

ize:

nine,

his servants; and the king made a decree, and sent it to the governor by one of the tall ships of Britain.

had received the king's letters, he set a watch in the gate thereof: and the captain of the king's ship cast anchor in the river, and no ship could pass that way.

21. Now it came to pass, when the people of the provinces had heard that their brethren in the town were in a great strait, they sent to speak comfortable words unto them, and gave them goodly gifts.

22. And the great council of the provinces, even the great Sanhedrim of the people, wrote a petition to the king, wherein they besought him, not to cast off his people, for they were his own inheritance; but that he would look towards them as in times past.

23. And the petition was given to Benjamin,* to give to the king: now this Benjamin was a wise man, and his name was much set by amongst the people; he exceeded all the ancients in wisdom and knowledge.

24. He taught the people the hidden myfteries of nature, which had lain hid from the foundation of the world, and which our fathers knew not!

* Dr. Franklin.

CHAP. III.

Dr. Franklin presents the Petition of Congress to the Parliament of Great Britain.

AND when Benjamin came into the great council of the kingdom, the eyes of all the people were faltened upon him!

no

lai

but

len

han pro

not

at t

wer

6

Egy yea,

ing I

7.

- 2. The princes refrained talking, and the nobles held their peace! they were struck dumb at the wisdom of his words, and they laid their hands upon their mouths!
- 3. Twice they essayed to speak, yea thrice; but were confounded! for they could not resist the wisdom of his sayings; for an excellent spirit was in him.
- 4. Howbeit, they had determined before hand, that the petition of the people of the provinces should not be regarded, for the chief counsellor of the kingdom favoured it not.
- 5. Now there were many in the kingdom at that time, who were fed by the king, and were maintained by his bounty.
- 6. These men were like the locusts of Egypt, they devoured every goodly thing, yea, they were like the wolves of the evening hunting for their prey.
 - 7. Now these men watched the words of

C

njaimin set

the

be-

ney

uld

mysa the r fa-

ngrefs

great

the chief counsellor, whatsoever he said, they said; they were like the passive clay in the hands of the potter.

th

ph

and

var

2 W

two

at t

fair

min

they

of t

on t

I

8. And the petition was rejected by the king and the great council of the kingdom, for it was determined to make war upon the people of the provinces, that they might be brought under the yoke.

g. And soldiers were sent from the land of Hibernia, and from places beyond the sea, and Thomas* was appointed governor in the province of the East.

no. He was also captain of the host of the men of Britain that were in the town of Boston, and he strengthened himself in the town, and caused battlements to be built.

the land of Columbia, there were certain men in the city of Lud, the chief city of the kingdom of Britain;

* General Gage.

12. They were men who loved peace, and were zealous to make up the breach betwixt the king and the people, and to heal the wounds the enemy had made.

- 13. They met at the house of John* the physician; now this John was a worthy man, and beloved by the king and his chief servants.
- 14. Davidt also who was of the seed royal, a wise man, and one that loved peace; these two men held a secret council with Penjamin at the house of John the physician.
- 15. They reasoned together about the affairs of the provinces, and balanced in their minds things present and things to come: they were guided by wisdom, and the words of their mouths distilled as the small rain upon the tender grass.
 - 16. Yet they could not withstand the tor-
 - * Dr. Fothergill.
- + David Barclay, related to the family of the Stew-arts.

d of

ey

he

the

m,

the

t be fea,

f the Bosown,

ng in n men king rent of opposition, for the god of this world had blinded the eyes of the great council of the kingdom; and there were of them, who burned incense at the altar of Mammon, and followed after filthy lucre.

17. And Benjamin seeing that the time of his departure from the kingdom of Britain was at hand, he took leave of his friends and went into a ship that was going to the land of Columbia, the place of his nativity.

28. And it came to pass, when the ship had arrived, and it was known to the people of the provinces that Benjamin their brother was returned from the island of Britain, that there was a great rejoicing throughout the whole land.

19. And he came to Philadelphia, which by interpretation signissieth the city of Love; it was the chief city of the provinces; and the wise men of the city led him to the great Sanhedrim of the people, and he sat in a chief seat.

he

lo

m

in sul mo

nau the

Gene

A

d

t

0;

d

of

ain

nd

of

had

e of

was

here

hole

which

ove;

id the

t San-

chief

20. And Benjamin arose upon his feet, and he rehearsed to the Sanhedrim all that he had heard and seen in the island of Britain, and in the great council of the kingdom: and moreover he told them that the chief counsellor favoured them not.

21. Now when Benjamin had done speaking in the Sanhedrim, and the council had consulted upon the words that fell from his mouth; they took courage, and they set at naught the big swelling words of the lord of the realm of Britain.

CHAP. IV.

General Gage fends a party to destroy the Military Stores at Concord. The first Commencement of Hostilities at Lexington.

AND it came to pass, that Thomas, cap-

C 2

vately sent a chosen band of men, about the eleventh hour of the night, to a place called in the Italian tongue, Concordia,* to destroy the store-houses of the people, and the implements for war.

- 2. Yet notwithstanding it was the night season, when the soldiers set out, and the governor kept a strict watch, yet the people of the province had notice thereof.
- 3. And there affembled together of people of the province, three score and ten persons, and the foldiers of the king of Britain, were eight hundred valiant men.
- 4. And when the soldiers saw that the people of the province were collected together, they shouted with a great shout, and as they shouted they shot at the people of the province, and it was said that some of the people were slain.
 - 5. And it came to pass, that John, t cap

* Concord.

† Major Butler.

lre

air

ea

ern

kin nac witl

higl mer

ter com

war

ry a

asce

8. river

ber o

the alled stroy im-

t seae gople of people rsons, were

e peogether, is they ne pro

,t cap

ain of a company of the province, when he leard the shouting of the men of war, that he armed himself and ran, and about four hundred men followed after him to the battle:

- 6. And they overtook the soldiers of the king of Britain, at a place called in the vernacular tongue, Lexington; and they fought with them there; and the soldiers fled by the highway of the country; and John and the men who were with him, followed hard after them, warring as they went, until thou comest to the Mountain* that looketh towards the town:
 - 7. And the men of Britain were very weary and chafed in their minds; and it was about the going down of the sun when they ascended the mountain; and they rested there that night.
 - 8. And on the morrow they passed over the river and went into the town; and the number of the slain of the men of Britain were three score and five persons; and their fell of the people of the provinces two score and ten men.

^{*} Bunker's-hill.

9. And it came to pass when it was known throughout the land of Columbia, that some of the people of the provinces were flain by the soldiers of the king of Britain;

out, saying; What part have we in George, or what inheritance in the house of Brunswick? lo! he hath cast us off as aliens to his house, and dealeth with us as with enemies.

- selves greatly, and encouraged one another to fight manfully for their country, their wives and their little ones.
- 12. And the people accustomed themselves to the exercises of war; and instead of the voice of melody and the songs of gladness, the sound of the trumpet and the shouting of the warriors were heard.

il of lrim

f B

he l

when of the ne s

—th hear ı (

capt the

an e

fede

I

r fell

own some n by orge, uns-

nies. nem-

heir

lves the

g of

13. Yet, notwithstanding, the great counil of the provinces, even the great Sanhelrim of the people, again besought the king of Britain, that he would grant them peace, and call back his army from their borders:

14. But he was deaf to all their cries, and he lord, the chief counsellor of Britain, when he was told, that some of the servants of the king had been slain by the people in the land of Columbia;

15. That he was exceedingly wrath, and he said, Lo! these men want only to gain time to strengthen themselves for the battle—they cry peace, peace, and war is in their hearts.

army greater than the first, and let the ablest captains of the host of Britain be sent over to the land of Columbia, that they may make an end at once.

17. And moreover he said, Is not the confederacy of the rebellious provinces, as tho' a man made a rope with the sand that is on the sea shore, which when it is broken will never unite again?

18. And another lord* said on this wise are not the people of the provinces like unto the wild roe upon the mountains, that fleeth before the hunters? one man of the army of Britain will chase an hundred, will put ten thousand to flight.

19. And it was so, that the king hearkened to the voice of the chief counsellor, and he ordered the captains of the host to muster an army to go to the land of Columbia, to subdue the people of the provinces.

20. And the captains hastened to obey the king's command, inasmuch as the lord of of la Britain was urgent for the business to be done, peop and the soldiers were put into the ships, with pla all instruments for war.

21. And when the ships were ready, and 3. had taken in their lading, they hoisted up nou

Fresh

heir

wind

he l

ba

of th hat

geth 2.

essi

^{*} Lord Sandwich.

is on

will

Wise.

unto

fleeth

ny ol

at ten

rken-

, and

nuster

ia, to

ey the

heir anchors, and loosed their sails to the wind, and steered their course westward for he land of Columbia.

CHAP. V.

Fresh troops arrive from Great Britain. The battle on Bunker's Hill.

AND it came to pass, after that the army of the king of Britain had gotten fafe to land, hat the people of the provinces consulted torether concerning the war.

- 2. Now there was a mountain* on a neck ord of pf land, that overlooked the town, and the done, people of the provinces desired to have it for with place of defence, and essayed to take posession thereof by subtility.
- 3. And they went up to the top of the , and ted up mountain, and they toiled hard all night, and placed battlements on the mountain; and lo when the sun was risen upon the earth, the captains of the host of Britain looked, and be hold they saw the people of the provinces on the top of the mountain; and they were astonished out of measure!

Bunker's H.ll.

- 4. And about the twelfth hour of the day. Thomas, the captain of the host of Britain, sent an army to drive the people from off the mountain; and the number of men that he king sent, was about three thousand.
- 5. And the three thousand men passed over the mountain, and there was but a small space between the two armies: and the peoprov ple of the provinces encamped on the moun-peop tain. The state of the s
- 6. And they put the battle in array, army against army; and the battle waxed hot, and there fell of the men of Britain, one thou pair sand and fifty-four. And there were slain of much the people of the provinces, one hundred and thirty-nine.

ber king and

a ga

8

capt ces,

and 9 that

ple d

I

reat

hey

d lo

, the

d bees on

were

day,

ritain,

ff the

passed

small

, army

red and

7. Yet, notwithstanding the army of the king of Britain gained the top of the mountain. and they built a strong hold there, and placed a garrison of soldiers in the midst thereof.

- 8. Howbeit, it was a sore battle; and the captain of the host of the people of the provinces, whose sur-name was Warren was slain; and the people mourned for him many days.
- g. And on the same day, the host of the at he king of Britain burned a town with fire, that appertained to the province, and the people of the town lost all their possessions.
- 10. After these things, the princes of the e peo provinces, even the great Sanhedrim of the moun people sent another petition to the king, enreating him after the former manner, but hey could not prevail.
- ot, and II. Then the people of the provinces dethou paired of being reconciled to the king, masslain of much as he harkned to the voice of the chief counsellor their enemy: then they exhorted one another to be of good courage.

Charleston.

- ple, consulted together where they should find a man that would be able to go out before the host of Columbia, and order the battle for them.
- 13. And they chose George, whos surname was Washington, he was from the south country, and had a goodly inheritance on Mount Vernon, and flocks and herds in abundance.
- 14. He was a man of war from his youth, was beloved of the people, and his bowels yearned towards them in the day of their calamity! he was also one of the princes of the provinces, and sat in the Sanhedrim of the people, who bore the burthen in the heat of the day.
- ed under him; and the names of the captains were these, Artemas, Charles, Philip, Israel

H

J'm

the

hos

of t he fo

own

his w lingly

ever l

rted

peoould

bethe the

-sursouth ce' on

in a youth,

of the of the heat of

appoint captain , Israel

Horatio, Seth, Richard, David, William, Joseph, John whose sur-name was Thomas, and John and Nathaniel. These were all mighty men of valour, but George was chief captain.

- 16. And the chief captain of the host of the people of the provinces, took his way to the army that was encamped nigh unto the host of the king of Britain.
- 17. And as he passed along the highway of the country, the chief men of the provinces came out to do him honor.
- And lo! when he arrived at the camp. he found them, as sheep having no shepherd, bowels every man doing that which was right in his neir carown eyes.
 - 19. And he appointed unto every man his work; and the people served him willingly, and with a ready mind; for whateoever he did pleased the people.

Martin Site, Almored Devid, William Fobon CHAP. VI.

General Gage returns to England; succeeded by General Howe. The Americans fit out Privateers. The burning of Falmouth by the Britsh. de of the provincer.

NOW it came to pass towards the end of the year, that Thomas, the chief captain of the host of the king, was commanded to return to the island of Britain, to give an account to the king, touching the affairs of the provinces.

- 2. And William was appointed chief cap tain in his stead. Now William had a bro ther* who was a lord, and a valiant man; he went out against the servants of the king of Gaul; for the king of Gaul was formerly at war with the people of the provinces, and with the king of Britain.
- 3. And the people of the provinces love coast, the brother of William; they fought by hi fi ar

ftc cu

da

lia

wh he lie i out

of th face

fon d mucl

carrie

^{*} Lord Mowe-who fell in Canada in the French fide against the servants of the king of Gaul; and he was flain in battle, paint that ber wit

- 4. And the people fet up a statue of hewn stone, and fashioned it with the tools of the cunning workman, after the manner of those days; and it stood for a memorial of his valiant acts.
- 5. And there was yet another brother, who was a chief captain in the king's navy; he was also a lord of the realm of Britain.
- 6. And he fent the ships of the navy to lie in wait for the merchants ships that sailed ef cap out of the rivers of Columbia, and the navy of the king of Britain, was spread over the face of the great deep.
- 7. Now failing became dangerous, by reaormer fon of the thips of the king of Britain, inases, an much as they took the mariners captives, and carried the ships of Columbia to their own es love coasts. And the crysters of the
 - 8. These ships were armed with engines, le Frenc

t by hi

ceded

t out

b by nd of

in of eturn

count

e pro-

a bro

man

ne king

. D 2

fuch as were not known in the days of old: fire and balls issued out of their mouths; and the men who had the charge thereof, could shoot the balls to an hair's breadth! They were the invention of Satan, and as it is written in the book of John* the fweet finger of Albion.

q. Then the people of the provinces communed together concerning this thing; the great Sanhedrim of the people fent to the men who were occupied at the burning fiery furnace, that they should make engines like unto the engines that were in the ships of the navy of the king of Britain.

as 10. And the men heated the furnace feven times hotter than it was wont to be heated, and they cast the iron into the furnace and lo! it became an engine to destroy men

11. And the captains of the ships of the land of Columbia, took the engines into the of C nip apt

1 hat hat

am vith

oft

1 nd ong

wher oun

ome and t

14 orm

ive i with

Milton's Paradife Loft, old :

and

could

They

ritten

er of

danil

com.

to the fiery

s like

of the

of the

neated,

rnace

men.

of the

and

ips, and made all speed to war with the fea aptains of the island of Britain. To say which in need of those thirty acte found

- 12. And a captain* of one of the ships hat the Sanhedrim fent out, found a ship hat was going to the army which was enamped in the town; and the ship was laden vith all implements for war, to strengthen the oft of the king of Britain.
- 13. And the mariners were made captives, nd the ship was taken into a haven that beonged to the people of the provinces: and when they were unloading the ship, lo! they ound great store of the destroying engines: ome of them were of brass, and some of iron: e fever and the people rejoiced greatly,
- 14. And the other captains did even as the former captain had done; and they took capive many of the ships of the king of Britain, with the mariners thereof, and the strength nto the of Columbia was encreased thereby.

Captain Manly.

he

or a

2

W.O.

her

leve

mou

nigl

the

ther

4 cap

fou

the

the

cou

10!

to

tain were forely vexed, inasmuch as they stood in need of those things that were found in the ships, which the captains of the provinces had taken.

16. And they were filled with wrath, and lusted after revenge; for they were chassed in their minds as a bear robbed of her whelps. And it came to pass, that a sea captain of the navy of the king of Britain, burned a town that lay nigh unto the sea coast.

neni lo emel C H. A P. VHI ment To ano when they were ded a the lain, in they bund great flore of the deftroying engines;

Colonels Allen and Arnold surprise Ticonderoga.

Subsequent operations in Canada.

NOW there was a strong hold, called in the French tongue, Ticonderoga; and there was a garrison of soldiers in the hold, who were the servants of the king of Britain; and Falmouth.

of Bri he people of the provinces defired to have it y stood or a possession.

rovine

h, and

haffe

helps,

of the

town*

1.713

onid

leroga.

led in

there

who

; and

- 2. And they sent Ethan* and Benedict,† wo lion like men, towards the hold; and there followed after them two hundred and seventy men, † whose dwellings were in the mountains, and they were all valiant men.
- 3. And it was about the third watch of the night when Ethan and Benedict came against the hold. Now there was a river § betwixt them and the strong hold.
- 4. And about the cock-crowing, the two captains, Ethan and Benedic took with them four score and three men, and passed over the river; and they gat into the hold before the governor thereof had arisen from his couch, for his eyes were yet heavy with sleep.
- 5. And when the governor opened his eyes, lo! he faw Ethan and Benedict had gotten into the hold; and he demanded of them by ^{*} Col. Ethan Allen. † General Arnold.

[‡] Green Mountain Boys. § Lake Champlaio.

what authority they did these things, and wh gave them that authority.

- 6. Then Ethan raised his voice aloud an faid, Our authority is from the Great Jehova and the princes of the provinces, even the great Sanhedrim of the people, whose se vants we are.
- 7. Then the governor's heart melted with in him, when he heard the voice of Ethan and he delivered up the strong hold with the garrison thereof, to the two captains, Etha and Benedict; and the garrison were mad captives.
- 8. And it came to pass that when the great Sanhedrim of the people were told of the valiant acts of Ethan and Benedict, they rejoice ed in secret at the zeal of the two captains.
- 9. But, inafmuch as they defired to make o pe a covenant of peace with the king of the island nst of Britain, they made a decree that the spoil that was found in the hold, should be convey ed t t a

I

ip, ret 1 Nor ants

e v ouc

rov

eop

11 rov

vher y I

one

here

12 ove

d wh

ud an d with

Ethan

ith the

Etha

the va-

rejoic

tains.

he spoil

convey

d to a place of fafety, that it might be ready t a future day when called for.

10. And the heart of Benedict was lifted up, and he cast in his mind, how he should Tehova get possession of the whole province that lay en the Northward from the hold: (now the inhabiofe le ants of the land were called Canadians) and e wrote letters to the great Sandhedrim, ouching the matter; and the princes of the rovinces, even the great Sandhedrim of the eople harkened to the voice of Benedict.

11. Now Guy, who was governor of the made rovince, and fervant to the king of Britain, when he heard that the strong hold was taken. y Ethan and Benedict, he thought to have e great one against it and to have gotten possession hereof for the king his mafter.

12. But the men of war who were with the overnor were few in number, and he essayed o make perfuade the Canadians and the barbarine island not of the wilderness, to fight under the banners of the king of Britain, but he could not prevail.

^{*} Sir Guy Carleton. + Indians.

13. And when the Sanhedrim of the provinces were told that Guy the king's governor, was minded to go against the hold that Ethan and Benedics had taken, they were troubled in their minds;

14. And they said, Lo! if we suffer the governor to establish himself in the hold, the king of Britain will bring against us from the North borders, the barbarians of the wilderness and the Canadians, and we shall be environed round about by the armies of the king, and we shall of a certainty fall before the host of the king of Britain.

15. But let us quit ourselves like men, and let an army be sent Northward to oppose the king's governor, and let the captain of the host be commanded to speak comfortably to the Canadians; peradventure they will be a strength to the host of the people of the provinces, and fight under the banners of Columbia.

ool he

-

Oil

ent

d a

I

deli

he

vor

he

ppp

pref

I

kind the

he did

.

I

ld not

ULIN

e.ptoernor,

Ethan rubled

er the d, the om the vilder-

be enof the n, and ofe the

he Carength vinces, bia. ointed chief captains of the army that was ent to oppose the king's governor; and they ook their way towards the strong hold, and he host of the people of the provinces followed after them.

17. And when the host of the people had entered the borders of the province, Philip delivered an oration unto the inhabitants of the land, even to the Canadians; and the words that he spake were on this wise, that the people of the provinces were not come to oppress, but to deliver them from their oppressors.

18. And the natives shewed them no small kindness, they brought of the first fruits of the land to refresh the army of the people of the provinces, and many other such things did they do.

19. Now there was another strong hold

* General Philip Schuyler.

that was garrisoned by the soldiers of the king of Britain, and it was called St. John's after the superstition of that country; and they essayed to gain possession thereof.

- 20. The hold was very strong, and the chief captains of the host held a council together, and the greater part advised to depart thence to a certain island, called in the French tongue, The Isle aux Noix, to the South of the hold about ninety-six surlongs.
- whereof he could not go out before the hold as at other times; and he departed thence, and journeyed onwards until he came to the hold that Ethan and Benedict had taken; and he sojourned there for a season.
- 22. And Montgomery, the chief captain, returned back again to the hold, for it grieved him that he had left it, left the foldiers in the garrison should think that he had turned his back upon them through fear; and he cast a bank against the hold, and placed the de-

caí

ftre

gin of eng

wa kin

eig of

ed.

fen tak

ftil

we

ma

of the Aroying engines on the bank which he had cast up.

d the

toge

depart

rench

uth of reason

ne host

hence,

to the

; and

ain, re-

grieved

s in the ned his

e cast a

the de-

- 23. But he could not prevail, inasmuch as the black dust* which they put into their engines, began to fail. Now the dust was made of nitre and brimstone, and without it, the engines could do nothing.
- 24. Now there was yet another hold that was garrisoned by some of the soldiers of the king of Britain, and it was about forty and eight surlongs from the place where the host of the people of the provinces were encamped.
- 25. And Montgomery, the chief captain, fent a captain with a band of men to take possession thereof; but he abode there still.
- 26. And the captain, and the men who were sent with him, did as they were commanded; and they prevailed against the hold and took it, and found much spoil therein; and amongst the spoil there was found large quantities of the black dust for the destroying engines.

^{*} Gun-Powder. + Crown Point.

27. And the spoil and the captives were brought to the camp, and Montgomery, the chief captain, when he saw the black dust commanded that destroying engine the should be fet to work, and the noise thereo was like the noise of mighty thunders!

CHAP. VIII.

これはようのかのからし

St. John's taken-Col. Allen captured and sen to England-Montgomery Slain.

OW when it was told Guy, the king's again governor, that the garrison were in a great strait, he gathered together about eight hun him dred men, and he hastened to deliver the garrison from falling a prey to the host of Co lumbia.

2. And it was so, that as he was passing pr an vei

th

dr

me tio

kne bat del

cap all

was

cert his

the river, a certain captain, with three hundred men, fervants to the Sanhedrim of the provinces, lay in ambush, and they arose up, and fell upon the men who were with the governor, and drove them back again: and the men who lay in ambush, had their habitations in the mountains.

rein:

large

oying

were

y, the dust

ngine

hereo

nd sen

a great

of Co

passing

- 3. Now when the captain of the garrison knew that the governor had been foiled in battle, his spirit sunk within him, and he delivered up the hold to Montgomery, the chief captain, and the foldiers of the garrison were all made captives.
- 4. And it was about this time, that Ethan was fent with about four score men, to do a certain thing; and as he was returning, on his way to the camp, the governor came out king's against him;
- 5. And Ethan and the men who were with ht hun him, fought with the governor, but could the gar not prevail; and he was taken captive, with three fcore and eight persons; and there were flain of the men of Ethan, fifteen; and the refidue made their escape: and Ethan was fent bound to the island of Britain.

E 2

6. And it came to pass, that Montgomery, the chief captain of the host, journeyed onwards to a town,* wherein were fome foldiers, who were servants to the king of Britain.

Now when the captain of the foldiers was told that Montgomery, the chief captain, was coming against the town, he put his soldiers into the king's ships, which had cast an chor in the river: and the men who had fled into the ships, hastened down the river, hoping to escape that way.

8. But a captain, whose sur-name was Easton, and servant to the Sanhedrim of the peo ple, withstood the ships, and overcame them and took the people captives, and got much were fpoil out of the ships.

* Montreal.

nin vith nen

9 apt

vere nen

vilde fter t wa

IC

he heith een i

of pr

11 men follov hat

lave

pirit

9. And it came to pals, that George, chief aptain of all the armies of Columbia, being nindful of his brethren who were warring with the king's governor, and fearing left the nen who were with the captain, Montgomery, vere too few; he fent Benedict and a thousand nen with him to strengthen the host.

> 10. And Benedict took his way through the vilderness, and the thousand men followed fter him. Now the way was difficult to pals, t was a land of pits and fnares, the foot of he way-faring man had not trod therein, either were the flocks of the sons of men een in the way: it was a covert for the beafts of prey, and far from the dwellings of man!

11. And three hundred and forty of the men returned back again, and the refidue ollowed after Benedict: and it came to pass, hat the bread failed in their vessels, they much were famished with hunger, and their tongues lave to the roof of their mouths; yet the pirit of a man was in them, and it sustained mery, d on-

here

and

than

Bri-

fol-

ldiers ptain, is fel-

st an d fled oping

s Eaft. ne peo

them

them! they pressed forwards until they came to the inhabited parts of the province, and the natives ministered to their necessities.

man, on the wall of the city,* looked, and behold he saw a multitude of armed me coming out of the wilderness; and he criticaloud, and said, Lo! I see a company coming from the wilderness, and the banners of the great Sanhedrim are amongst them!

and Benedict, befieged the town round about and they cast a bank against it; and the planted the destroying engines on the ban that they had cast up; and they essayed batter the town, but could not prevail, for was built upon a rock.

14. And Montgomery, the chief captain being minded to take the town by force, for a messenger to the governor thereof, warnin him to deliver up the town with the garrison

* Quebec.

hat be fp

he v urne

16 livid

o pa ockhe re

he p

17. nour.

om the 18.

hey c

cam and es.

watch d, an

d me crie omin

of th

aptair about d the

e ban ayed l, for ce, fer warnin

hat the blood of the inhabitants might not e spilt.

- 15. But the governor hearkened not unto he voice of Montgomery, but shot at the mesenger from the wall, and the messenger reurned.
- 16. Then the chief captain, Montgomery, ivided the host into four bands, and he apointed a captain to each band, and it came o pass in the morning, about the time of the ock-crowing, the four bands moved towards he town; now it was the chief town of he province.
- 17. And, as the chief captain and his arnour-bearer* had paffed the first barrier, and ere about to enter the fecond, lo! a ball captain rom the destroying engines felled them both the earth.
- arrifor 18. And Benedict was wounded, hey carried him from the field of battle; but he men behaved valiantly; nevertheless they could not prevail against the governor and the men who were with him; and the governor took captive of the people of the province three hundred men, and the flain and wound ed were four score.

^{*} John M'Pherson.

19. And when the governor faw the chief captain fall to the earth, his foul was moved within him-his repentings were kindledhe took the bleeding warrior by the hand and the tear of humanity dropt from his eye lids !—he endeavored to raile him from the earth, but in vain!—the vital spirit was fled, and the shadows of the evening were stretch ed over him!

- 20. They laid his body upon the bierthey bore him to the tomb-to the house ap pointed for all the living !- He received the last office of love from Guy, the generous for hin w of Columbia!
- 21. The princes of the provinces will be wail the loss of their brother! and thy name O Guy! shall be had in everlasting remem brai thy ty!

wor

heir he f ngs

of th

ran tion

AN Colum

d D

nce

the brance! The scribes of Columbia shall record thy worth, and transmit thy virtues to posterty!

rnor

nce

und-

chief

noved

led-

hand.

is eye m the

s fled,

tretch-

bier-

ouse ap

ved the

will be

ny name

remem

22. The captives thou didst take with thy word, were fent to their dwellings in peace! heir wants were supplied by thy bounty, and he fick were relieved by thy care! The blefsngs of the poor came upon thee! and the heart of the captives leaped for joy!

CHAP. IX.

4464646

Transactions in Virginia during the Administration of Earl Dunmore

AND there was yet war in the land of columbia; for the armies of the king of Brirous for hin were encamped in the strong holds there-

> 2. And there was a certain governor, cald Dunmore; he had jurisdiction over a proace of the South, called Virginia, which hd

ery illi

rce

ord

bne

7.

le pr

nt le

Brit

ere v

ve b ftrife

8. No

by interpretation signifieth the state of a vin gin, and in honor to a queen of the island of Britain, whose name was Elizabeth, and the was never betrothed to any.

3. Now Dunmore, the governor, was given up to vain delusions and a reprobate mind; in that he manifested the fruits of wrath, en vy and many other hurtful lufts; and all who do fuch things are in a state of reprobation Moreover, he thought to rule the people with a rod of iron.

4. And, notwithstanding, his hands were weak, for he had no foldiers under him; yet he was defirous to do fomething to please the king his master, and gain a little honor to himself; for verily the man was ambitious of in

5. And he entered into a league with fom anballa mariners who belonged to the navy of Britain indered and he covenanted with them, that they should Jerusa help to take away the black dust out of the tween store houses of the province. nces.

6. Then, when the people of the province had notice thereof, they armed themselves nd fet a watch; and the governor waxed ery wroth, inafmuch as the people were not illing to come under the yoke: and being ceedingly mad against them, he spake bitter ords against them, yet the people cared for one of those things.

7. And it came to pals, that the people of e provinces were told that the governor had nt letters to the king's servants in the island Britain, concerning them, and that there ere words in the letters that ought not to we been there; words of fophistry, tending strife. And the people were grieved therein vitable interior is

8. Now Dunmore, the governor, walked sitious of in the ways of Guy; but in the ways of n fom anballat and Tobias, the Jews enemy, who Britain indered Nehemiah from building up the walls should Jerusalem, and he made the breach wider of the tween the king and the people of the pronces.

d the given

vii

ndof

, en 1 who ation.

nind;

eople

s were ; yet

fe the nor to

rovino nselve

9. Moreover he set up the banners of the king, his master, and stirred up the Ethiopians to rebel: now the Ethiopians were bond slaves to the people of the province.

not for thee, to break the bonds of the Ethiopians! was it ever known fince the days of our forefathers, that any man could bring clean thing out of an unclean? I trow not.

- when the people of the provinces are delivered from the oppressions of the king of the island of Britain, surely they will render to ever man justice and right?
- 12. For have not the princes of the provinces, even the great Sanhedrim of the people declared, that freedom is the birth-right of every man that cometh into the world, and that no prince, ruler nor governor, hath power to take it away?
 - 13. They will never forget the rock from when pit fr

of the
for v

14 owe

vill b y yol

> vill C nd li

nd a hief

cribe

of the whence they were hewn, nor the hole of the pit from whence they were dug: the words were of their mouths must not fall to the ground, for where the word of a prince is, there is ower.

14. Then will the goings forth of the rulers ays of se, as a morning without clouds, their ways ring will be established in peace! if they break evey yoke, and let the oppressed go free! Then vill Columbia be the praise of the whole earth, nd light and truth pervade the whole land!

15. And the rest of the acts of Dunmore, every and all that he did, and how he burned the hief city of the province with fire; are they ot written in the book of Ramsay the cribe?

there was great toy in the town.

the thirs seriesd.

rovin people ight of Ethi

e.

it wa

Ethi

not.

time

ivered

ifland

d, and

h pow

c from

CHAP. X.

The embarrassments of the King's Troops in Boston-They evacuate the town, and remove asmu to Halifax in Nova-Scotia.

NOW the hoft, of the king of Britain, la encamped in the town of Boston, in the province of the East: and the army of the people of the provinces, environed the town round about.

- 2. And the host within the town were in great strait; their bread was nigh spent, and their fuel began to fail: and the ships of the island of Britain had not arrived to minister to their necessities, and they were ready to perish, for it was winter.
- 3. Howbeit, they pulled down the houses, in the town, that were made of wood, and they kindled a fire therewith; then they gat and at last, the ships arrived, and there was great joy in the town.
 - 4. Now there were certain men in the holt of C defer The

MICHELL

town were

and he fo the C the R

enem

5.

6. door mies cogit

7. of Co begar

ous.

of Columbia, who were like the heath in the defert, they knew not whence good came. These men spake against the chief captain, inemous as funch as he did not force his way into the town where the army of the men of Britain were encamped.

1, lay

n the e in t

t, and

of the

, and

ey gat

, and

ne host

- 5. Nevertheless, he bore with these men, of the and answered them not again; he trode in town the footsteps of Fabius, who went out against the Carthagenians, and by his wisdom saved the Roman people from falling a prey to their enemies.
- 6. His wants were many, but he kept the inisted door of his lips, lest peradventure, the eneady to mies of Columbia should hear thereof: the cogitations of his heart were deep and ponderouses, ous.
 - 7. Now the destroying engines in the army of Columbia, were idle, for the black dustbegan to fail: but it came to pass, that the princes of the provinces, even the great Sanhedrim of the people, fent swift ships to the land of Ethiopia, and they bought the black dust of the merchants of Ethiopia.

F 2

8. And George, chief captain of the armies of Columbia, consulted with the principal men of the host, and spake unto them, saying, Shall we go up against the town, where the army of the king of Britain is encamped, or shall we forbear?

9. Now, when they had consulted together, they spake unto the chief captain, and answered him after this manner; saying, We think it not expedient for the host of the people of the provinces to go against the town; never theless, we think it advisable that the army occupy the high places* that look towards the river.

10. And it came to pass, that the chief captain ordered the men who had the charge of the destroying engines, to set them to work;

* Dorchester heights.

nd heir

he j

11 n th

f the he p aid, he p ing's

he ch

f the ared off or rive

umbi

eople

nd it was for that the engines discharged heir thunders upon the town.

11. And when the engines were at work, lo! he people of the provinces gat possession of he high places, and strengthened themselves n the top thereof, and it became a place of efence.

12. Now when the chief captain of the navy f the king of Britain, faw that the people of he provinces were encamped on the high laces, he was aftonished; and he sent to he chief captain of the host of Britain, and, aid, If thou fuffer the army of the people of he provinces to occupy the high places, the ing's ships will be in danger.

13. Then was the chief captain of the army f the king of Britain troubled; and he preared himself to go out and fight with the oft of the people of the provinces, and to arge of rive them from the high places. eople of the provinces, even the host of Coimbia, they also prepared for the battle.

San. the the lack

mies cipal fay.

where nped,

ether. fwerthink ple of never-

army wards

ef capwork; great storm; and the rains descended, and the sloods came and beat upon the host, and the men of Britain were discomsited.

15. And the fear of George, captain of a the armies of Columbia, fell upon them, even upon the chief captain, and the army of Britain; and they fled into the ships of the kin of Britain.

all the land of Columbia; the name of the one fect was whigs, and the name of the fect was tories.

17. And it came to pass, that the sect of the whigs, prevailed and grew stronger and stronger, and the sect of the tories grew weaker and weaker.

18. Now the tories were counted as the off fouring of all things; and they were fain to hide themselves in the clifts of the rocks, and in the thick forests of Columbia; and the soles of their feet found no rest, because their enemies; nevertheless, there were some worth not a for ft

Brita ome and the

he p

he kin to reted

f the vas H

ain of ntere y the worthy men amongst them, who followed not after filthy lucre, nor that which maketh for strife.

, and

and

of a eve

of Bri

e king

d over

of the other

of the

er and gre

theof

fain to

nd th

ause o

re fom

19. And when the army of the king of Britain was fleeing into the ships, there were ome of the fect of tories who fled with them, nd they left much of their stuff behind in the own, and it became a prey to the host of he people of the provinces.

20. And it was fo, that when the army of he king of Britain had gotten into the inips, hey fet fail for the country, called in the Lain tongue, Nova-Scotia, which being interreted, is New Scotland. And the ships aft anchor in the river, before the chief town the province, and the name of the town vas Halifax.

21. And it came to pass, that the chief capis, and ain of the host of the people of the provinces, ntered into the town* that had been occupied y the army of the king of Britain, and the people came out to do him honor: and the fame of George, the chief captain, went out into all lands!

Bofton.

one of the Lec. IX to Per XI. out and lo am

Comme into the links, there

Fresh troops are sent by Congress to Canada—I a large force arrives from Great Britain—The war in that province assumes a new face.

of the provinces, even the great Sanhedrin of the people, being mindful of Benedict and the men who were with him, and fearing left peradventure, they would fall into the hands of Guy, the king's governor;

- 2. That they fent aband of men, to strengthen the host that was with Benedict; and sent large money to the soldiers: and the number of the men that were sent, was three thousand; and they were all valiant men.
 - 3. Now it happened, about that time, that cer eafe, nafm

orce

ato t

le ca ifeafe

nclea he lej

wo th

5. ounfe

fion

ne pe

f one ife m

the

out

110 atin

900 la-l

tain-

face.

- 004

edrim

Et and 341

ength.

nd fent

umber

thou-

ie, that

iers thould be featuate the province, to certain woman, who had a loathsome difease,* and whose uncleanness was visible, nasmuch as her skin was spotted by the mere orce thereof.

4. She went out of the town, and came nto the camp of the people of the provines, and it was fo, that when any of the peole came near unto the woman, then the isease fastened upon them, and they became nclean; and the number of them who had he leproly of uncleannels, were more than wo thousand men.

- 5. And when tidings came to the chief punsellor of Britain, that Guy, the king's ng left overnor, was shut up in the town, and that hands he people of the provinces had gotten pofflion of the strong holds, he was greatly loved, and remained aftonished for the space f one hour. to. And the newsmon, and
 - 6. And after he had confulted with the ife men of the king, he advised that more foldiers should be fent into the province, to the kings governor, that they might drive out from the province, the hoft of Columbia, and recover the strong holds.

Small Pox.

- 7. Furthermore, the chief counsellor was minded to fend a mighty army into the province, that they might be ready to unite with William, the chief captain, to invade the whole land of Columbia.
- 8. Now, when the captains of the host of Columbia, who were in the king's province, heard of these things, they consulted together, and the greater part of the men of war advised to depart thence.
- 9. And it was fo, that when Guy, the governor, knew of a certainty, that the army, of the people of the provinces, were about no for to depart, he gathered together an army,
- 10. And the governor, and the host of the kingdom of Britain, purfued after the army of the people of the provinces, and lo! when he came to the camp, he found no man there, fave hafte fome

impl

11 hoft. all f and,

of: een t

he pr vere

12.

nindec nto a

13. ach ba

ame w me so

14/19

to ive

ım-

was

pro-

with hole

hoft

pro-

ulted

e go-

army,

army

when

there,

fave a few fick folk, for they had made all haste to depart, and had left behind them fome of the destroying engines and other implements for war for bas come reguestem

11. And it came to pass, that a mighty oft, from the island of Britain, came in the all ships of the king, and they gat safe to and, and the governor was informed theref. Now the number of the men was thireen thousand. for it was intended that they

12. And when the army of the people of he provinces had notice of thefe things, they en of vere discomfited i nevertheles, they were ninded to take a strong hold that was night nto a place called the Three Rivers.

13. And the chief captain divided the host about to four bands, and appointed a captain to Y ... ich band, and the chief captain, whose of the ame was Thomson,* was told that there were me foldiers of the king of Britain, encamp-

* General Thomson.

ed about twenty-four furlongs from that place

14. And it came to pass, as they were on their way to go against the men, another messenger came, and told the chief captain, that it was not a true report that he had heard, for there were no foldiers encamped as had all thies of the king, and they been faid.

15. Then the chief captain turned tog against the hold, but the night was far spent, for it was intended that they should get into the hold at anawares, while the foldiers were yet heavy with fleep. And it came to pass, that the chief captain went to and fro in the wil derness, and lost his way, and the fun arose

16. And when Thomson, the chief captain could not be found, Arthur* went out before the hoft, and became chief captain. And e ef when he faw the army of Britain was coming out against him, he gave command that the sorrel host of the people of the provinces should de people part thence, lest peradventure, the servant of def

* General St. Clair.

f tl our

17 hey ain

es w o a ong 18

eft t ver vere

ole c urn.

19. herec o a

f the king of Britain, should environ them ound about:

lace

re on

other

ptain,

eard,

is had

ilst

to go

spent,

s were

ne wil

arofe

aptain

- 17. And they fled by the fame way that hey had taken: and when the men of Briain faw the way that the people of the provines were returning, they haftened to the river, o a certain point of land, called in the French ongue, Du lac.
- 18. Now the people of the provinces had et into eft their boats at the point, when they passed ver the river, and the foldiers of the king is, that were minded to get the boats from the peole of the provinces, and prevent their reurn.
- 19. But a certain captain, who had charge before hereof, when he faw the men of Britain, And he escaped with the boats down the river, coming o a place called in the vernacular tongue, hat the sorrel: now this place was occupied by the fuld de people of the provinces, and it was a place Servant of defence.
 - 20. And it came to pass, as Arthur was going before the host of Columbia, he gata wound in his foot; and he was maimed so that he could not hold on his way, nor go out before the host as at other times.

21. Now the men of the host, loved Arthur, and would fain have borne him on their shoulders, but he forbade them, and encouraged them to hold on their way.

22. And Arthur fat down under the thick branches of a tree; and there were certain other men with him, who were so weary, that they were fain to abide with him.

23. And when they had rested themselves, and were refreshed, they arose up and departed thence, lest peradventure, they might sall into the hands of the men of Britain; and it was in the night when they departed from that place.

24. Then they journeyed onwards: howbeit, they were faint, for they had taken no food for two days and two nights. And on the morning of the third day, some of the nhal nd i de o

25 had few aker

rince

The (

was from

migh low: gata

red fo

or go

ribur.

ould.

raged

SUSID

thick

ertain

weary,

felves,

nd de-

might

ritain;

parted

how-

cen no

and on

of the

nhabitants ministered to their necessities:

nd they held on their way until they came the strong hold, where the host of the peole of the provinces had gotten before them, and they rejoiced together.

25. And the chief captain, Thomson, who had lost his way in the wilderness, and also sew men who had followed after him, were aken captives at a certain house in the province, to which they had sled for refuge.

CHAP. XII.

The Canadians complain of the conduct of the army
—The naval engagement on Lake Champlain.

AND the army that followed after Guy, was strengthened by the soldiers who came from the island of Britain, and it became a mighty host; and they made all speed to sollow after the people of the provinces.

G 2

thing

ens,

6.

our fl

ind o

off fre

ave

7.

Colum

led f

8.

not

ituri

ill c pis th

9.

pur

e ifla

rdy

ft in

r ow

the

bands; for he purposed in his heart to environ the army of Columbia round about; bu John,* having notice thereof, decamped from that place, and escaped to the strong hold that Ethan and Benedict had taken.

of the people of the provinces were on their way to the hold, the inhabitants of the land even the Canadians, came out to exposulate with the people, and said unto them.

4. Hear now, ye fons of Columbia, and attend to the words of our mouths! Suffer us a little, that we may speak; that we may make known to you the bitterness of our fouls.

5. What thing is this now that ye are doing! will ye leave us a prey to our enemies! For lo! when you were hungry, we fed you; and when you were thirsty, we gave you drink! and shall we not be judged for these things by Guy? will not he count us as aliens, and as enemies to the king of Britain?

^{*} General Sullivan.

- 6. So we shall be taken in an evil net, and our slocks and our herds will become a prey, and our wives and our little ones will be cut off from the fruits of the earth! and we shall are none inheritance amongst our brethren.
 - 7. And when the captains of the host of columbia, heard these things, thy were trouled for the inhabitants of the land.
 - 8. But they spake and said unto them, It not for man to know the hidden things of turity, nor for the sons of men to tell what all come to pass! if it had been so, then his thing would not have happened unto us.
 - pursuing after us with a mighty host from e island of Britain, and that we are in jeoardy every hour? nevertheless, if you will stin your lots with us, and go with us to brown borders, then ye shall eat the good the land, and verily ye shall be free.

e holl their

hre

envi

bu

npel

rong

.22

land, tulan

, and ffer us e may

ire do

f) our

e mies?
d you;

ve you or these the Canadians, furthermore answered, and faid, It seemeth not good unto us to harken unto you in this matter; for our wives and our children are too tender to bear the journey: and moreover, is this not the land of our nativity, and do we not dwell among our own people? nay verily, but we will stay here, and lo! if we perish, we perish!

11. And the captains of the host of Columbia, seeing that they could not prevail they ceased importuning the people, and jurneyed on their way, and Guy, and the hold of the men of Britain, sollowed hard after them; and they were at their wits end. No vertheless, they escaped to the hold called Crown-Point, where they sojourned for time.

12. Now John, was chief captain of the host of the people of the provinces, in the quarter; and as Guy was pursuing after thost, it came to pass, that at any time, who the soldiers of the king of Britain, came ni ou

rea r y

ins omr

ifed nat

iled

14.

ing o

the

in, and e of the

nto John, he turned himself about and ought with them, and stayed them from reaking in upon the host; and the govern-r was vexed, inasmuch as he had purposed his heart to make them all captives.

and

rken

and jour.

nd of

lgaor

ill stay

of Co

prevail

nd ju ne hol d afte

d. Ne

ld calle

d for

to Tim

n of the s, in th

after t

ne, wh

came ni

ins and the chief men in the host, and they ommuned together, and the greater part adifed to depart thence to the strong hold, and Ethan and Benedict had taken.

14. Now it forely grieved the people of the provinces, that the host of Columbia iled to establish themselves in the province, as they feared that the army of the ing of Britain would annoy the other pronces from thence.

the provinces, even the great Sanhedrim the people, sent Horatio, † a chief capin, and twelve thousand men of the people of the provinces followed after him; and they journeyed towards the strong bold, to strengthen their brethren.

^{*} Ticonderoga. + General Gates.

16. Now the hold was nigh unto a great lake,* and they built ships on the borden thereof: and when they were assoat on the waters, they put valiant men into the ships, and the destroying engines were put therein, and Benedict was made chief captain thereof.

17. And Benedict was minded to take the ships to a certain rock† that was on the borders of the lake: and he spread his sails to the wind, and the ships moved upon the face of the waters: and the men of war who were with him, were impatient for the battle.

18. Now, when Guy was told that the people of the provinces had built ships, and armed them with the destroying engines. He, also in like manner, armed some of the ships of the king of Britain. And a man whose surname was Pringle, was made chief captain.

19. And when all things were in readiness.

* Champlain + The Split Rock.

hey dict vere

Bene.

f the 20 eard

21. avy aptai

irste

estro asted crific

enedi

22.

ight, f the

hief

hey set sail; and went out to look for Bendict. Now the ships of the king of Britain vere stronger than the ships that were with Benedict; and moreover, the number of them was greater.

20. And it came to pass, when the ships f the king of Britain were drawing nigh unter the navy of Benedict, that the men of war touted, and the shouting of the warriors was eard afar off.

21. And Benedict, the chief captain of the avy of Columbia, and Pringle, the chief aptain of the ships of the king of Britain, insted for the battle, and the roaring of the estroying engines was heard, and the battle asted until the time of the offering the evening crisice: and two of the ships that were with senedict, fell a prey unto the men of Britain.

ight, that Benedict escaped with the remnant f the ships: and when the sun arose, the hief captain of the ships of the king of Bri-

l, to

great ordens n the ships, erein, nereof.

ke the

fails to he face no were tle.

he peod I armed Ie, alfo Ships of

ose sur

eadiness

Benedict; and lot he looked, and beho the ships were departed from thence.

23. Then the mariners hoisted up the a chors of the ships, and loosened the sails the wind, and made all speed to pursue as Benedici and the men who were with him the ships.

24. And when the wind sprang up, the ship moved swiftly upon the face of the water and overtook Benedict in the ships. Never the less, some of those who were the foremal escaped to the hold that Ethan and Benedict had taken.

of the ships could not escape from falling the men of Britain, he cast out sear, and propared to sight with Pringle, the captain of the ships, if peradventure he could by any mean get his men out of the ships to land.

nued for the space of two hours, and Ben

iel vere f tl

afe t

27 hou he k

28 rim e ca

f the nem

he fi

vas fj 29

aptai nd tl

ain to

e will list ran the ships to the land, and the ships vere as walls and bulwarks against the balls f the destroying engines, and the men gat afe to land.

- 27. And Benedict fearing, left the ships hould fall into the hands of the fervants of he king of Britain, he burned them with fire.
- 28. Now the banner of the great Sanherim was in the ship that Benedict was in; and e cast in his mind that he should get a blot fthe banner should fall into the hands of the nemy, therefore he tarried in the ship until Benedich he fire was kindled; and Benedict gat great mor amongst the armed men, and his fame vas spread afar off.
- 29. Thus ended the battle between the two and presaptains; and the winter was nigh at hand, ain of the nd the foldiers of the king of Britain were ny mea ain to depart into their winter habitations.

nd cont ind Ben

behol

1 373

the a

fails

e aft

him

n shi

he shi

water

Neve

remo

hed

remna

alling

CHAP: XIII.

The Parliament of Great Britain hire solding from Germany, for the purpose of subjugating the Colonies—Unsuccessful expedition against South Carolina—Commodore Parker wounded

Now the chief counsellor of Britain was still wroth with the people of the province, and he counselled the king of Britain to hir soldiers of the German princes, whose dominions were on the borders of the river, that ancient river, the river Rhine.

- 2. And the king hearkened to the words of the chief counsellor notwithstanding, there were certain chief men in the council who spake against the thing, yet they could not prevail, and the wisdom of their words was set at naught, and their counsel was as water spilt upon a rock.
- 3. And the king sent to the princes, and covenanted with them for sixteen thousand men, to strengthen the host that was warring with t

or a should

ices so hi

4. Ind w

rs ca heir i

15.12

ingd when hould he k ings,

rething he shi he ses

6. 2 ounc

he ki

hat to

with the people of the provinces, in the land

4. They were a people of a strange language, and went against the people of the provinces a the simplicity of their hearts, for their leaders caused them to err, and spread a net for heir feet.

5. And moreover, the great council of the ingdom made a decree, That at any time, then the mariners of the ships of Columbia hould be taken captives by the servants of he king, that they should be put into the ings ships, and be made to fight against their rethren, the people of the provinces; and he ships of Columbia should be for a speil to he servants of the king.

6. And furthermore, it was decreed in the ouncil, That the people of the provinces will be treated as enemies, and aliens to be kingdom of Britain.

7. Now it came to pals, about this time, hat two captains of Britain went out against nded.

Was

dien

atim

rainA

nces, hire omi-

that

there who

d not

s was

and

ufand arring

hear

blash

'n.

were

to fo

pace

d in nen.

he c inde

12.

vere

aptai

old,

alled

at a &

13.

ips

as ye

own

a strong hold that was in a province of the South; and the name of the first was Peters and the name of the other captain was Henry, now Peter was a fea-captain, and he had a nam of ships; and Henry was a chief captain the host of the men of Britain.

8. And the name of the captain of the me of war, that were in the strong hold w Moultrie; he was a valiant man, and the me who were in the hold with the captain, we all valiant men.

9. And it came to pass, that when the tw captains, Peter and Henry, came against the hold; it was agreed between them, the Henry should take the soldiers that were us der him, and get to a certain island nigh un to the hold, that he might get into the hold on the other fide.

o. And the destroying engines began t utter their thunders, and the battle waxe hot, and the shouting of the warriors was amag

^{*} Sir Peter Parker. † Sir Henry Clinton.

fth

eter,

nry,

nav

in (

ld wa

he hol

linten.

heard from afar, and there was a terrible plashing of arms!

11. And Henry, when he faw that there vere valiant men in the hold, he forbore to o forth: and the battle continued for the pace of ten hours, and the slain and wounde me din the ships were more than two hundred nen. And it came to pass that a ball from e me he destroying engines smote Peter on the wet inder parts, and maimed him.

12. And the flain and wounded in the hold, he two were one fcore and twelve persons. And the inft to aptain of the men of war who were in the n, the old, gat great honor, and the fortress* was ere malled by his name, to commemorate his valiigh un acts.

13. And the mariners that were in the ips were commanded by Peter, while it began to as yet night, to slip the cables, and escape waxe own the river; for the ships were much ors wamaged by the destroying engines.

Fort Moultrie.

14. And when Henry had put his foldier king into the ships, they failed from thence, an Geri escaped to the haven where the navy of the tore king of Britain was anchored.

CHAP. XIV.

Sir William Howe leaves Halifax, and is for followed by his brother, admiral lord How with a land force-Independence is declared The battle on Long-Island.

ND it came to pass, about this tim that William, the chief captain of all the mies of the king of Britain, put his men in the ships and departed from the country Nova-Scotia, for he was weary with tarry at that place;

2. And he came to a certain haven, call in the vernacular tongue Sandy Hook. it came to pass, that his brother (who was chief captain in the navy of the king of B tain) followed after him with the ships of 3.

flan with wo

ip th he k

4. tertai o me vere

ron f fan

5. even t of a hired

done a kingdo

he pr

oldier sing: now the foldiers that were hired of the e, an German princes were in the ships, and a vast of the tore of all the implements for war.

3. And they cast anchor nigh unto a certain sland,* and the inhabitants thereof rejoiced with seeming great joy: and there was about we hundred men on the island, who gave up their names to fight under the banners of he king of Britain.

is fa

How

lared-

is time

the

nen in intry

tarry

, call

. Al

no was

of B

ps of th

- 4. And the governor of that province and certain men with him, went in an armed ship to meet William, the chief captain, and they were comforted with each other; "For as ron sharpeneth iron, so doth the countenance of a man his friend."
- 5. And when the princes of the provinces, even the great Sanhedrim of the people, knew of a certainty that the king of Britain had hired strangers to come against the people of the provinces, and were told what had been done against them in the great council of the kingdom;

* Staten Island.

6. Then they confulted together concer ing all things that appertained to the provin es, and they made a decree, * and it was feat with the fignets of the princes of the province

7. And the writing of the decree was fore abroad into all lands; and when the hoft Columbia heard thereof, they shouted wit a great fhout.

8. And it was written therein, That the people of the provinces should no more serv the king of Britain; but they should be a po culiar people unto themseves, and that the law-givers should be from amongst their ow people. And the bonds betwixt the king an the people were broken, fo the people of the provinces revolted that day, and ferved the king of Britain no more.

9. Now the number of the foldiers of the king of Britain, who were warring with the people of the provinces, were fifty and five and thousand fighting men, prepared with all the instruments for war.

* Declaration of Independence.

he k f lan ude o he pe John. and f the 10.

II. ccup he ki here

anie

alled

12. f the y,† a vas n

he p

13.

rcen

ovin

feat

ince

fpre

oft

l wit

hat th

e serv e a po

t the ir ow

ng an

e of th

of the

with the

all the

10. And it came to pass, that the host of he king of Britain landed on a certain neck fland, called Long-Island, after the similiude of the form thereof. Now a captain of he people of the provinces whose name was John.* was encamped on the island, and a and of men were with him; and the name f the place were they were encamped was alled Flat-Bush, and it was a place of defence.

11. Moreover, the people of the provinces ccupied the high places, and the army of he king of Britain fought to gain possession hereof, and they were divided into three comanies.

12. And while it was yet night, the host red the f the king of Britain went forth; and Heny,† a chief captain of the men of Britain, vas minded to get round the mountain where he people of the provinces were encamped, ad five and come upon them unawares.

13. And as they were on their way, lo!

^{*} General Sullivan. + Sir Henry Clinton.

leot

nd t

vas I

he n

17.

en l

me t

dith

evil

ned t

to-&

18. T

Brita

tle w e con

the

tive,

due n

9. A1

e abo

o. No

ies of fome of the chief men of the army of Columbia were taken captive; and at the dawning of the day, Henry gat up to the high place, and the people fled before the army of the men of Britain.

and who fought under the banners of the great Sanhedrim, came up to the help of the people, and fifteen hundred men followed after him.

furlongs from the main camp of the people of the provinces; and this lord and the fifteen hundred men that were with him, gat upon the hill; and the men of Britain were encamped opposite to the hill.

the Hessians, who were the soldiers that the king of Britain had hired of the German princes; and also the soldiers of the king of Britain, moved towards the host of the peo

^{*} Lord Sterling.

le of the provinces and flouted for the battle: nd the name of the captain over the Hessians vas De Heister; and Grant was captain over he men of Britain.

17. And the battle waxed hot, and the en behaved themselves valiantly; but it me to pass, that Henry came with an army, id the people of the provinces were taken in wevilnet; for the armies of the king envined them round about, and they were chafto & fro as a patridge upon the mountains.

18. Howbeit, they fought with the men Britain for the space of fix hours, and the tle was before and behind, and it was a e conflict; and the number of the flain the wounded, and those who were taken tive, exceeded one thousand men: and the that the due made their escape:

> 9. And the flain of the men of Britain, e about four hundred and fifty persons.

> o. Now George, the chief captain of all the ies of Columbia, while the people of the ord* of the of the um-

ning

ace.

the

exteen

lowel

people fifteen

t upon ncamp

ne day

German king the peo provinces were warring with the host of Britain, passed over to the island, and the residue of the host followed after him.

21. And after he had gathered the host to gether, he put his army in array and desired the battle, for he was encamped in a strong place; but William, the chief captain of the host of Britain, knowing that George was a valiant man, and prudent in all matters relating to the war, he declined to go forth.

a bank for a place of defence, and to annot the people of the provinces who were occupied in the strong hold.

23. And George perceiving that the chic captain of the host of Britain behaved himse wisely; then he called a council of his chic men, and when they had consulted togethe the greater part of the council advised the the army of the people of the provinces should depart from off the island.

24. And when it was night, the hoft mo

to the n th houg Britai loor

erady nd pu

25. cople cried ind fr

als:

26. ght the id after

e other

27. H

to the boats that were prepared to carry them over the water. Now while the people were noving towards the river, the foldiers cast in a their minds what this should mean, and hought they were going against the host of Britain. For the chief captains had kept the cor of their lips concerning this thing, lest eradventure the enemy should hear thereof and pursue after them.

25. And it came to pass, that while the cople of the provinces were waiting to be tried over the river, lo! the North East ind sprang up, so that the boats could not als:

26. But about the eleventh hour of the ght the wind ceased, and there was a calm; id afterward the South wind arose, and en the people passed over, and gat safe to cother side.

27. Howbeit, the dawning of the day ap-

3ri

due

A to fired

rong

of the

was a s rela

h. .

cast w anno

e occu

he chie

1 himse

his chi

togethe

rifed th

es shou

peared before all the people had paffed over And about the fixth hour, there was a thick milt over the whole island, that hid the people of the provinces from their enemies. An there was a great deliverance wrought the day.

28. And Thomas, a chief captain, and one of the princes of the provinces, was it provin the rear guard of the host when they passe thief the river; and he brought the men wherain, were with him fafe to land.

29. And when the people of the province had all gotten safe over to the other side, th milt cleared away. And the host of Brain rere o were aftonished out of measure, when the he kin faw that the people of the provinces were fle and app

General Mifflin.

The c the and

No

aptive o the

2. 1

es, to ure, c

66 rim, t

alt abou

e fwoi

CHAP. XV.

The commissioners declare their power for settling the disputes subsisting between Great Britain and the Colonies.

NOW when the host of the people of the was it provinces had gotten fafe over the river, the passe thief captain of the navy of the king of Brin wh ain, deputed John, whom he had taken aptive on the island, to go with a message o the great Sanhedrim.

2. And the words that he put in his mouth, Brainvere on this wife: "That, inasmuch, as en the he king of Britain, in his princely wisdom, ere floward appointed him and his brother his depues, to communicate his royal will and pleaure, concerning the people of the provinces.

> 3. "It therefore, behoveth the Sanherim, to fend some of their wise men to conalt about the affairs of the provinces, before e sword of his wrath is unsheathed."

1, and

thick

eople

An

at tha

ovine de, th

[·] General Sullivan.

- 4. Then John took his way to the Sande drim, and rehearfed all those words in the ears of the princes of the provinces.
- 5. And after three days, the great Sanhe drim fent an answer by John unto the king's deputy; fignifying unto him, that they would do as he defired.
- 6. And at a convenient time, they fent three of the princes of the provinces: namely Benjamin, John and Edward; * who went forth to commune with the king's deputy; and they went over to a certain island, and the deputy communed with them there.
- 7. Now the princes of the provinces, were swift to hear, and flow to speak; and when any words fell from the mouth of the chief captain, they treasured them up in their minds, that they might make a true report thereof, to the great Sanhedrim.
 - 8. And it came to pass, that when the ression
 - * Dr. Franklin, John Adams and Edward Rutledge

hief one epar

nd re uty,

9. rim i ot ex oice

ath : nings uire.

10. ere n terpr

11. ill ob nings,

yal f all be

ide. the nhe-

ng's ould

fent ame-

who s de

fland, nere.

inces, ; and

of the n their report

Rutledge

hief captain, even the king's deputy had one speaking; the princes of the provinces eparted, and returned to their own place; nd reported all the words of the king's deuty, in the ears of all the people.

9. And the deputies of the great Sanherim moreover spake, and said, We think it ot expedient at this time, to hearken to the oice of the king's deputy; inafmuch, as he ath no power nor authority to do those nings which the people of the provinces reuire.

10. For verily, he fpake words which ere not convenient to be heard; and the terpretation thereof is on this wife:

11. That if the people of the provinces, ill obey the king's commandments in all lings, then they shall be received into las yal favor; and the sceptre of his mercy all be extended towards them: their transen the ressions shall be wiped from his remembrance forever! and the iniquity of their rebellion shall not rife up against them!

12. Now, although the princes of the provinces expected nothing from the commi nication with the king's deputy; neverthe less, for the fake of some weak brethre they conferred thereto. "Then I faid i my heart, Surely they that expect nothing shall never be disappointed."

13. And the war raged with great violend in the land of Columbia; and many house in the borders thereof were left desolate great and fair, without an inhabitant; the fields were unoccupied, and the flocks an the herds were cut off from their pasture!

14. The widows and the fatherless we multiplied! and the fword devoured the hings young men! it was a day of deep distres of hun fear and difmay covered the faces of the hund Ad bandmen! and the joy of harvest was tun ed into mourning!

-15 no m noth

ooke whon

hall

16. hat h ne is

fell by he wa of de

17. treets

ejoice 18.

19. hroug ellion

f the

mmu

erthe

thren

aid i

thing

ioleno

houle

esolate

nt; th

ure!

is wer

vas tun

15. Young children asked for bread, and no man break it unto them—they faid to their nothers, When will our father return-when hall we see the face of our father?—They ooked through the lattice—they faw not him whom their fouls defired!

16. Alas! he will never return!—the eye hat hath feen him shall fee him no more!he is gone down to the stones of the pit —he fell by the hand of the enemy—the fword of he warrior pierced him through—the forrows f death encompassed him round about!

17. Tell it not in Lud! publish it not in the ks an dreets thereof, lest the daughters of Albion ejoice! lest the daughters of Britain triumph!

18. Let not thy foul be cast down for these red things, O man! To die is the common lot distress of humanity, the great birth-right of the sons the hu of Adam!

> 19. Therefore, if while thou art struggling brough the ocean of this world, rough ftorms and contrary blafts alarm thy fears, yet remember the voyage is hort, and the danger will foon be over!

20. And, although the clouds may gather blackness, and thou mayest be envelloped in the thick mists of confusion; yet be assured, that if thy feet keep in the high way of virtue, brighter scenes will yet cheer thy fight, and more serene prospects will delight, and animate thy loul.

21. And is it not written in the book of Solomon, nearly on this wife? That the path of the just man, like the luminous orb which enlighteneth our hemisphere, shines with increating refulgency, fplendor and brightness, until it arrive to the meridian altitude of a ing of glorious perfect day!

be a

Ton Wa.

f the

oft c reed,

ing o

nat th

lould 2. 1

lves i

nce,

3. 1 nd twe orth c

ained

oft oc

CHAP. XVI.

t te-

r will

ather

ed in ured,

irtue,

and

d ani-

ok of

e path

which

ith in-

The American officers conclude to evacuate New-York-The battle at the White-Plains-Fort Washington taken.

NOW the host encamped in the chief city f the province; and the chief men of the oft confulted together; and the council dereed, That if peradventure the army of the ing of Britain, should come against the city, at the host of the people of the provinces ould depart thence, to another place.

- 2. Nevertheless, they strengthened themlves in the town; and cast up places of deatness, since, that they might annoy the army of the e of a sing of Britain from thence.
 - 3. Now the city was built upon an island, nd twelve thousand men encamped on the orth of the island, and four thousand reained in the city, and the residue of the off occupied the intermediate space.

New York.

4. And William, chief captain of the hol of Britain, having gotten all things in readi nefs, he prepared to take the city: and lo when he had gotten about three fcore nie to land, some of the people of the province who were encamped behind a bank that the had cast up, were afraid, and fled before the men of Britain.

- g. And George, the chief captain, wa forely grieved when he saw that the people fled before their enemies; inafmuch, as the men of Britain would triumph: and he fail within himself, Lo! now we shall be att proach and a bye word amongst all nations!
- 6. But it came to pass, on the next day that the men who had fled before the men of Britain, being smitten in their own mind of the with shame, came and offered themselves to vas a go forth against the army of Britain.
- 7. And it came to pass, that some of the he pe army of Britain came out against the met of the who had offered themselves, and the captain

fthe eflie eople

Chiru 8.

ntly, attle ain,

voun heir

rem

9. 1 en in herec hat

urne

10.

hot

readi.

id lo

nien

vince

t they ore the 15 173

as the

he faid

e a te

tions!

et day

the men of Britain who came out, was eflie; and the names of the captains of the eople who had offered themselves, were knowlton and Leitch.

- 8. And the men behaved themselves valintly, and drove the enemy from the field of attle: notwithstanding, Knowlton, the capain, was flain, and the other captain was younded; and the men gat great honor, and people heir transgressions were blotted out forever, rom the remembrance of the chief captain.
- 9. Now when the army of Britain had goten into the city, and had taken possession hereof; it came to pass, after a few days, hat a fire was kindled in the city, which men of burned with great violence: and the number mind of the houses that were consumed by the fire, elves to vas about one thousand,
- 10. And it was fo, that after the host of of the he people of the provinces had departed out ne met of the city; they journeyed forwards, and captair pitched their camp in the North end of the host of the people of the provinces round about; and he sent a large company, who took their way through a certain place called Hell-Gate; and they landed on Frogs-Neck

tain who had revolted from the king of Bitain, returned from the province of the South after he had been warring with Peter and Henry, and the sur-name of the captain was Lee; he was a mighty man of valor, and we skilled in war.

13. Now the chief men of the host of the people of the provinces communed together; and the greater part of the council was for abiding on the island, but the captain who had revolted from the king of Britain, thought it not prudent to abide there.

14. He had the tongue of the learned, and e dil nd th vifdor he ch

15. land rovin

nouth

f the hat it out th

heret

16. he ho nd as

nany he pr wall

ing d

* For † Gen of th

as th

roun

Wh

calle

Neck

ef can

of Br

South

er and

in wa

nd well

of the

ether;

was for ho had

ughtil

d, and

e disputed with the captains of the host, not the words that he spake, were words of risdom that could not be gainsayed; and he chief men hearkened to the words of his nouth.

15. Now there was a strong hold* on the land that was occupied by the people of the rovinces; and it was called after the name of the chief captain; and Nathaniel† advised that it should be kept for a place of defence; but the other captain to was not confenting thereto.

16. And it came to pass after six days, that he host of Britain departed from Frogs-Neck, and as they were journeying on their way, nany of them were slain by the people sof he provinces, who shot at them from behind wall.

17. And the residue of the army of the king of Britain also moved forwards, about ^{*} Fort Washington.

[†] General Greene. ‡ General Lee, § Lee's division.

fixteen furlongs to the North of a certain place, called New-Rochdale, and took highway towards the White-Plains.

18. Then George, the chief captain of host of the people of the provinces, put the army into array, and the host of Columb extended from a certain place called in the w nacular tongue East-Chester, nigh unto White Plains. hieraring in

19. And it came to pass, that some of host of the king of Britain, and some of the people of the provinces, joined battle, a many of the people fell down flain that day and it was fo, that while the men of w were fighting, the people of the province moved their stores, and all their stuff from the field of battle.

20. And the chief captain of the people the provinces, being well skilled in all matter me a relating to war; placed the host of Column first bia in such a manner, as shewed that he w worthy of being chief Captain, and he de fed t hoft ed hi

21. rovi ut c

> nto rong

ain,† ain.

22. rovin nief c e ch ent a e isla hting

e chie 23.

* Nor

rtai

k th

ofth

at th

umbi

he ve

ato th

e of th

at day

of w

rovina

from

d he de

ted the battle; but William, captain of the host of Britain delayed to go forth, and turnd his back upon the people of the provinces.

- 21. Then the army of the people of the provinces passed over the river* that cometh out of the North country; and they came nto the province of Jersey, nigh unto a rong hold, called after the name of the capain,† who had revolted from the king of Briain.
- 22. Now after the host of the people of the e of the rovinces had left the island, on which the tle, a hief city of the province was built; William, e chief captain of the armies of Britain, ent against the strong hold, that was on e island: now there were three thousand thing men in the hold; and the name of e chief captain in the hold was Magaw.
- people 23. And the army of the king of Britain I matte me against the hold, in four companies, f Colume first company came to the North of the

at he W * North River + Fort Lee + Fort Washington

hold, and they were foldiers who were hired of the German princes, and their chief cap tain was named Kniphausen; and another company came up against the East side thereof, and the name of the captain was Mathews, and he was helped by a certain Lord* of the realm of Britain.

24. And the third company had a captain whose name was Sterling; and Piercy, who was also a lord of Britain was captain of the fourth company. Now as the first company was going against the hold, some of the peo ple of the province were in a thick forest, an as the foldiers were on their way to the hold they were shot at by the people who were the forest, and they were fore galled there by.

25. Notwithstanding the army of the kin of Britain pressed upon the garrison on eve side, and the people that were in the ho was were hard befet; and after communing to

* Cornwallis.

he nen 20

her

WO lain

bou

ort Le litia ingto

ANI Brita

arrison with:

2. An

ired

cap.

ther

reof,

hews.

t the

aptain

, who

of the

mpan

he peo

ft, and

ne hold

werei

d there

the kin

on eve ning tog

her for some time the hold was given up to he servants of the king of Britain. And the nen of the garrison were all made captives. 26. And the number of the captives was wo thousand and seven hundred; and the ain and wounded of the men of Britain were bout twelve hundred persons.

CHAP. XVII.

ort Lee evacuated by the Americans -The Militia desert in great numbers-General Washington retreats through the Jerseys.

AND it came to pass, that after the host Britain had taken the strong hold with the arrison thereof, they were like men refreshwith new wine.

2. And a Lord* of the kingdom of Britain the ho ho was a chief captain in the host, he was also governor of the tower of Lud, and havast possessions in the island of Britain; havent forth against another strong hold* the was in the border of the province of Jersey

* Cornwallis.

K 2

- 3. Now the men who were in the hole when they were told, that the governor the tower of Lud was coming against the they presently departed, and moved to another place. And they left all the destroys engines that were therein, for a spoil to host of Britain; for verily they were in his to be gone.
- 4. Now there were many in the hold Columbia, who were not used to the satisfied of war, they said within themselves, Lo! we shall one day fall by the hands of the most of Britain.
 - 5. And seeing that times and seasons not in our power, it is therefore better us to escape, for we know not what to move may bring forth.

* Fort Lee,

6. vere apta felf

y, v hey

7.

nen

ges, in their night

man, beds, war!

to the their them

tion,

the a

6. They went away* in companies; they ere not obedient to the voice of the chief aptain: the poison of their example spread felf through the hoft, and the fear of the nen of Britain prevailed in the hearts of may, who had boafted of what great things hey would do in the hour of trial!

7. While they were at home in their cottastroyinges, they had heard of the fame of the warrior; it was their meditation by day when heir hands were in their labor, and in the light feafon when deep sleep falleth upon man, the visions of their heads upon their beds, were of camps and instruments of war!

> 8. The phantom of imagination prefented to their view, whole armies overthrown by their fingle arm! The pleasing vision followed them to the field; it haunted them in their occupations; they cast away with indignation, the hoe and the mattock, and grasped the arms of the warrior!

It then to and l to th

in hal

nd ha

in;

d* th

erfey

e hold

rnor

hoft fatigu Lo! n

fons

the m

etter to m

^{*} See Ramfay, page 304,

9. But when the blast of war assailed their ears, when they saw the crimson sluid spouting from the wounded warrior, their soul sickened at the sight!—they sighed in secret for the occupation of the shepherd, and the bleating of the sheep was as music in their ears!

of the host fled to New-Ark, in the province of Jersey, and the chief captain communed with Joseph* there.

- back parts of Pennsylvania, will the inhabitants help us in that province?
- 12. Now this was a province that was given by one of the kings of the island of Britain, unto a man whose sur-name was Penn, and it was called Pennsylvania, which being interpreted, is Penn's woody country.
- 13. He was a worthy man, and an excellent law-giver; moreover he was a professor

the ed a f all uct here

ut en

that

14. nd fa ower f Bri

> nore vards

> rom

of All

o fo i

^{*} Colonel Reed,

d their to food a fecre of a fecre of their thei

efidue ovina muned

to the

as give of Bri Penn,

being excel

that light which John spake of in the book the Gospel, unto which if a man take ed as unto a sure guide, it will lead him out all error into all truth, and finally conact him to the seats of immarcessible life! here new sources of joy will be opened withat end!

14. And Joseph answered the chief captain and said, Know thou of a truth that if the ower parts of the province submit to the king f Britain, then the back parts thereof will o so in like manner.

15. Then George, the chief captain, furthernore spake and said; We will journey onwards to the province of Virginia, to the county of Augusta; and lo! if we are driven from thence, we will pass over the mountains of Alleghany.

CHAP. XVIII.

General Howe fends forth a Proclamation-no take the benefit thereof, and make their peace

NOW when the captain of the holto Britain knew of a certainty, that the people of the provinces were scattered away from George, the chief captain, he was lifted up his mind and faid within himfelf,

- 2. Lo! now these people will affuredly to turn back again, and ferve the king of B tain; our warfare is nearly accomplished; hands of the mighty hang down; fear had overtaken the warriors; they will rife a more; they are as the reed that groweth b the fide of the rivers, which boweth downto the earth at every blaft!
- 3. Boast not O mighty man! The people or of whom thou scornest are afflicted, but no forfaken; they will return in an hour when 7. A thou lookest not for them; they will come wor upon thee unawares, and lay thy glory in the king dust.

4. 1 ain ar uties

ig th f Brit

5. 1 hat i eople aptair o wel ercy, red to

nd fig

6. A anded retur

ered

itten

beace

roft

people

from

d upi

dlyn

of B

d; th

ar hat

rife no

weth by lownto

ut no

4. And it came to pass, that the chief capain and his brother, who were the king's deuties, fent letters into every province, warng the people to return, and ferve the king Britain as in days past.

- 5. Moreover it was written in the letters, hat if within three score days, any of the cople presented themselves before the chief aptain of the host, or the king's governors, nd figned a certain writing, then they would well, and should partake of the king's ercy, and their offences should be rememred to them no more.
- 6. And the great Sanhedrim were comanded to affemble no more together; but return and make their peace while the people or of mercy was yet open.
- ir when 7. And there were many who harkened to Il come words that were written in the letters of y in the king's deputies, and they partook of the ered mercy, and figned their names to the itten paper.

- 8. Now many of those who signed the names to the paper, had appeared very ze lous against the king of Britain, and had she ed up the people to oppose the decree of the king; and moreover they vilified the nam of the chief counsellor of the kingdom.
- 9. They were unstable in all their ways their zeal was as the dew of the morning which foon paffeth away!
- 10. Now the fect of the tories were bett than these men, for verily they held fast the integrity, and were of one mind and eafily turned.
- 11. Thus did many of the people forth the chief captain, who had toiled for the eafe, who had left a fair inheritance on Mo Vernon, and needed not that any man sho minister to his necessities.
- 12. In the day of prosperity they were link NI up above measure, and were amongst the ptain. who were foremost to oppose the servant the king of Britain;

13 un em

cy !

14. aint

aret

ong

15. e we arts

em t

be An

Trento

Genera

Time

13. But when the evil day came to try the undations of men, lo! their hearts failed em! and like the grass upon the house top, ey soon withered away!

14. Nevertheless there were some who aintained their integrity, and were as the ong oaks in the forests of Columbia, that areth not the windy storm and tempest.

15. They followed after the chief captain: ewords of his mouth were as a law in their arts; and the hour of advertity endeared West, and tradicked with refer of the will

CHAP. XIX. lot onw near and temp ent.

be American army retreat over the Delaware seneral Lee captured—The Hessians taken at Trenton-The battle of Sanpink Bridge.

werelin ND it was fo, that as George, the chief ngst the ptain, was passing through the province of

I their y ze

ad fli of th e nam

m. Ways

ornin

re bett fast the and

le forfi for th

on Mo nan sho

fervant

Jersey, that the host of the king of Britains

- 2. Now there was a river, which divide the province of Pennsylvania; it was a mighty stream, and extended from beyond to Blue mountains of Columbia, even to Atlantic sea.
- 3 It was a fair haven for the ships of the merchants, who did business on great water they sent the wares of Columbia to the North and to the South, to the East, and to West, and trafficked with the merchants of off.
- 4. And George, the chief captain, and the men who followed after him, passed over the river and they were chased in their minds, a bear robbed of her young.
- 5. Now the men of Britain rejoiced with exceeding great joy, inasmuch as they though the army of the people of the provinces would come against them no more.

* Delaware River,

6. A

ng o

7. A

as a n

e peo

ck to

8. N wns

lked

ne to

9. A: Brita

tages daus

d with

to. T

not i

in fo

Livide

mig

of the

to t

MILE

of th

water

North

l toth

nts af

and th

over th

inds,

ced wit

es Wou

6. And it came to pals about this time, that ee, the captain, who had revolted from the ing of Britain, was taken captive by some of e foldiers of the king of Britain,

7. And when the people of the provinces ard thereof, they were discomfitted, for he as a mighty man of valor, and feared not, neier regarded he the face of any man; and e people thought he fecretly inclined to go ck to the king his master.

8. Now the host of Britain occupied the was in the province of Jersey, and they lked to and tro therein, and there were ne to make them afraid.

9. And certain fons of Belial, in the host Britain, went forth from the camp to the tages of the husbandmen: and they faw daughters of the land, that they were fair, thought withal of a beautiful countenance.

> 10. They were not restrained by the law of chief captain, they did those things which not feemly to be mentioned, nor shall the pen of the scribe record their cruel acts, lest the tears of the violated virgin should be multiplied when she remembers the day of her humiliation!

the host of the king of Britain appeared ready to overrun the whole land, the great Sanho drim of the people expostulated with the brethren.

12. And Thomas, * one of the princes of the provinces, and a citizen of no mean city, firengthened the feeble knees of the warriors, he spake to them in the language of love and the moving of his lips raised their spirits ple; the words of his mouth were as show ers of rain on the parched ground in the midst of summer; they were refreshed; the were animated; they shouted for the battle.

of Jersey, on the borders of the river, and

f th

nd the classic fit in 15

e m iemy

lled m, h

o ba hile it

17. by 70

her con

Heffi

* Ger

General Mifflin. + Philadelphia. + Trenton.

as occupied by the Hessians who were hired mul f the German princes and the river was beher ween them and the people of the provinces.

15. And the waters of the river were frozen, when and there was abundance of ice, and George, ready e chief captain of the army of Columbia, Sanhe of in his mind, how he should circumvent their e men of Britain, and by what device he ould bring down the towering hopes of the nemy.

n city, 16. And it was so, that after he had counarrions led with the chief men who were about of love m, he divided the army of Columbia into fpirits to bands, and they passed over the river hile it was yet night.

17. And the first company was commandd in the by John * and Nathaniel + commanded the ed; the her company; and the two captains with battle eir companies came against the town where province Hessians were encamped: and after they

* General Greene. † General Sullivan.

20 10 L 2

Trenton.

the peo

as show

left

of the

er, and

had made an affault, the Hessians sled. No vertheless nine hundred were taken captive and the refidue made their escape.

18. And George, the chief captain, entered into the town, and took possession thereof and there was great joy throughout all the land of Columbia; because the army of the d fo aliens were overthrown and made captive and the joy of the people exceeded the joy harvest.

19. And it came to pass, after these thing engine that the people of the province of Jerle and from the other provinces round about oldier flocked to the banners of the great Sanhedric that even the wild pigeons of Columbia flocked due m the stubble of the husbandman.

20. Now the army of Britain encamped one fide of the town, and the host of the pe ple of the provinces encamped on the other fide thereof; and there was a brook water between the two armies.

* Sanpink Creek.

21 he hat

nd ridg

22 bank ain v

23. nd v

could

Ne ptives

ntere ereof

all th of th aptiva e joyo thing Jerle l abou hedri mped

ocked

the pe he oth rook*

21. And there was a high place cast up over he brook for way faring men, who paffed hat way: it was built up with hewn stone, nd the inhabitants of the land called it a ridge, the name thereof was Sanpink.

22. And the people of the provinces plantd fome of the destroying engines on the ank of the brook, and the foldiers of Briain went forth to drive them from thence.

23. But it came to pass that the destroying ngines gaped upon them with their mouths, nd vomited out their thunders; and the oldiers of Britain were smitten to the earth, o that they could no more rife; and the refidue made their escape; inasmuch as they could not perform their enterprise.

nord entor of tell (their tor

as oded at commission.

a stive glass and floor and to heatige a

and are decided

CHAP. XX.

The Expedition at Princeton-The Americans recover great part of the Jerseys.

ND the two armies encamped nigh unto each other, and the brook was between And the hoft of the men of Britain, when they had kindled their fires, fet a watch, and betook themselves to rest.

- 2. But George, chief captain of the host of the people of the provinces, fuffered not his eyes to fleep; and he gathered the captains of the host together;
- 3. And he communed with them on this wife, and faid, Know ye not that the rear guard of the host of Britain lieth encamped at Princeton? let us therefore depart while it is yet night, that we come upon them while their eyes are yet heavy with sleep.
- 4. Furthermore, he spake and faid, Let herefor every man of the host be ready with his weathereof.

ons o ng en ain m

he me

5. A

eady, nd th p the he w hough

king 6. N rovin

vere ef f Brita rethre

anpin 7. A

le of rards. ended

ons of war in his hands, and let the destroyng engines go out of the camp, and let cerin men flay behind to kindle the fires, that he men of Britain may be deceived thereby.

icans

unto

ween

itain,

atch,

of the

s eyes

of the n this

e rear

ped at le it is

while

5. And it was fo, that when all things were eady, the host of Columbia moved forwards; nd the men who were left behind, kindled p the fires in the front of the camp; and he watchmen in the host of Britain, verily hought that the people of the provinces were king their rest in sleep.

6. Now as the host of the people of the rovinces drew nigh unto the town, they ere espied by some of the soldiers of the king f Britain, who were journeying towards their rethren that were encamped at the bridge of anpink.

7. And when they perceived that the peole of the provinces were journeying forards, they let in a jealoufy that evil was inended against their brethren in the town: I, Le berefore they fent a messenger with tidings is weathereof.

8. Now it was about the dawning of the day, when George, the chief captain, drew nigh unto the town; and when the foldier who were the fervants of the king of Britain faw the people of the provinces, they rushed out of the town to meet the armed men;

9. And the centre of the host of Columbia could not withstand the impetuosity of the soldiers of Britain, but gave way and were confused.

no. And when the chief captain faw the men giving place to the foldiers of Britain, he hastened forwards, and placed him felf between the host of the people of the provinces, and the soldiers of the king of Britain;

raged the men to fight valiantly that day, for their country, their wives and their children: then the people turned about, and the men of Britain were fain to flee from before the people of the provinces. 12. f Jen hemf

aptai e rec

in bur the

fore pap zers

lled a

George Brita

the p

15. 1

ere ab

f the

drew

dien

itain

ushed

umbi

of the

were

w the

f Bri

d him

ne pro-

of Bri

encou-

ay, for ildren!

he men

ore the

12. And many of the people of the province f Jersey were in the battle, and behaved nemselves valiantly; and George, the chief aptain, was in great jeopardy; nevertheless, e received no harm.

in building, where children were taught afin building, where children were taught afin the perfect manner of the law of their faers; moreover they were taught to speak foreign tongues! and to cut curious figures a paper! and there were also some starizers amongst them! Now the building was lled a college,

14. And the balls of the destroying engines of against the walls thereof; and the sear George, the chief captain, fell upon the men Britain, and they came forth, and deliver themselves up to be captives to the people the provinces.

ore about three score persons; and three sudred men were taken captive.

8. Now it was about the dawning of the day, when George, the chief captain, drew nigh unto the town; and when the foldiers who were the fervants of the king of Britain, faw the people of the provinces, they rushed out of the town to meet the armed men;

9. And the centre of the host of Columbia could not withstand the impetuosity of the soldiers of Britain, but gave way and were confused.

no. And when the chief captain faw the men giving place to the foldiers of Britain, he hastened forwards, and placed himfelf between the host of the people of the provinces, and the foldiers of the king of Britain;

raged the men to fight valiantly that day, for their country, their wives and their children: then the people turned about, and the men of Britain were fain to flee from before the people of the provinces. of Je them captain

ne re

ain b er the > n fore n pa

azers alled

note a f George Brita

d then f the p

ere al

of Jersey were in the battle, and behaved hemselves valiantly: and George, the chief captain, was in great jeopardy; nevertheless, he received no harm.

an building, where children were taught afer the perfect manner of the law of their fahers; moreover they were taught to speak a foreign tongues! and to cut curious figures a paper! and there were also some starazers amongst them! Now the building was alled a college,

note against the walls thereof; and the fear substitution of the chief captain, fell upon the men f Britain, and they came forth, and delivered themselves up to be captives to the people of the provinces.

ore about three score persons; and three undred men were taken captive.

lrew diers

the

tain, Ished

mbia of the

w the

were

f Bri

e pro-

encouay, for

ildren: he men

ore the

is. And there fell of the people of the provinces, three captains and fome other Moreover a chief captain whose name wa Mercer, was flain; and the state of the total no

- 17. He was a worthy man, and came 22 from the land of Calidonia, to fojourn with the people of the provinces; and he fough under the banners of the great Sanhedrim.
- 18. Now the army of Britain, on the morning of the fame day, prepared to fault the camp of the people of the province for they wist not that the people were departed
- 19. And lo! when they drew nigh unt the camp, there was no man there! and the were amazed beyond measure! Now the had heard the noise of the destroying e gines; and they faid, It thundered; no withstanding it was winter.
- 20. And while they were musing concern ing these things, behold a messenger can running along the highway of the countr and he had tidings in his mouth, and beath

21 Geory now.

Britai ore a er w

hey neafu

he B mish AND

ing of rovinc ea-coal

nto th

the

here

e was isign

came

. with

rim.

to al

vinces

parted

h unt

nd the

ow the

ing er

stas di I

concer

er can

countr

21. And he reported all the things which George, the chief captain, had done; and now that the fervants of the king were gone nto captivity, and some were flain in the battle!

22. Now when the host of the king of Britain, heard these things, the people were fought ore amazed, and they gaped on the messener with their mouths, for they wist not what on the hey did, for they were astonished out of neasure! certain contain of the second of (4)中国中国中山山山

he British army retreat to Brunswick-Skirmishes with small parties.

AND it came to pass, that the host of the i, no sing of Britain, fled to a certain town* in the rovince of Jersey, which was nigh unto the a-coast, and they cared not to go forth far to the country, lest the people of the pro-

New-Brunswick. It a oniver to vinces should get between them and the ship of the king of Britain. egg the chief c

- 2. Nevertheless, a certain captain, with his fifty went out of the camp, and were made captives by the people of the provinces They came from the river Rhine, and wer called Waldickers. Print Om Possins
- 3. Now, as some of the men of Britan were foraging in the province of Jersey, certain captain of the people of the provin ces came upon them, and the men of Brit ain fled: howbeit, nine of them were flain
- 4. And the captain, whose fur-name wa Dickinson, and the men who followed after him gat much spoil: for the men of Britain had left their carriages and their horses, den with abundance of food and cloathing!
- 5. For they had robbed the threshing floor of the husbandmen, and had taken vast store of fwine's flesh, and flocks and herds in bundance!

6. he pe

at fw t to t

7.

upted hroug

heless ke m

8.] and d oes, he fw igned

ions.

9. 1

vere st he mo

IO.

? Thips

were

wer

Britan

rfey,

provin

f Brit

e flain

ne wa

ed afte

Britai

fes, la

thing!

ig floor

A ftore

ds in

6. Now it was common in those days for he people of Columbia, old and young, to with at swine's flesh, yea the mothers would give to their children, and it was reported that vinces ome eat it even on the Sabbath day!

7. Thus the fountain of life became corupted, and the inhabitants were diseased brough the abundant use thereof. Neverheless, the flesh was lawful to be eaten in ke manner as the flesh of other fed beasts.

8. Moreover, many of the people of the and drank of the strong waters* of Barbaoes, that burned like fire, and refused the he sweet waters of the brook that were degned for the universal beverage of all naions.

9. And the days of the years of man's life vere shortened, and thousands were cut off in he morning of their days!

10. And it came to pass, that some of the people of the provinces, who had fell away to when the men of Britain, came forth from the hold to plunder their brethren in the province of es were annex approprie

Rum.

11. But a captain, whose fur-name was Nelson, fell upon them and took captive fifty persons with their captain. the Low Steam

12. These were the people* who traversed the bye paths in the wilderness of Jersey; they hid themselves in the thick forests! they couched down until it was night; then they arose out of their close places, and like the wolves of the evening, they prowled for their prey! place while of the production

Thus were the calamities of the war ain b encreased! parents were bereaved of their rucke children. and children of their parents! the ope of ancients refused to be comforted, because the staff of their age, the beginning of their strength, was fallen!

14. Trembling took hold on the virgin in;

der o

15 ast,

he fo pelov

16.

iltaff he fla nd as

f!

17.

am ie bel

18. of m

eld th

^{*} Refugees.

ay to when they heard the alarm of war, the thune holt der of the captains and the shoutings!

- 15. They remembered the days that were aft, when they fat under the thick shade of he forest, and hearkened to the voice of their e fifty peloved!
- 16. When their hands took hold of the illaff, and their delight was in the wool and ersey; he slax, the voice of lamentation was afar off, nd as for trouble, they had only heard theref!
- 17. But lo! it came suddenly upon them! a mighty stream! it overwhelmed them! beloved of their fouls was taken captive or the war ain by the hands of the enemy! they were of their rucken through with forrow, because the its! the ope of their expectation was cut off!
- 18. These are thy works, O! thou destroyof man! thou delightest to stride over the eld that is covered with the blood of the virginain; and the last groans of the dying warri-

M 2

ace of

versed they en they

ike the r their

ause the of their

or, are more grateful to thine ear, the gain the music of the shepherds, or the songs of the sled. enraptured feraph!

CHAP. XXII.

Governor Tryon's Expedition to Danbury-De Aroys the American Stores—His party attacked by Arnold, Wooster and Silliman-General Woofter flain.

NOW when the winter was far spent; an the season of the year advanced when armie go forth to battle, William, the chief captain of the host of Britain, sent a certain captain, with five hundred men, to destroy some store that were at a certain place called Peek Hill.

2. And there were some of the people the provinces on the hill to guard the store who a and when they saw the men of Britain comit beit t

* Col. Bird.

3. when

and the new five sta

ed, in had t

cure p

4. Britai hered

he m

one c tain.

5. the co man :

men fled.

6.

tories,

of the

, the gainst them, they destroyed the stores and led.

- 3. And it grieved George, the chief captain, when he was told that the stores were destroyd, inafmuch as he had cautioned those who had the charge thereof to remove them to fecure places.
- 4. And another company of the people of Britain, went forth against a town, the name hereof, was Danbury; and the number of he men was about two thousand: and Tryon, one of the king's governors was their capain.
- 5. And they paffed along the high-way of the country, eight score furlongs; and no man faid ought unto them. And the few Peek men who were in the town to defend it, fled.
- 6. And they burned the houses of all those store who adhered to the great Sanhedrim. Howcommune beit they spared the houses of the fect of the tories, and burned not their habitations.

-De ttacker

Genera

it; an armie

captair ptain, e store

eople

7. And moreover, they destroyed eigh hundred barrels of swine's flesh, and the flesh of oxen; and of fine flour, eight hundre barrels, and two thousand bushels of com and tents for the foldiers, one thousand seven hundred.

8. Now while the governor and the two thousand men, were busily employed in the town, three chief captains, David,* Benedit and Silliman, collected fome hundreds of the people of the provinces together.

9. And the men hastened after the three captains, and they journeyed about twelve score furlongs; and they were very weary; notwithstanding, they fell upon the men of Britain who were with the governor.

10. Moreover Benedict took five hundred men and they moved swiftly on their way. and gat before the governor, and laid impediments in the way of the men of Britain.

11. Now there were nigh at hand, a ledge ernor

* General Wooster.

or an ney fl east or as in

frock

12. overn

he fur

ase, h ith a

13. he fol nd the > 14. he go eople ntil t

vaited 15.

ve of

ons.

e fless indred com l seven

ne two in the enedia

of the

weary; nen o

undred l impe-

in. a ledge

eight frocks, it was a high place, and the goveror and his company gat upon the rocks and ney shot at Benedict from thence; and the east on which Benedict sat was killed; and he as in great jeopardy, being entangled with he furniture of the beast.

> 12. And when a foldier who was with the overnor, faw that Benedict was in an evil afe, he ran and thought to have pierced him ith an instrument, and slain him therewith;

13. But Benedict perceiving the intent of three he soldier, shot at him, and slew him there, twelve and then made his escape.

14. And it came to pass, after this, that be governor journeyed onwards; and the cople of the provinces followed after him ntil the men of Britain gat into the ships that ir way, vaited for them at an appointed place.

> 15. Now there were flain and taken capwe of the men who followed after the goernor, between two and three hundred perons.

vinces, about twenty men, and about forty were wounded. And a certain doctor was flain, whose name was Atwater.

the princes of the provinces made a decree that a monument should be set up as a memorial of the valiant acts that he had done.

- 18. Moreover the great Sanhedrim honor ed Benedict with great honor; and gave him a horse, decked out for the war.
- honored a certain captain whose surname was Meigs, and gave him a sword of curious workmanship, inasmuch as he went sort and burned the ships of the king of Britain and took captive, four score and ten per sons; and the number of the ships that he burned, was twelve besides two small ones

lanæi Brit

land

Noves pito

ne pr

nemfe.

2. A the k

wn w

r; an

the cople.

3. Hoom w ere in Jerse pro

fort

r wa

, and

ecree

memo

honor

ve him

hedrin

r-nam

curiou

t fort

Britain

ten per

that h

all ones

.

CHAP. XXIII.

Nanœuvres of General Howe frustrated—The British Army go on board their ships—They land at the Head of Elk.

NOW the host of the people of the provines pitched their camp at Middle Brook, in the province of Jersey, and strengthened temselves there.

2. And William, chief captain of the host the king of Britain, came forth out of the wn where he had sojourned during the wint; and the van guard of the host of Britain stended to a certain house* where the judges the land were used to administer to the tople.

3. Howbeit, they soon returned to the place om whence they came, inasmuch as they ere informed, that the people of the province Jersey, were united with George, the chief ^{*} Somerfet Court-house.

even a very great multitude.

- 4. For the husbandmen had left the careon their flocks to the lads of their houshold; and they thirsted after revenge, inasmuch as the men of the host of Britain had deceive them.
- Britain was pursuing after the host of Columbia, that William, the chief captain, spake smooth words unto them, and gave them paper wherein it was written, that all the who demeaned themselves peaceably should not come to any harm either in their person or possessions, and this paper was called a protection.
- 6. Nevertheless the foldiers regarded at the written paper, but did as they listed, at they spoiled the people; and when any of inhabitants of the provinces complained there to William, the chief captain, he turned a deer to the cries of the people.

7. iers

ie re

o wr

oing

ear c

ot.

8. And W

in of s arm

of of the c

9. No ere no

mself om the

no were Britai them,

careo; and

as the

rmy o

fpak them

thou

perfor

rded a fted, a my oft

ed there

7. And, if at any time he rebuked the soliers for these things, his reproofs were like he reproofs of Eli to his sons, saying, Why o ye such things, for I hear of all your evilous with this people; nay, verily, but you o wrong, and it is not a good report that I car concerning you. Thus reasoned he with he men of war, but he restrained them ot.

- 8. And the host of Britain again came forth, ad William trusting in the men of war, put sarmy in array: but George, the chief capin of Columbia, thought it would not be pedient to go forth to the battle: so the of the people of the provinces remained the camp, and went not out.
- 9. Now when William faw that the people ere not inclined to come forth, he turned mielf about, and made as though he fled om the people. Then, some of the people to were with George followed after the host Britain.

his purpose, suddenly turned himself about now George, the chief captain of the arms of Columbia, also moved forwards; and tresidue of the host followed after him to Qui ble Town, in the province of Jersey.

cunning decree of William, the chief capta of the host of Britain, he delayed to go for to the battle; but strengthened himself that place.

waste, so the devices of the crasty were he waste, so that they could not perform the enterprise.

of Britain, knew of a certainty that it would be attended with great jeopardy, and the of many of the lives of the servants of king of Britain, should they force their through the province of Jersey,

14. Therefore, seeing these things were he put his soldiers into the tall ships of ing o ho nousa

15. e pr

ere d inds

ncert

days in ha

toving d at a the p

ovince Brit

oufan ut to v ing of Britain, and the number of the men ho were put into the ships, were fixteen outand perfons.

15. Now George, the chief captain, and e principal men of the host, mused in their inds what this should mean, and some faid ng, and some another. And there ere divers opinions, for the dark clouds of ncertainty overshadowed the devices of Wilam, the chief captain.

16. And after much conjecture, and twenwere land days were passed, after that the host of Briorm the in had gone into the ships, lo! it was reorted to the chief captain of the people of the ovinces, that the men of Britain were landat a certain place called the Head of Elk, the province of Maryland.

> 17. Then the host of the people of the ovinces hastened forwards to meet the army Britain. Now there were but about eight oufand fighting men that were able to go tto war with Gorge, the chief captain.

gaine about armi

o Qui 3340

and th

s only capta go for imself

f the h it wo d the

its of their V

s were ips of

of the host of Britain, sixteen thousand valiant men, prepared with all instruments for war.

19. Now William thought within himself, that it he suffered the soldiers to spoil their habitants in like manner as they had done in the province of Jersey, he should get to self a blot, and his name would be had in execution of all the people.

- 20. He therefore fent forth written papers to the inhabitants of the land; and it was written therein, that if at any time, any of the foldiers of the army of Britain, behaved themselves unseemly to any of the people upon notice thereof to the chief captain, the should be punished.
- 21. Nevertheless, the soldiers did as the were wont to do in the province of Jersey and the people despised William in their hearts inasmuch as he being chief captain, could have restrained the soldiers from doing those things.

22.

rovir hem

heir heir f

oft of

here

amp oth a

Battle cessf

ANI

ptain

aliant

war.

mfelf.

he in

one in

in ex

papers

it W38

any o

ehaved

people

n, the $ 18

as the

Jersey

hearts

, coul

ig thof

22. And the army of the king of Britain noved forwards towards the chief city of the rovince of Pennsylvania; and they took with hem the destroying engines, but they left heir tents and great part of their stuff with heir ships.

And George, the chief captain, and the oft of the people of the provinces pitched heir camp nigh unto a certain ford,* where here was a brook of water.

24. And the host of Britain pitched their amp on the other side of the brook, and oth armies prepared for the battle.

CHAP. XXIV.

Cattle of Brandywine near Chadd's Ford—Successful on the part of the British.

AND about the dawning of the day the my of the king of Britain, moved towards

* Chadd's Ford.

N 2

the hoft of the people of the provinces, in two companies: Dies sail algavent abrawyed have

- descri Pennik vania, načther 2. The first company followed after the captain whose fur-name was Cornwallis, and he was governor of the tower of Lud: an the other company remained by the broof with the captain of the German foldiers whose name was Kniphausen.
- 3. And the first company went along the sid of the brook, until they came where it di vided into two streams; and when it wa mid-day, they passed over.
- 4. And the other company drew up in ba tle array, and appeared as though they in tended to pass over the brook at a certain place, called in the vernacular tongu Chadd's Ford.
- 5. And when the first company had passe captain over the brook, they moved forwards on the was a other fide thereof.
- 6. Now the host of the people of the pr vinces were taken at unawares, and the m of wa ore

7.] old t r of Kniph he re

> he pe net, heir

8. he n ions:

ng of were a

9.]

host of

and h

IO.

n two of war were discomsitted. And they sled beore the host of Britain.

t the 7. Now George, the chief captain, had been , and gold that Cornwallis, the governor of the tow-: and or of Lud, was gone back again to unite with brook Kniphausen the other captain, and he believed dies the report, that it was even fo. Thus were he people of the provinces taken in an evil net, and were fain to turn their backs upon heir enemies.

it was 8. And there were flain and wounded of he men of Britain, about fix hundred perons: and the flain and those who were mising of the host of the people of the provinces, were about twelve hundred men.

9. Now there were of the wounded in the host of the people of the provinces, two chief d passe captains, the name of the first was Fayette, he s on the was a nobleman from the kingdom of Gaul, and had left the land of his nativity to fight under the banners of the great Sanhedrim.

10. And the name of the other captain was he fid e it di

in ba they in

certai tongu

the pr the m Woodford; howbeit their wounds were not unto death.

- from the kingdom of Poland; and his name was Polaski: he was a mighty man of war.
- 12. He conspired against the king his master, and took him captive from amidst the armed men who were his guards, and out of his chief city where he dwelt.
- abideth in the forests of Columbia! he feared not the face of man, neither regarded he the threatnings of the enemy! the ways of the warrior were open before him, and he strewed the fields with heaps of slain!
- the people of the provinces had fled from the army of Britain, that William, the chief cap tain thereof, essayed to get round the host of the people of the provinces on the right hand thereof.
 - 15. But George, the chief captain, perceit ng Thus

o tl hey

16 vere

17. le in

nen o

18. le wa

oft! a

19. lost of d, an nd the 20.

ng that he was so minded, prevented him. e not Thus the devices of the crafty were frustrated, 11.51

that they could not perform the things hey had devised.

16. Now the army of the king of Britain nd the host of the people of the provinces vere nigh unto the house* of a certain publian, in the province of Pennsylvania.

17. And the two chief captains put the bate in array, army against army; and the nen of war shouted for the battle.

18. And when the expectations of the peole was at the height, lo! a mighty storm rose, and the rain descended and beat upon the oft! and the black dust was spoiled by the rain.

19. Then George, the chief captain of the oft of the people of the provinces, decampd, and departed thence to a certain place, nd the host of Britain followed after him.

20. And when George had gotten as far as alter. armed of his

eman

name

war.

er, tha feared

he the of the Arew.

hoft o com the ief cap hofto percei

ht hand

^{*} The Warren Tavern.

the fign of the White-Horse, on the highway that leadeth to the chief city of the province, he drew up the host of the people of the provinces, and offered the men of Britain battle.

- day, and he turned and went to a certain place,* where the stores of the king, his master were left: so the army of Britain went to secure the stores.
- 22. And it was so, that the people of the provinces were in an evil case; for there were in the host a thousand men who went bare footed; for their shoes were worn and gone.
- yearned towards the people, even as the bowels of a father for his son whom he loveth.
- 24. And after these things it came to pass, that the host of Columbia journeyed onwards to a place of safety; and the highways to the city were lest unoccupied by the people of the provinces.

* Reading.

the for privation of the

26. when

were ces; a

eight capta

the g ty the

adven

their

25. Now about this time, a company of the soldiers of the host of Britain, set out privately in the night, and came upon some of the people of the provinces while they were taking their rest in sleep;

26. And it was past the hour of midnight when they fell upon the people of the provinces; and they slew about three hundred men; and there fell of the men of Britain, about eight persons. Now, the sur-name of the captain of the men of Britain was Grey.* †

27. Now the princes of the provinces, even the great Sanhedrim, knowing of a certainty that the army of Britain were minded to get into the city, departed thence, lest peradventure they should fall into the hands of their enemies.

* General Grey. + Paoli Massacre,

pro-

way

ince,

ertain , his went

that

of the

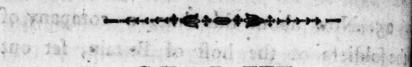

bare gone

aptain bow

eth.

pass, wards rays to

ople of

CHAP. XXV.

General Howe marches into Philadelphia—The Battle of Germantown—The Delaware Frigate captured.

AND it was fo, that the greater part of the host of the king of Britain, encamped in a town, in the province of Pennsylvania, the name thereof was Germantown.

- 2. And William, the chief captain of the host, took his way to the chief city, and the residue of the host followed after him.
- 3. The city was founded by Penn, after the form of ancient Babylon; the streets thereof were fair and comely to behold! her merchants lived like princes! and her honor able men were many in number!
- 4. The houses of the chief men of the city were lined with cedar, and the beams and rafters were of fir, for the cedar and the fir tree

rere umb lyre

imbe

teat :

ne we

f Col

6. A aptain thabit

7. No senjamine kin elp the

8. Fo

nighty

rere in great abundance in the forests of Coambia; and there was no need to send to tyre and Sidon for workmen to hew the imber, for the men of Columbia were well silled in all such matters.

- 5. Now the merchants fent every year, teat store of the boards of the cedar and of the fir tree to the countries afar off, and the terchants sold them at a certain price, and the wealth of other nations came into the land solumbia as a slowing stream.
 - 6. And it was fo, that as William, the chief aptain, entered into the city, many of the habitants came out to do him honor.
 - 7. Now the great Sanhedrim had deputed enjamin to go and make affinity with Louis, he king of Gaul, that he might send and elp the people of the provinces against their highty adversaries, the men of Britain.
 - 8. For the king of Gaul and George, the ing of Britain, were often at war with each the city and raf

-Th

e Fri

art of

ped in

a, the

of the

nd the

, after

ftreets

d! her

honor

0

other. And when Benjamin was told that William had taken the chief city of the provinces, he answered and said;

- 9. Say not ye in your hearts that William hath taken the city, but rather fay that the city hath taken William; for is he not hem med in by the host of the people of the provinces on one side, and by the waters of the river on the other side?
- regarded not these things; and it was so, the all the people heard him gladly, and he was highly esteemed in the kingdom of Gaul, and was called a philosopher, which by interpretation signifieth a lover of wisdom.
- the chief captain of the host of Britain, has gotten into the city, that George, the chie captain of the host of Columbia, drew night unto the men of Britain who were encamped at Germantown.
 - 12. And William strengthened himself is he ci he b he ari

rive

f the ne of gainst

13.

as ca

the f

14.

de wer

at all

nts o

rs wer

16. N

he city, and placed the destroying engines on he banks of the Aver, lest, peradventure, he armed ships of Columbia should come and rive him from thence.

13. And it was so that while the servants f theking of Britain were doing these things, ne of the armed ships of Columbia came gainst the town, and the name of the ship* as called after the name of the river.

14. And the destroying engines that were the ship, discharged their thunders upon etown: but it came to pass, that when the dewent down, the ship ran upon the ground; if the mariners who were therein, seeing at all hope of escaping was gone, delivered emselves up to the men of Britain.

nts of the king of Britain, and the mariars were made captives.

16. Now while the men of Britain were

* Deleware Frigate.

igh ha o, tha he was

that

pro.

Tillian

it the

hem

e pro

of the

ul, and terpre

William
in, had e chie

w night

nself i

busied in the city, George, the chief captain of the host of the people of the provinces, called the chief men of the host together;

- 17. And when they had communed amog themselves, the greater part advised, that the host should move forwards and assault the men of Britain, who were encamped in the town.
- 18. Now the host of Columbia had been strengthened by the inhabitants from the province of Virginia, and from Peek's Hill; and the number of men who came to the help of their bretheren, were two thousand and finhundred.
- ed the battle, the host moved forwards in a veral companies: and the sun was just rise upon the earth when the army of the peop of the provinces assaulted the men of Britain
- ces fell upon the men of Britain, who we on the borders of the town, they fled into t own,

21.

ig th

vere

ne itro as bu

ery f

22.

Benuts of 23.] ele th Brit:

hot, in tha

* Ben

own, and the people of the provinces purued after them.

21. And a certain captain of the army of ritain, whose sur-name was Musgrove, seeg that the fervants of the king of Britain ere fleeing before their enemies, he took bout three hundred men, and entered into estrong house of Benjamin* (now the house as built up with hewn stone, and it was ery strong.)

22. And it was fo, that the people of the ovinces halted when they came to the house Benjamin, and they warred with the fernts of the king of Britain who were in the buse.

23. Now while they were busied about just rise ese things, Nathaniel + assaulted the army Britain on the right, and the battle waxhot, and there were many who fell down in that day!

* Benjamin Chew, Efq. + General Greene.

aptair inces. er;

amog hat th alt th in th

d bee the pro ill; an help and fiv

ad orde ds in f e peop Britain

e provi who we d into

Matthews, took captive of the host of Britain, three score and ten persons. Howbeit they were loosened from their captivity, and the manner of their enlargement was on this wise

25. For lo! a great mist arose, and the sun was darkened, and the men appeared a distance as trees walking; and Matthew wist not to which company he was captain and it came to pass, that the army of Britain environed him round about, and all his company, and the men he had taken captives.

- 26. Now there were many valiant acts done that day: nevertheless the host of the people of the provinces sled before the servants of the king of Britain.
- 27. And Cornwallis, a lord, and a chie captain in the army of Britain, and severa men with him, pursued after the people of the provinces, on swift horses.
 - 28. Now the flain and wounded of peopl of the provinces, and those who were taken ca tives, were men o

29. myof

tain was 1

30.

him.

was I

Operat

ated No

wilt o

pied by

were slain, wounded and taken captive of the men of Britain, about five hundred persons.

29. And there were two captains of the army of Britain, slain; the name of the first captain was Agnew, and the name of the other was Bird.

30. And there was also slain a captain of the people of the provinces, whose sur-name was Nash, and his armor-bearer* fell with him.

CHAP. XXVI.

perations against Fort Mifflin, on Mud-Island
—and Red-Bank—The former finally evacuated by the Americans.

NOW there was a strong hold that was wilt on an island in the river; it was occu-· Aiddecamp Witherspoon.

was itain, they d the

wife;

ired at atthew ptain: Britain is comives.

e people rants o

a chie

ople

f peopl

called after the name of Thomas,* one of Britai the princes of the provinces.

- 2. There was also another strong hold about four furlongs from the former, and it was built on a portion of ground that apper. tained unto James; he was an honorable man, and he had feveral fons and daughters; and his fons were men of renown and beloved of the people; they dwelt in the province of Jerfey, and the hold was nigh unto the river.
- 3. Now the people of the provinces had laid impediments in the way of the ships of the king of Britain, fo that they could not get to the city; and the host of Britain were sore troubled because of these things.
- 4. And the victuals and all the implements for war that were wanted in the host, they brought in carriages to the city, and the charge thereof was great, and the arrival of the carriages uncertain.
 - 5. Then the chief captain of the navy of
 - * Fort Mifflin, on Mud-Island + Red Bank.

of th hould

fland.

6. and th ng er on the

he d garriso

7. 1

were

conflic the la lain, king tound ship m hold.

8. of, he draw

ne of Britain, and William, chief captain of the hoft of the king, cast in their minds how they hould gain the ftrong hold that was on the fland.

- 6. And they toiled hard for many days, and they shot into the hold, and the destroyng engines beat down the buildings that were on the island; and the men who were therein were fore galled by the men of Britain and he destroying engines. Nevertheless, the garrison maintained their integrity.
- 7. And after many days watching, and fore conflicts, both from the water and also from the land, and when many valiant men were lain, the chief captain of the navy of the king of Britain, was told there was a way found the hinder part of the island where a d the ship might pass, so as to come nigh unto the val of hold.
 - 8. And when the chief captain heard thereof, he lightened a ship, so that she should not draw much depth of water; and valiant men holdt

and it pper. man,

and ed of f Jer-

s had of the

er.

ot get e fore

ments they

avy of

k.

were put therein; and the ship moved along on the face of the water, and came against the hinder part of the hold.

- 9. And when the garrison saw the ship and the armed men ready with the instruments of war, all hopes of resistance vanished; for their destroying engines were rendered use less, and the means of desence were destroyed.
- 10. Now it came to pass, when it was night, that the men who were in the hold, escaped to the province of Jersey, to the strong hold that was built on the portion of ground that belonged to James.
- in the hold, gat great honor; his fur-name was Smith; moreover the great Sanhedeim gave him a fword of fine carved work, the work of the hand of the cunning workman!
- 12. Now there were several ships that were armed with the destroying engines, and they annoyed the navy of Britain, and the captain of the ships also gat great honor; his sur-

ame fwor

ig. he riv

f Co. nothe aftene

14.

ned to aters

on po le ship on, t le rive

lled v

name was Hazlewood, and he also received fword.

13. Now the implements that were put into he river to keep the ships of the king from oming to the city, were strong and many;

14. They were made of the large fir-trees f Columbia, and they were put one upon nother, and large pieces of barbed iron were aftened thereto; and when they were fashined together, they were let down into the aters of the river.

on pointed towards the ships, and lo! when the ships came upon the points of the barbed on, they were marred, and the waters of the river rushed into the ships, and they were led with the waters of the river.

larges our to origin odl, bal e men r-name nedeim

long

gains

thip.

ments

; for d use.

oyed.

night,

Caped

g hold

d that

k, the

at were

captain

CHAP. XXVII.

Fort on Red Bank—The Hessians under Count Donop are defeated—Finally evacuated on the approach of Lord Cornwallis with a large force—Count Donop dies of his wounds.

AND when the servants of the king of Britain had gotten possession of the strong hold on the island, the ships of the king of Britain moved along upon the face of the water, and came to the city; and there was great rejoicing because of this thing.

- 2. And it came to pass, that after the hold was taken, and before the navy of the king of Britain had cast anchor before the city that William the captain of the host, sent certain captain and two thousand men to tak the strong hold in the province of Jersey that was built on the portion of ground the appertained to the inheritance of James.
 - 3. And the name of the captain whom h nt, v ere than pr

essian

4. A

r him erfey.

5. Tom th

e fiel

de ar

6. No

cob, a mop th

nt, was Donop, he was from the German puntry; and the men who went with him, ere the foldiers who were hired of the Geran princes, and they went by the name of essians, in the land of Columbia.

Count

on the large

Arong

ing of

of the

re Was

he hold

e king

ne city

, fent

to tak

Jersey

nd tha

whom h

mes.

4. And Donop, the captain, passed over the ver, and the two thousand men followed afthim, and they landed in the province of ng of erfey.

> 5. They took the highway that leadeth om the house of William the publican, to e field of Haddon; * and as they passed ong the way, fome of the men turned de and went to the house of Jacob, that ood near the way fide.

6. Now Peter was dreffing the fleece of cob's sheep, and Gideon was at the house of cob, and they were all taken captive: and ame to pass, that as Gideon drew nigh unto nop the captain, he smote Gideon with the staff that was in his hand, upon the head but Jacob and Peter were not smitten.

Haddonfield.

- 7. Then the captain and the men journeye forwards; and the fun was going down when they entered the field of Haddon, and the abode there that night.
- 8. And on the morning of the next day about the time of the cock-crowing, the me of war departed from the field of Hadda and passed along the highway through the province of Jersey, towards the strong hold.
- 9. And as they came to the borders of y seph, whose house stood by the way side, in Joseph came out to see the armed men; he he wist not that they were so night at hand.

and gone into his house, one of the arms men called to him in an unknown tongulate but he understood him not; and the material fractory by the with a sword that he had in the same of the * Red Bank.

and,

II.

emar hat w hose the

d hin night.

the le pro

ady w

14. 1

gave the b

d his

and, and the zeal of Joseph was kindled gainst the man.

11. Now when the men drew nigh unto the old, Donop the captain fent a messenger to emand that it should be given up, and all hat was therein;

12. But the captain in the strong hold, hose sur-name was Greene,* hearkened not the voice of Donop the captain, but prepard himself to resist the enemy with all his light.

13. Then was the wrath of Donop, captain the Hessians kindled, against the people of the provinces, was his wrath kindled! and gave command that every man should be ady with his weapons of war in his hand;

the battle, or as a bird to the snare of the wler, and knew not that it was for his life; dhis men followed after him.

rneye wher

d the head

xt day he me

Haddon ugh th g hold.

s of j ide, lo en; bu hand.

escape ne arme

tongue

ad in

^{*} Col. Greene.

been occupied as a place of defence; and when the captain of the garrison knew of a certainty that the Hessians were coming against the hold, he left it for a station more inward.

16. And it was fo, that when the Hessian had gotten into the vacant place, they shout ed with a great shout, supposing their was fare was accomplished.

- 17. But lo! the men in the hold floor ready, every man with his weapon of war in his hand; and when the enemies of the people of the provinces, even the Hessian came near unto the battlements, the destoy ing engines were let loose, and they cast out their thunders,
- 18. And the Hessians sell down sain is great multitudes; and Donop the captain was taken captive, and was fore wounded and died of his wounds.
- 19. Now there were slain of the Hessian about four hundred persons, and the batt mad

enging to fl

2

from of the

ther roun and t

hono even curio

24 hand continued about half an hour, and the refidue made their escape and fled,

- 20. Now the bellowings of the destroying engines were heard afar off, and the shouting of the men of war, resounded from shore to shore, and from province to province!
- 21. The flocks and the herds were driven from the pastures! they sought the thick shade of the forest! the hair of their slesh stood up at the sound of the battle of the warriors!
- 22. The knees of the ancients smote together! the terrors of death encompassed them round about! they eat their bread in fear, and their drink was mingled with their tears!
- 23. And the captain in the hold gat great honor, and the princes of the provinces, even the great Sanhedrim, gave him a sword of curious workmanship.
- 24. So the strong hold mained in the hands of the people of the provinces: never-

P 2. And le dieg

t had and w of

againl award

fhout ir war

I stood

he peo Lessian

destoy

flain i captain

Hessian

not many days after and when the garrifor heard thereof, they destroyed the hold and departed.

manifelier out over rule begied from there

e stal from province to province!

And the best were driven ebad alon C H A P. XXVIII.

The Hessians retreat through the Jerseys and plunder the Inhabitants.

NOW after that Donop the captain was slain, the residue of the host turned back again; and as they passed along through the province of Jersey, they spoiled the inhabitants thereof.

eye, they took away! they were like greed dogs that never had enough! they spared no neither did they pity!

3. Defolation and destruction marked the d the r paths of their feet! and those who had fare elica f bro

nd, i

4.

mown

y, wi

nortal

δ. N enevo une, t

ottage varied y

7. Them,

epaid t

army elicately every day, were glad of a morfel gradies fiver his value bast service f bread!

- 4. Nevertheless, they were gainers in the nd, inasmuch as they learned moretrue wisom in the hour of advertity, than had been nown while they were basking in the funhine of prosperity!
 - 5. They were taught that the cup of feliciy, without some mixture of the wormwood nd the gall, was by no means a draught for nortal man ! ... A south based veril 1 service
 - 6. Moreover their hearts expanded with enevolence towards the children of misforune, they fought them out in their folitary ottages, they informed themselves of their aried wants, and with a liberal hand chased way the cause of their woe!
- 7. The bleffings of the poor came upon hem, and the tear of gratitude abundantly epaid their liberality! They moreover reapked the dthe rich harvest of felf-approving thoughts!

eys and

rison

d and

(6)1(9)

d of

in wa d back

igh th inhabi

t to th

greed red no

ad fare

1.50

and could fay with propriety, I have not also gether lived in vain !

8. The golden wedge of Ophir, and the diamond of Golconda, loft for a time the magic influence! The pleasures of fensualis were absorbed in the boundless prospect of it estimable treasures! treasures of eternal de ration!

9. But alas! when the day of peace return ed, pleasure tempted them with her golde wings! fhe fpread abroad her allurement and many who had once feen the vanity earthly riches, were caught in her fnate and loft fight of substantial felicity in the pu fuit of shadows!

10. Let the children of poverty comfo themselves, inasmuch as they are remov far from the fnares of the diffipated fons of luptuousness, whose tents are surrounded the harbingers of the king of terrors! w rideth on the pale horse! and whose name i is death!

1 instr teacl of th

ler, that :

exper the o have:

thy b

12

13. prime the gr ther h his bo

valley to the

14. will th instruction of the aged, and let the hoary head teach you wisdom; like beacons on the shore of the sea, they point to the unwary traveller, and shew him the rocks and quicksands that abound in the turbulent ocean of life!

12. The counsel they give, is the fruit of experience. Do thou therefore regard it as the oracle of truth! they speak of what they have seen, and are qualified by wisdom to steer thy bark with safety into the desired port!

13. In the morning of thy days, in the prime of thy life, when thou art released from the guardianship of thine elders, when thy father hath paid the great debt of nature, and his bones are covered with the clods of the valley, and thou art about to launch forth into the busy scenes of life,

14. Then is the hour of danger! then will that arch foe to man's happiness, whose name is self-sufficiency, endeavour to persuade ot alto

nd the

a of i

nal d retun

anity finant
the pu

remove ons of wunded

rs! W

thee that thou art wifer than the ancients, who have trodden the path before thee!

- 15. He will tell thee, thine own understand. ing is sufficient to conduct thee with safety to the ultimate end for which thou wast created !
- 16. But hearken thou not to his delufive words, for thousands have been led aftray by his counfel!
- 17. Let wisdom have place in thine heart, let her have the direction of all thy actions; and let caution take thee by the hand! then shalt thou be led with safety through all the apartments of human blifs on earth, and the hope of thine expectation shall not perish!
- 18. Thou shalt descend with fortitude the declivity of life! a pleasing serenity shall play around thine heart at that important moment when a new state of existence shall open before thee! then shall thine eyes behold with sthey transport, the reward of thy virtue! stamped hade with the feal of eternal truth!

The B qua

Ger ral

ans

St. agai

No n the he ki

he cit vinter

2. 7 ied t he dri

afture

ents,

tand. ety to

t cre-

lufive ay by

heart, tions; then all the

nd the ish!

ide the all play

CHAP. XXIX.

The British and American Armies go into winter quarters-Sir Guy Carlton is succeeded by General Burgoyne-The Militia, under General Herkimer, fall into an ambuscade of Indians and Tories, led by Sir John Johnson and St. Leger, who were upon an expedition against Fort Schuyler.

NOW it came to pass, after the strong holds n the river were destroyed, and the ships of he king of Britain had cast anchor before he city, that the men of war went into their vinter encampments.

2. The foldiers of the king of Britain occunoment lied the houses in the city, they feared not pen be- he driving fnow nor beating rain! inafmuch ld with they were clad in warm cloathing that was tamped hade of the fleeces of sheep, which fed in fat aftures of the island of Albion!

6.

nies c

e de

news

ere n

ire, a

7. 1

in!

ough

ooken

8. E

d hin

fide an

anheo

9. N

as wa

f his c

rovinc

3. But it was not fo with the valiant men of Columbia, who fought the battles of the great Sanhedrim! they were poorly clad, and many of them walked barefooted to the place* of their encampment; and the frozen earth was stained with the blood of the men of war!

4. Amongst the trees of the forest, they pitched their tents! † the fierce howlings of the winter storm chased away their repose they were like unto a ship in a troubled seal they were toffed in their minds as a leaf dri ven to and fro by contending currents!

5. Nevertheless, the spirit of opposition remained firm within them! the words of the great Sanhedrim were as a law written in their inward parts! they had tasted of the er, in waters of strife, and the thoughts of submission were driven far away, even as the chast is driven from the threshing floor of the husbandman!

^{*} Valley Forge. + Huts.

6. But William, chief captain of the arnies of Britain, fared sumptuously every day. e delighted himself with vain sports and news! and was occupied in those things that ere not seemly for a warrior! he loved pleare, and became vain in his imaginations!

7. He lightly esteemed the glory of Briin! he feemed to account it as a thing of ought! yea, he caused his nation to be evil poken of!

8. Even the fect of the tories, they despisd him ! he caused many of them to turn fide and walk in the footsteps of the great anhedrim!

ords of 9. Now it came to pass, while Williams tten in wasting the treasure of the king his masof the er, in the pursuit of the vain imaginations submist f his own heart, that tidings came from the rovince of the North.

Canada.

men f the

clad. o the men

rozen

they ngs of epole!

d fea! af dri

139 ofition

ne chaff he hus

hedrin

hus g

ons.

14.

vent :

and a umbe

er hin

15.

ney co

on the irsted

the v

wate

16.

er jou

eir l

ere lie

17.

forw

their

e who

10. Now John, a valiant man, from the island of Britain, was made chief captain over the men of war, in the room of Guy; how beit Guy held his peace, and murmured not at the appointment of John.

province, which was occupied by the fervant of the great Sanhedrim, it was nigh unto river,† and John desired to have the holds a place of defence.

the hold to take it. And the barbarians of the wilderness, and some of the soldiers of Britain, and of the sect of the tories follows after the men whom John had sent: the name of the sirst was Johnson, and the name of the second St. Leger.

13. Now there were some of the people of the provinces gathered together, under Herk mer, a captain and servant to the great Sa

^{*} Fort Schuyler. † Mohawk River. ‡ Sir Johnson and St. Leger.

hedrim, and the number of men who were hus gathered, were about eight hundred per-

14. And when Johnson heard thereof, he sent forth to lie in wait for the people. Ind about feven hundred barbarians and a sumber of the sect of the tories followed after him.

15. They hid themselves in the wilderness!
hey couched down as a lion, and as a young on they watched for their prey! yea, they hirsted for the blood of their enemies, even the way-faring man thirsteth for the brooks twater, when he is faint with heat.

16. And the people who were with Herki. er journeyed forwards in the simplicity of their hearts, for they wist not that there ere liers in wait!

17. And it came to pass, as they journeyforwards, that the liers in wait arose out their secret places, and fell upon the peowho were with Herkimer, and slew seven ed no

m th

n ove

how

in the old fo

again rians

ollowe he nam

e of th

eople

er Herk eat Sa

Sir Jo

ow w te co

eir se

23. . n all 1

eople

es) ar

ries f

f the 1

24. 1

onfuse

ture;

nd eve

score persons of the people of the provinces

18. And there fell of the chief warriors of the barbarians, three score and ten men, who were well skilled in drawing the bow, and could shoot an arrow to an hair's breadly and not miss!

mer the captain, was flain; and the widow and fatherless were multiplied in the land!

20. The strife of the warriors was cruel they rushed upon each other as the stream from the mountains! their countenances wer dark and gloomy as the clouds from the South in the heat of summer, when the east is parched with heat!

21. So fierce* was their warfare, that the barbarians were associated with fear! as jealousy took hold on their minds!

22. And they faid to their young men, L

* The militia and tories were so closely engage that they stabbed each other with their knives.

ow we shall be cut off by these people—they to confederated together, notwithstanding their seeming animosity.

23. And they commanded them to fall upnall the white people (for so they called the cople of the provinces and the sect of the tocs) and there were as many of the sect of the ories slain by the barbarians, as by the people if the provinces!

24. And Johnson seeing that the people were onfused, and that there was a great discomture; he caused a retreat to be sounded, and every man went to his own tent.

 Q_2

om the

nces

ors o

, who

v, and

readth

Herk

widow

land!

cruel

Arean

es wer

that th

ar! ar

ien, L

engage

CHAP. XXX.

St. Leger attempts to terrify the Garrison in For Schuyler (formerly Stanwix) is unsuccessful. —Col. Willet and Lieutenant Stockwel under take to go the Camp at Still-Water—General Schuyler sends a detachment under Arnold—The Indians retreat with precipitation (occasioned by a Stratagem of Arnold) and the British follow their example.

Now St. Leger, the servant of the king of Britain and captain of the host, cast in his mind how he should get possession of the hold and he thought to have terrified the men of war who were therein.

of the garrison, to demand possession thereof in the name of the king his master. He exceedingly magnified his own strength, an

to m

thou

to th

4.

3.

fon, 1 was y hands

encan 5. 1

of the were

hearts

6. Standii phanto

fear of 7.

thought to make the hearts of the men of war to melt!

- 3. Howbeit they stood firm in their love to the great Sanhedrim, and hearkened not to the words of St. Leger.
- 4. Nevertheless the governor of the garrifon, privately fent two* valiant men while it was yet night; who put their lives in their hands, and they went forth, and passed by the encampment of their enemies!
- 5. Now their way lay across the war path of the barbarians, whose frightful yellings were heard upon the tops of the mountains! and resounded in the forests! making the hearts of the husbandmen to quake for fear!
- 6. And the two men passed on, notwithstanding the dangers that were in the way! The phantoms of imagination purfued them! the fear of their enemies added wings to their feet!
 - 7. The wild beast of the forest passed by!
 - * Col. Willet and Lieutenant Stockwel.

in For ccessfu

l unde Genera rnold-(occasi

the Bri

king o f in hi e hold men o

overno thereo

Heen

th, an

a rustling was heard among the trees! Ah! there (they cried) is the son of the murderer! the found of his feet is heard!

- 8. Again they hear the terrific yell! the hair of their flesh stood up! they made read dy the instruments of death! they prepared to meet the dreadful foe!
- 9. The lamps* of midnight marked out a path for their feet—they journeyed for wards with fear! and the terrors of the night environed them round about!
- 10. They rejoiced at the dawning of the Philip. day! they had longed for it more than for hidden treasure! and when the sun arose days, they were an hungred.
- 11. A table t was spread for them in the wilderness! the fruit of the bramble sustain ed them! until they arrived in fafety to the encampment of their brethren, beside Still said, lo Water. †
 - * The stars. + They breakfasted on black berrie ‡ The proper name of the place.

12 men when

were of me

13. men, Philip

that B not hi

14. 1 was a

hange nanged

no mo

15. f thou

Ah! erer!

! the e rea-

pared

ed out 1 for

in th fustain to th

k berrie

12. Now Philip* was chief captain of the men of war who were at Still-Water; and when he was told that the garrison in the hold were in a strait, he gathered together a band of men.

13. And Benedict offered to go before the men, and conduct them to the hold, and Philip rejoiced thereat; inafmuch as he knew that Benedict was a valiant man, who turned e night not his back in the day of battle.

14. And there was a notable prisoner with of the Philip, and he was called a fpy (now a fpy an for was accounted an abominable thing in those arose days, they were not suffered to live, but were hanged up before the hoft, even as a dog is langed on a tree, and they knew their place no more!)

15. And Benedict spake to the man, and de Still said, lo! now thy life is forfeited, nevertheless I thou wilt go to the camp of our enemies and make them afraid, fo that they flee be fore us; then thou wilt do well;

Generel Schuyler. + Jost Cuyler.

16. And thy life shall be given thee for prey; thy possessions shall not be given to another, neither shall a stranger possess thin inheritance; but it shall be thine all the day of thy life, and thy children after the moreover the favor of the great Sanhedin shall rest upon thee!

17. And it was fo, that the messenge promised to do all that Beneditt had bidde him. And he went forth towards the cam of the barbarians;

18. and when he came to the camp, he to ported the words that had proceeded out of the mouth of Benedict. Moreover he told them, That the host of the people of the provinces was firong and mighty, even a very great multitude.

19. And while he was yet speaking, lo one of their own tribe also came into the per amp, vords.

20. he tid

ney al ne fear

ear of 21.] as for iem to

revail, rong

nowin uls!

22. F much llow

ot go eace at outh

e be

for ven to thine

e day

thee

edrin

Tenge

biddet

camp

he to

out o ne told

ne pro-

a very

ng, lo

amp, and rehearfed unto them the fame vords.

20. And when the barbarians had heard he tidings; they were all discomfited, and hey all arose as one man to slee away! for he fear of the host of Columbia, and the ar of Benedict had fallen upon them!

21. Now when St. Leger heard thereof, he as fore vexed; and he fought to perfuade em to tarry with him; but he could not evail, although he offered them of the rong water of Barbadoes to drink; well nowing they loved it even as their own uls!

22. Furthermore, they reproached him, inmuch as he had told them that if they would llow after the host of Britain, they should pt go forth to the battle, but should be at ace and burn the sweet scented plant* of the outh country, and regale themselves with nto the perfumes thereof! Only with their eyes

^{*} Tobacco.

they should behold the rebellious sons of Co. lumbia, fleeing before the hoft of Britain, even as the fricken hare fleeth before the hunters!

23. So the host fled, and left much spoil and the people of the provinces gathered there of in great abundance.

CHAP. XXXI.

General Burgoyne advances, serds a detachmen to seize the stores at Bennington; they aren pulsed with vigor, and a great part of the de tachment cut off.

OW it came to pass, in the seventee hundred and seventy-seventh year of the great Founder of the Christian sect, that the armie 5. A of the North moved towards each other; ever is man the army of Britain, under John, whose sur h in th name was Burgoyne; and the host of the per pres of ple of the Provinces, under Horatio * a chie lected captain and fervant to the great Sanhedrim:

General Gates.

were 1 ingto umbia

2.]

rive t

3. A hat th f the hings, e was

ance o 4. H

ir-nam

ing, a nd he

Co

even

ters

poil

here

chmen

arere

the de

enteer

e grea

a chie

edrim:

2. Now when Burgoyne was told that there were large stores of corn and fine flour at Benington, collected for the foldiers of the Coumbian host, he purposed in his heart to derive the people of the Provinces thereof.

3. And he prepared an army of valiant men, hat they might go forth and take possession f the stores; for verily he needed those lings, even the corn and the fine flour, for ewas in a strange land, and had not abunance of bread.

4. Howbeit he took counsel of a man whose ir-name was Skine; he was a servant of the ing, and an officer in the host of Britain; d he had possessions in that country.

armie 5. And the man, even Skine, spake after r; ever is manner, faying: lo! now thou purpofofe furth in thy heart, to fend an army to feize the the people of the Provinces, that are llected together at Bennington. Sowelfor'

* Colonel Skine.

9.

so jo

and ight

d th

10.

ennin

mhed

ere

ople

with 11.

as tolo

e stor

id he

me w

12.

rlongs

ilderne

e Ger

arbaria

6. Know thou of a truth, that my hear is not with thy hear in this thing, for verily thy fervant knoweth, that the people who coupy the country round about, are true ment they love the king, and are zealous to obferve the laws of the realm of Britain:

7. Send therefore only a small companyon the young men of the host, and let them a forth, and let the banners of Britain, even the royal ensign of the king, go before them and verily thou shalt behold the people of the to it, like the gathering of the congregation before the doors of the synagogu when alms are wont to be given.

8. And it was so, that Burgoyne, the chicaptain hearkened to the voice of Skine, at he sent a certain captain with his compand who came from the German country, a five score of the Barbarians of the wildern followed after them.

* Col. Baum.

hear

verily

ho oc

men

to ob

S.

di 181 panyo

hemg

i, eve

them

ople g

congre

nagogu

the chi

eine, 31

6969

9. And another captain with his company bjourneyed forwards, and these were comanded to encamp at Battenkill, that they ight be ready to help the foremost company; d the captain's name was Breyman.

10. Now there were a captain nigh unto ennington: he was a fervant of the great mhedrim, and his name was Stark; and ere was with him a large number of the ople of the Provinces, who were come out withstand the servants of the king.

11. And when the captain, even Stark, as told that a company was coming towards estores, he sent forth a band of chosen men, dhe appointed a valiant man whose furme was Gregg, to go before them.

ompan 12. And when they had journeyed a few atry, a rlongs. lo! they faw the Barbarians of the vilderness approaching, and a company of e German soldiers were in the rear of the arbarians.

[·] General Stark.

13. Then the people who were with Gregg fled and reported the tidings to Stark, chie captain in that place.

14. And it was so, that the captain gather ed his army together, and he led the people forth to the battle.

captains, namely; Warner, Williams; and man whose sur-name was Brush: these we valiant men, and went forth before the me of war.

nigh to the servants of the king of Britain they put the battle in array, army again army.

17. Now when the German captain, who fur-name was Baum, faw that the people the provinces were strong, and that the habitants of the land did not come forth to the help of the king, as Skine had said, he se a messenger unto Burgoyne the chief captai and advertised him thereof:

18.

is cor

19 nd all

eyed nd th f Sara

20.] the

erman

ll up

ar and arrior

21. A ternoc

g in o

18. Then was the captain who was encamplat Battenkill, commanded to go forth with is company to the help of his brethren, and e did-fo.

19 And the chief captain, even Burgoyne, adall the people who were with him, joureyed along the borders of the river,* nd they encamped nigh unto the plains Saratoga.

20. Now it came to pass, that the people the Provinces who followed after Stark, ll upon the company who were with the erman captain, and environed them round bout; and the Barbarians were smitten with ar and fled: nevertheless three of their chief arriors were flain.

21. And it was about the third hour in the ternoon, when the people of the Provinces hed in upon their enemies; and the breakrth to the gin of the men of war, was like the break-

* Hudson River.

chie

gather peopl

e oth and fe wer

ne me

ey dre

Britai again

, who people at the i

he fe captai

the

mac

shou

Col

The

pla

at

W

ra

80)

chief

the fe

captiv

inasm

ardou

2,

ing in of the waters upon the pastures of the husbandmen, when the rivers are swelled by the vehement driving of the east wind!

- of two hours, and the noise of the destroying engines was like the continued rumbling thunder in the midst of summer!
- 23. And it was fo, that while the peop of the Provinces were gathering the spoil their enemies, lo! the company from Batte kill were nigh at hand, about sixteen su longs off.
- 124. Then were the people of the Province strengthened by another company,* and the moved towards their enemies, as to a certain victory; and they met the servants of the king; who were taken in an evil net, a three hundred of them were slain, and seven hundred were taken captive.
 - 25. Now when the princes of the Prov ces, even the great Sanhedrim, heard ^{*} Col. Warner's Continental Reg.

of th

fwelle

ind!

e space

troyin

bling

e peop

fpoil

Batte

een fu

rovind

and th

a certa

ts of t

net, a

ind fev

e Prov

heard

these things, they rejoiced thereat; and they made a decree that the man, even Stark, should be made a chief captain* in the host of Columbia.

CHAP. XXXII.

The British army encamp on the heights and plains of Saratoga; and the American army at the Still-Water—a smart engagement ensues, wherein the Americans are successful. General Clinton makes a diversion to relieve Burgoyne, and attacks Fort Montgomery.

NOW when tidings came to Burgoyne, the chief captain of the host of Britain, how that the servants of the king were slain and taken captive at Bennington, he was sore troubled; inasmuch as the same thereof would damp the ardour of the warriors of Britain.

2. Nevertheless he pitched his camp nigh

^{*} Brigadier General.

unto the host of Columbia, even on the plains and high-lands of Saratoga; and the people of the Provinces were encamped at the Stillwater: and the space between the two armies was about sixteen surlongs.

- 3. And it was so, that as some of the young men of the army of Britain went forth to view the camp of their enemies, they were met by some of the people who followed after Horatio, and they strove with each other in the way.
- 4. And when the chief captains, Burgoyne and Horatio, heard the noise of the men of war, they put the battlein array, army against army:
- 5. And when it was mid-day, the battle waxed hot: death invaded all ranks, and many valiant men were flain; and the strife of the warriors continued until the going down of the sun:
 - 6. And there were slain, wounded, and taken captive of the men of Britain, about five hund ple o valian

the d

maini when ple of

Colur no mo

men c

8. over to das, th Moha

9. 1 ning tound Horatio and m

10.

ins

ople

till-

mies

oung

h to

were

d af-

other

rgoyne

en of gainst

battle

nd ma-

rife of

and ta-

hundred persons; and there fell of the people of the Provinces, three-score and four valiant men, who turned not their backs in the day of battle!

- 7. Now the Barbarians who were yet remaining with Burgoyne, the chief captain, when they beheld the valiant acts of the people of the Provinces, they refused to help the men of Britant, but went over to the host of Columbia; and served the king of Britain no more.
 - 8. And the names of the tribes who went over to the host of Columbia, were the Oneidas, the Tuscaroras, the Onondagas, and the Mohawks.
- 9. Now Horatio, was occupied in strengththing the camp of the people of the Provinces ound about; and there came to the help of down Horatio, Lincoln, a valiant man, and two thouand men with him, prepared with instruments or war.
- out five 10. And it was fo, that when tidings came to Henry, whose fur name was Clinton, (he was chief captain of the king's forces in the city of New-York) how that the people of the Provinces pressed hard upon the host of the king in the Northern Province;

- 11. And fearing lest Burgoyne should be discomfited, and the men who were with him, he privately fent a messenger with a written letter, thereby informing him that he purpofed at a convenient time, to fall upon a strong hold,* occupied by the great Sanhedrim.
- 12. For Henry thought to have diverted Horatio from his purpose, and that he would certainly come and fave the hold; but Horatio was in one mind, and was not to be turned.
- 13. Now when John, whose sur-name was Burgoyne, had received the written letter, he was refreshed and his spirit revived.
- 14. Then he fent two valiant men who dif guifed themselves in shepherd's apparel, and he spake to them nearly on this wife "Go lenry

* Fort Montgomery.

ye 1 ryt latir

der the

fil t

rom t vilder n the 15.

eporte

f Hen

16. oldier

umbe ghting

nd ren

17. om th came

em f

i the of the f the

d be him, ritten urpo. trong

would Ioratio

1.

red.

el, and

(he we now to the city of York, and tell Henry the chief captain concerning all things relating to the war, and that there is provender for the host until such a day, and that the host will abide here, in this place, unfil then." School and the Shipping of the State of the

- 15. And it was fo, that the men went forth om the camp, and journeyed through the vilderness, and escaped the perils that were the way; and they went into the city and eported all the words of John, in the ears verted of Henry, whose fur-name was Clinton.
- 16. Not many days after, there came more oldiers from the island of Britain, and the umber of them, was about two thousand ne was ghting men; and Robertson, a chief captain er, he ad renowned in war, came with the foldiers.
- 17. And when the foldiers were landed ho diffeom the ships, and had refreshed themselves; came to pass at a convenient feason, that "Go lenry numbered the men of war, and led em forth to battle.

f Bri

ons.

23.

ng tha

hat th

nies, t

rmed

nto the 24.

vas on

and a nd to

OWD *

18. And they came against the hold* that was called by the name of the chief cap tain, who was flain by Guy, the king's go vernor. the country with the said

19. And they besieged the hold round: bout; and Henry fent a meffenger to the go vernor of the garrison, and demanded of him the vic to deliver up the hold and all that was therein

20. Howbeit, the governor refused to obe the fummons, and strengthened himself a gainst the men of Britain.

21. Nevertheless, the army of Britain rul ed forwards, they bore down all opposition they ascended the battlements of the enemy they brake into their defenced places! How beit, the governor and his brother, and tw hundred men escaped, and fled to the moun tains; and the noise of the battle of the war riors was as the found of many waters.

22. And the flain and wounded of the me

^{*} Fort Montgomery.

that of Britain, were about three hundred perons.

23. Then the people of the Provinces, feeng that the army of Britain was strong, and hat they could not stand before their enenies, they burned another hold, that was in he vicinity of the former; and two of the erein armed ships of Columbia, lest they should fall nto the power of the enemy.

> 24. And about the fame time, Tryon, who as one of the king's governors, lift up his and against the people of the Provinces; nd to shew a zeal for the king, he burned a own* with fire, and all that was therein.

> > * Continental Village.

ne wat

cap.

s go

1361 ind a ie go

of him

o obe

felf a n rulh

fition

nemy

How

and tw

moun

S.

the me

CHAP. XXXIII.

The British army distressed and nearly surrounded—their provision begins to grow scarce—endeavour to extricate themselves, but are repulsed with considerable loss. Intrepidity of General Arnold. General Frazier slain.

NOW after Burgoyne the chief captain had waited until the appointed time, and no help appeared, when provisions for the host began to fail; then he drew forth about fifteen hundred chosen men, and went to view the hole of the people of the Provinces.

- 2. And he hoped to have found out a way whereby he might deliver himself from the danger that surrounded him: and two chie captains were with him, namely, Phillips and Reidesel.
- 3. And as they were going towards the hole of Columbia, lo! they were met in the way by some of the servants of the great Sanho drim.

king of th of bra mout

fix she and m the ea

hedrin hered hered he for

he ba ines.

6. N

inces pon th ot pre

rass ar

aree fo

4. And there were with the servants of the king who went out to view the hoft, fome of the destroying engines, that were made of brass, and the balls that issued out of their mouths, weighed five hundred and feventyfix shekels, after the shekel of the fanctuary; and many of the fons of men were felled to the earth therewith!

o help 5. And when the servants of the great Sanbegan sedrim appeared, lo! the brazen engines utn hun tered their thunders, and the people were he hold hin to shelter themselves behind the trees of he forest, which were a fure defence against he balls that were shot from the brazen enines.

6. Nevertheless when the people of the Prollips and inces had taken courage, they rushed forth pon the tall men* of Britain, but they could ot prevail, because they were as a wall of rass and united together, and were like to a aree folded chord, not eafily broken.

ound--en-

Gene-

repul-

n had a way om the vo chie

the hol the wa t Sanhe

^{*} Grenadiers.

7. And the battle waxed hot, and the greater part of the host of Britain, and the army of the people of the Provinces were engaged in fierce war.

- 8. And Benedict distinguished himself that day, and gat great honor; inasmuch as he brake through the host of Britain, and entered into their places of defence, and draw them before him as sheep are driven from an pasture to another.
- 9. And it was fo, that while the men of war were striving for the victory, that a large company of the German soldiers sled, and to turned not again to the battle; and the men of Britain imputed the loss of the battle them.*
- the camp, and Burgeyne the chief captain we forely troubled; the perturbation of he thoughts were like a troubled fea: moreove the famine prevailed in the camp, and the

eople han h

11.

ng er ame

rom eople

ues tl

ray to

ating Reides

ompai f his

weet c

fhis h

lace,

Britain, lace he

^{*} Capt. Moony, in the House of Commons.

eople whom he had despised, were stronger han he.

- 11. Furthermore, the balls from the destroying engines were shot into his camp; they ame from the North and from the South, rom the East and from the West; for the eople of the Provinces occupied all the aveues that led to the camp, and there was no vay to escape.
- ating upon these things with Phillips and Reidesel by his side, chief captains and his ompanions in the war; lo! the dead body shis friend, with whom he used to take weet counsel, whose sur-name was Frazier, was borne upon the shoulders of the servants shis houshold:
- 13. They were carrying him to the high lace, called in the language of the men of Britain, the Great Redoubt, the burying-lace he had chosen for himself.

mons.

great

arm

gaged

f tha

as h

enter

drave

m on men o

a larg

and re

he me

attle t

ned int

tain w

of h oreove

and th

S 2

14. Now he had defired that the usual cere monies of the dead should be omitted, and that he might be privately buried by his own fervants; nevertheless, the three captains Burgoyne, Phillips and Reidesel, struck with sorrow and indignation at the mournful and humiliating scene, and feeling their affection kindled, they could not refrain from paying the last office of love to their decease brother.

to the burying-place, and lo! while the observation fequies were performing, and the preaches was executing his office, and the people were attending upon this folemn occasion they were shot at by the servants of the great Sanhedrim!

raised clouds of dust that covered the prie and the people; nevertheless the preache altered not his voice, neither did his count nance change, during the terrific and awest scene!

arder warrinity,

gathe their 18.

Horas

goyne man Acklain and al

tain; great

The ar

 A_{NJ}

l cere

an

is ow

ptains

wit

ful an ection

n pay

ecease

v cam

the of

reache

peop

ccasion

ne grea

engine

he prie

preach

count

d awefi

17. The love of life was absorbed by the ardent affection that was felt for the departed warrior; they made an end of the sad solemnity, and the shade of the evening advanced and hid them from their enemies: but had Horatio known the occasion of the people's gathering together, they might have buried their dead in peace.

18. Now James,* armour-bearer to Burgoyne the chief captain, and Breyman a German captain, were flain; and Williams and Ackland, two valiant men, were taken captive; and about two hundred of the soldiers of Britain; and the people of the Provinces got great store of warlike spoil.

CHAP. XXXIV.

The army commanded by General Burgoyne, after several fruitless endeavors to escape, finally capitulate.

AND it was so, that the host of Britain

* Sir James Clark.

were in an evil case; their forrows were mul. tiplied; the famine raged in the camp, and there was no way to escape; and their enemies environed them round about.

- 2. For lo! when they affayed to go back again, there was the armed men of Columbia in the way; and when they attempted to pass over the river, their enemies were on the other fide thereof:
- 3. And if they abode in the camp, they were cut off by the balls of the destroying en gines, and there was no remedy!
- 4. Then the chief captain, even Burgoyne was fain to call the principal men of the hol together, that they might counsel him wha to do, and advise together touching all thing relating to the war.
- 5. And as the counsel were deliberating to gether, a ball from the destroying engine passed over the table, and they were aston own sig ished; and the fire of the warriors, even the haughty spirit of man was quenched.

6. chief ratio, and th

7. ain fe lenger Horati

the co

8. N lenger and th fore hi him in

9. A sent an captain the scri paper,

muland emies

back olumted to

they

on the

rgoyne n wha

ven th

6. Then they hastily concluded that the thief captain should send a deputation to Horatio, chief captain of the host of Columbia, and that he should send proposals of peace.

7. And it came to pass, that the chief capain fent a messenger to Horatio, and the mesinger was instructed to obtain an answer from Horatio, that would accord with the desire of the counsel.

8. Now when Horatio was told that a mefng en lenger was coming from the host of Britain, and that the enfign* of peace was carried before him, he ordered the men of war to bring ne hold him into his presence:

9. And he entreated him kindly, and he thing fent an answer of peace to Burgoyne the chief captain, and he fent certain proposals; and ting to the scribe of the host wrote the proposals on engine paper, and Horatio sealed the paper with his e afton own fignet; and the messenger departed.

to. And when John had opened the written paper, and had read the conditions, his anger was kindled; inasmuch as Horatio had demanded, that the soldiers of Britain should lay down their instruments of war, in their encampment, and become captives to the people of the Provinces.

Britain, sent another messenger to Horati with an epistle; and it was written therein "Sooner than this army will do as thou has desired, they will rush into the midst of their enemies, determined to take no quar ter."

agreed to the terms proposed by Burgoyne the chief captain; for he was not careful to exact the uttermost, or wound too deeply the seelings of the unfortunate; neither was it a light matter to captivate an army of Britons, so such a thing had not been heard of, since the years of many generations.

gnets hereu

enty-in the ay of 14.

ecord

ients f

15. 7

ves to 16. ( ly ward

wated limate

ed for

ad to f

17. B writs, his io has hould

their

Horati herein ou hal

o quar

e peo

Horati
oyne the ograd
he feel
t a ligh t a light ons, for ince the

13. And the writings were figned, and the gnets of the two chief captains were prefixed hereunto, in the seventeen hundred and semty-seventh year of the Christian Hegina, the tenth month, and on the thirteenth ay of the month, were they executed.

14. And there were taken first and last, of he army of Britain, according to the written cord of Ramsay the scribe, ten thousand hen; and large stores of all kinds of implements for war!

15. Thus the army of Britain, became capves to the people of the Provinc es.

16. O Britain, how is thy glory tarnished!

y warriors are become weak! they are enwated! they have lost that noble fire that imated their fore-fathers! my foul is troued for thy degenerate sons, whose progenirs trod upon the necks of their enemies, and ad to sheath their swords for lack of opposion!

17. Bear witness ye Henrys, and ye Edwards, when ye led forth the hardy fons of Britain against the embattled host; when one of he fons was an overmatch for thrice the number of the furious Gauls; * or call to mind, O Al bion! the reign of thy virgin-queen, Eliza who stood alone, and was prosperous in a her wars!

- 18. When thy navy, arrayed in terrif fplendor, moved fublimely upon the face the great deep, and furrounding nations tren bled at thy power!
- 19. What a humiliating contrast is here thy fons are now taken captive by a peop unused to war; whose occupation is husband ry, and whose greatest skill is in the use the plow, the hoe, and the mattock.
- 20. Is not the wickedness that abounded in thy borders, the cause of thy misfortunes for vice and luxury weaken the people, an Counc the rulers causeth them to err.
 - 21. Thus ended the warfare of the north themse
 - * See Rap. Hift. Eng. bat. of Agencourt & Creb

ern a hono were

hedri

Sir W glan

Cli

qui.

chief

in the captai Mand

warfar

ritain

of he

ımbe

OA

Eliza

s in a

terrifi

face

s trem

s here

peopl

usband

use use

oundet

rtunes

ole, an

& Creft

ern army, and Horatio and Benedict gat great honour; and an account of their valiant acts, were recorded in the books of the great Sanhedrim.

CHAP. XXXV.

Sir William Howe prepares to embark for England; is succeeded in command by Sir Henry Clinton. Unsuccessful expedition of the Marquis la Fayette.

Now the time drew nigh, when William, chief captain of all the armies of the king, in the land of Columbia, was to resign his captainship to another; and depart to the Island of Britain, to give an account of his warfare to George, the king; and to the great Council of the Kingdom.

2. And the captains of the host assembled themselves together, and prepared a great feast; and spent the night in vain sports and shows, in honor to the chief captain.

3. They made various reprefentations, marvellous to behold; they were the inventions of cunning men; and fame, the goddess of the heathens, was perfigured, holding a trumpet to her mouth, blowing out in letters of light, the praises of their chief captain, in these words, "Thy laurels shall never fade."

4. Now these men were like the prophets of Ahab, who always prophefied good unto the king; who spake deceit, and flattery proceeded out of their mouths.

5. If it was not even fo, then let the nations judge; for the laurel is a symbol of vic tory; and what marvellous act can be afcribed to William, the chief captain.

6. Now I would willingly expostulate with thee, O William! the opening of my lips shall be of right things; my tongue shall speak and the the truth, for a lye is an abominable thing een su yea, fore

7.

of B henc ax, t hou

hou 8. city, of thy

he Isl with tl s abl

hou fi 9. 7 he hor

nan wi 10. I

ain, ha

s and

tions, venti. oddes

ling a letters ain, in fade."

ophets d unto y pro-

e natiof vic-

Cribed

y lips

thing

yea, it is a detestable thing: suffer me therefore to speak, for I wish to justify thee.

- 7. True it is, thou failed from the Island f Britain, to the town of Boston; from hence thou passed to 'Hallifax; from Halliax, thou came to Long-Island; from thence, hou failed to the city of York; and lastly, hou came to the city of Philadelphia.
- 8. And when thou had fojourned in that ity, for a feason, living in the gratification f thy fenfual appetites; lo! thou failed to he Island of Britain; and left Henry, to war with the people of the Provinces, who were s able to go forth to the battle, as when hou first came amongst them.
- 9. This is the fum of thy victories, and he honour thou hast acquired thereby, no nan will wish to take away from thee.
- e with 10. Hadst thou stayed in the Island of Briain, happy would it have been for thy fame, I speak and the page of the historian would not have een sullied, with those excesses that were committed during the exercise of thy power, and which thou shouldst have prevented.

- 11. Now William, before his departure from the land of Columbia, sent some of the armed ships to destroy certain vessels that belonged to the people of the Provinces, that had sled up the river.
- 12. And the armed ships moved along upon the face of the water, and they passed by the city of Burlington that ancient city!
- 13. It was built upon the borders of the ilver, even the great river Delaware, and James,* one of the princes of the Provinces dwelt in the city: he was a notable counfellor, and expounded the law to the people.
- 14. The inhabitants of the city were kindly affectionate to each other, the way-faring man partook of their bounty, and they suffered not the stranger to perish in their streets;
 - 15. So that it became a proverbial faying
 - * James Kinsey Esq. member of Congress.

n the Lo! th o hosp

16. s a liv

is rec

17. .

nd the kindly tanne ojourn

18. he city nany f

19.]
ed, an abitati
hose w ant pla

the land of Columbia, nearly on this wife: 10! the inhabitants of Burlington are given hospitality.

16. The scribe who recordeth these things, sa living witness to the truth thereof, and is record is true; for he was a stranger from star country in the days of his youth:

17. And he came to the city of Burlington, and the inhabitants thereof entreated him sindly; and John, who was by occupation tanner, took him into his house, and he ojourned with him many days.

18. Now this John was one of the elders of he city, and an honourable man; he had many fons and daughters.

19. But alas! many of the elders are remoed, and know their places no more; their abitations are filled with strangers, and hose who knew them not, occupy their pleaant places.

T 2

ver,

the that

that

ture

upon y the

he riand inces

unfelole.

kindfaring fuffereets;

faying

: 20. Now perhaps some will say, Why doth the scribe tell us of these things? or, What is it to us, if all the inhabitants of that city are given to hospitality?

21. Be not offended, O ye simple ones! neither let envy take hold on your minds: it is the tribute of gratitude, and without gratitude, What is man? is he not worse than a brute? and the envious man is no better than he.

22. For envy biteth like the rattlesnake that lieth concealed in the forest, and their poison is alike fatal; the one destroyeth the body, and the other the noble virtues, that dignify and adorn the fons of men.

23. Such are the fruits of envy! it feedet on the wormwood and the gall, and nothing is pleasant to the taste; shun therefore the least eard the appearance thereof, lest it deprive thee of th pleasant flowers that yet remain in the garde the of life, to cheer the heart of man in his part the w fage through a thorny wilderness, replet * c vith 1

24. hips a hat be

ven a nd th

he vet hilade

25. tovin

f the p

old W

26. 1

her un

andme he frui

27. ombie,

ith numberless dangers and confuming woe.

24. And it came to pass, that the armed ips arrived where the vessels were anchored, hat belonged to the people of the Provinces. ven at Bordentown in the province of Jersey; nd the mariners burned the store-houses and he vessels, and afterwards they returned to hiladelphia, the great City!

25. Now certain fons of Belial from the ovince of Jersey, went into the city, and old William the chief captain, that the people the province of Jersey, were gathered togeeth the her under Joseph* at the field of Haddon.

> 26. And that they were a lett to the hufandmen, inasmuch as they would not suffer fruits of the field to come to the city.

27. And William was wrath, when he the leaf eard thereof; and he fent hastily for Abere of the mbie, and faid unto him, Go now, and garde ake the young ment whom thou leadest forth his pathe war, and go to the field of Haddon, and y are ones!

doth

at is

inds: t grathan

better

efnake 1 their s, that feedetl nothing

replet * Col. Ellis.

⁺ Light Infantry.

flay those men who dare to rife up against the king, and oppose his fervants.

28. So will the husbandmen rejoice; and we will buy of them the fruits of the field our gold and our filver will allure them to the city, for verily, they are weary of the money made by the great Sanhedrim, which is no better than filthy rags.

CHAP. XXXVI.

The light-infantry land in the night, near Glouces of Jose ter, on the Jersey shore, and proceed to Had donfield. The militia, commanded by Colone Ellis, have notice of their coming—they nar rowly escape.

I HEN Abercrombie gathered his young men together, and they were put into the boat that waited for them; and they rowed down the river, about twenty-four furlongs from the city; and landed in the province of Jer

, nigl ce wh

> 2. An en th high-

> > oucest 7. Th

they j devi n who

4. Ho

Jersey

n, and

s. And ined.

n; ar st ex

ew no

6. An pro

oft the field

em to

to Had

Colone

ey nar

of Jer

, nigh unto the town of Gloucester; the ce where Joseph dwelt.

; and 2. And it was in the first watch of the night, en they landed; and they passed along high-way, that leadeth from the town of of the oucester to the field of Haddon.

which 3. The found of their feet was not heard, they journeyed along the way; for they devised in their hearts, to surprise the who were with Joseph, in their fleep.

4 Howbeit, a young man of the province erfey, espied them; and he hastened and Glouces of Joseph, that mischief was intended against a, and the people who were with him.

And Joseph called a council, and he comned with the chief men who were about a; and they all with one voice, thought it ng mer expedient to depart thence, for they e boat ew not the strength of the enemy.

down 6. And it was fo, that when the people of from province of Jersey, who followed after Joseph, had gotten to the one end of the fiel of Haddon; that Abercrombie, and his company, were at the other end thereof.

- 7. And Abercrombie divided his compared into two bands; one band took their was ftraight to the town; and the other compared took a circuit, and came round by the hou of Samuel,* on Mount-pleafant.
 - 8. And the two bands entered the town that was built on the field of Haddon; at they brake the doors and windows, and ten fied the inhabitants thereof.
- 9. They had drank of the strong waters Barbadoes, mixed with the black dust, a it made them surious; they made a hideo noise! they soamed at the mouth like t wild boars of the forest, when they are cheed by the hunters! they were enraged to cause Joseph and his men had escaped.

10. The cries of the women and childr

tere h trume lespair

ay!

11. I

n. A

e city

at stoc

12. A1

name d (kille

of thowere

lg. Th

went in Britain

him n

^{*} Samuel Clement Efq.

fiel

com

n pan

r wa

hou

e tow

1; at nd ter

waters

ust, a

hideo

like t

are ch

aged l

l childr

ed.

ere heard afar off! the glittering of the innuments of war, added to their terror; they espaired of seeing the dawning of another

11. Nevertheless, they were faved; and it mpan as a deliverance that should not be forgota. And when the fun arose, the soldiers parted; and came to the house of Samuel,* at stood by the side of the river, opposite to ecity: and the boats came to the shore d took them all in.

> 12. And they took captive, William, whose name was Ellis; he was a useful man, skilled in architecture; and a small numof the people of the province of Jersey, owere with him, were also taken captive.

13. These were some of the last acts of liam, the chief captain: and it was fo, that went into one of the tall ships of the king Britain, and the people of the provinces him no more: and Henry, whose fur-

^{*} Cooper's Ferry.

name was Clinton, was made chief captain his stead.

CHAP. XXXVII.

The news of the army under General Burgoy arrives in England; in consequence of which the French Court acknowledge the Independent of the United States; and Dr. Frank Silas Deane, and Arthur Lee, Esqrs. treated with, as Commissioners. Lord Nor conciliatory bill passes both houses of Parment; is sent to America, and rejected Congress.

AND it came to pass, when tidings could be to the king of Britain, and to the great Could of the kingdom; how that the North army was made captive by the people of Provinces; their spirits sunk within the astonishment siezed the enemies of Column they looked upon one another, and will what to say!

as in a bot

vent ed wi

from

joy de

4. A ed, the of woe the friknown disobed: deous o

5. Fa

n the k

ain

urgoy

white

pende

Frank

sqrs.

d Nor

Par

jected

ngs c

eat Co

nin, th

Colum

nd wiff

2. The wisdom of the wife, was sealed up sin a bag; the eloquent orator, was like to abottle filled with new wine, and had no vent; their visages were marred, and covered with wrinkles, and fierce wrath flushed from their eye-balls.

- 3. The tables were turned upon them, their by departed like a mist that hovereth on the top of the mountains, before the fun ariseth!
- 4. And hope, the last support of the wretchd, the all-cheering companion of the child of woe, spread her downy pinions, scared at the frightful appearance of that monster, mown amongst the sons and daughters of disobedience, whose name is despair, the hideous offspring of guilt.
- 5. Far otherwise, were the tidings received North the kingdom of Gaul; * there was great ple of poicing in the land; and the joy of the people, exceeded the joy of the vine-dressers, when the presses burst out with new wine.

^{*} France, anciently fo called.

6. And the king spake, and said to his nobles, and his counsellors: "Lo now Benjament, Silas, and Arthur, who were sent by the great Sanhedrim, from the land of Court lumbia, are yet in our realm, and we have not attended to their mission.

7. "And now behold, the people of the Provinces, have taken captive the North ern army; and it plainly appeareth unto us that they are able to do their own work nevertheless, lest we offend them, and the prevent the breach from being made up be tween the king of Britain, and the people of the Provinces, we think it expedient that the men be called into our presence.

8. "And that we make a lasting covenant with these people, and that we bind them to us in bands that cannot be broken; so will our ancient enemies, the men of Britania.

† Dr. Franklin, Dean, and Lee, Esqrs.

"tain, "rits

9. A people were fine kin

ting er of his r

he end ant was in the

eventer he Chi

10. B

iis this ne peop

Brita

eing th

"tain, be weakened, and their haughty spi-"rits be humbled."

9. And the fayings of the king pleafed the people; and Benjamin, Silas, and Arthur, were forthwith brought into the presence of heking, and they did obeifance; and the ing entreated them kindly, and they partook fhis royal favor; and he made a covenant f peace with them, that was to continue to he end of many generations; and the covento us ant was figned, and the decree made known, work in the fixth day of the eighth month, in the and to eventeen hundred seventy and eighth year of up be Christian Hegira.

> 10. But it came to pass, that when George king, heard thereof, he was very wroth, nd he made war upon the king of Gaul for is thing; because he had taken part with e people of the Provinces.

> ii. Now the chief counfellor of the realm Britain, determined to try foft words; eing that the people of the Provinces, regardffers, 2.

is no

Benja nt by of Co

have

of th North

peopl

pedien ence.

venan d then

en; of Br

rs.

ed not threatening speeches: but alas! it was too late, their confidence in the king and his chief fervants, was destroyed.

12. Howbeit, he brought certain writter proposals into the great council, that seeme to speak peace and good-will to the people of the Provinces, and the great council approv ed thereof; and they were fealed with the great fignet of the realm, and fent to the land Columbia.

13. And certain men were appointed t carry the proposals, who were called Commiss late, oners; who, when they arrived on the coa of Columbia, they fent the proposals to the great Sanhedrim.

14. And it was fo, that when the princ bunter of the Provinces, had read all that was combe por tained in the written paper, and had confult together, it was rejected by the whole affer bly; for they cared not to put their trust the king of Britain any more.

15. And the commissioners seeing th were ! and the

16. the in decree

tion, i 17.

"the "finit "reje&

"we w

18.

inces, moved t was

d hi

ritter

eeme

peopl

pprov

e grea

and o

e coa

to th

onfult

e asser

trust

ing th

were lightly esteemed by the great Sanhedrim, and their mission set at nought.

16. Then they denounced vengeance against the inhabitants of the land; they put forth a decree in their wrath, and menaced destruction, in their hot displeasure.

17. Furthermore, they spake and faid, Lo! "the people of the provinces have made af-"haity with Louis, king of Gaul, and have "rejected George, from being king over them; ted to we will therefore make their country defommiss "late, and lay waste their cities."

18. Nevertheless, the princes of the Proinces, even the great Sanhedrim, were not moved to fear; well knowing that they had princ bounted the cost, and were prepared to bear vas combe portion of evil they could not prevent.

muse shipsed, to teller the

Then the fear capains

bia, and help the certile againt their mighty advertise

This son CHA P. XXXVIII.

The French equip a fleet, for the purpose of block ing up the English in the Delaware. Si Henry Clinton, being timely informed of their intentions, escapes to New-York; the land-force march through the Jerseys. Battle of Mon lo paid awal dale with ngkied George, trom being king over them AND it came to pass, after that the king pardy. of Gaul had made a covenant with Benjamin Silas, and Arthur ; od alle alle voll di

2. That he commanded his fea-captains, to was me make ready a navy of ships; and take larg over, I ftore of the destroying engines, and other ain to implements for war; and that they shoul city of make all speed, to sail for the land of Colum lervant bia, and help the people of the Province on the against their mighty adversaries, the men Britain.

3. Then the fea-captains did according mitheder 8 miles are and laurante alle alle all the nade 1 heir f

ecaus

4. 1 loped bia, b hould and if

host of

5.] host o

6. 7 of Bri men of Il that the king commanded them; and they nade ready the ships, and the mariners spread heir fails to the wind, and hastily departed; ecause the king's command was urgent.

- 4 Now the fervants of the king of Gaul, loped to have arrived on the coast of Columia, before the ships of the king of Britain hould escape out of the great river Delaware; nd if it had been so, verily the ships and the oft of Britain, would have been in great jeopardy.
- 5. Howbeit, Henry, chief captain of the host of Britain, was told that the king of Gaul was meditating mischief against him; morese larg over, he was commanded by the king of Briain to depart from Philadelphia, the chief tity of the Provinces; lest peradventure, the Colum fervants of the king of Gaul, should come upovince on them unawares.
 - 6. Then Henry, chief captain of the host of Britain, privately commanded the chief men of the host to have all things in readiness,

Fblock Si

f thei 1-force f Mon

e kin njamin

ins, t d other

shoul

men

rding

to be gone on a certain day; but inafmuc as he defired to keep the thing from being known to George, the chief captain, he ken the labourers at their work, as though he in clined to keep the city.

- 7. And it came to pass, in the fixth month on the eighteenth day of the month, and i the second year* after the people of the Pro vinces had thrown off the yoke of George th king; that the host of Britain departed of of the city.
- 8. And the ships also moved down the river and the fect of the tories were aftonished of of measure: inasmuch as they had hope that their habitations in the city, and all the stuff would have been preserved, and the ci possessed by the men of Britain, until Georg ain, a the king, should reign and rule as in day past.
- 9. And the host of Britain passed over the ince o river into the province of Jersey, and the he vale

ourne nd th

IO. f Col

Prince here t

II. fthe l he me

12. he hos

heless erve th f the 1

13. A and m

rmy o

²d. year after the declaration of Independence

smuc burneyed onwards to the field of Haddon, bein and they encamped there that night.

10. And George chief captain of the armies f Columbia, and all the armed men came to Princeton, in the province of Jersey, and month here they pitched their tent.

> 11. And George queried with the chief men fthe hoft, faying, Shall we go forth and offer he men of Britain battle, or shall we forbear.

> 12. And the men, even the captains of he host, answered and said, Not so: neverheless let some of the people go forth and oberve the enemy and fall upon the hinder part of the host.

theci 13. And it was fo, that Scott,* a chief cap-Georg ain, and a valiant man, and about one thouin day and men of the host, went forth to view the rmy of Britain, that was spread over the proover the ince of Jersey, even as the grasshoppers in nd the he vale for abundance.

ne Pro rge th ted ou

and i

e kep

he in

e river hed or hope all the

ndence

^{*} General Scott.

14. Now the men of Britain journeyed to. wards the fea coast, and they came to the town of Allen.*

15. And when George the chief captain heard thereof, he fent a valiant man, whole fur-name was Wayne, he was also a chief captain; and Robert, who was of the order of the priesthood, and who had received his or dination from the bishop of the city of Lud expounded the law of Moses to the people; this man even Robert, journeyed with them and became their minister; he was no Phari fee, neither was he the fon of a Pharisee, but the spirit of charity rested upon him.

16. And Fayett, the nobleman from the kingdom of Gaul, was also with them, and he commanded the foremost company.

17. Now Lee, who had revolted from the king of Britain, and who had joined himself to the people of the Provinces, had been newly released from his captivity, for the men of at ar

Britain en in t ian C

18. nand, he hof ot like e incli

19. he peo alt, h

ore the 20.

e was ive the

21. oft of he Pro

ent the nepha

ere,

[#] Allen's Town.

Britain had taken him captive; as it is writen in the nine-teenth chapter of the Columian Chronicle.

- 18. This man had been appointed to comand, and to lead the people forth against he host of Britain, but inasmuch as he was ot like minded with George, the chief captain, e inclined not to go forth.
- 19. But it came to pass, when he saw that ople; the people looked not towards him as in days alt, he changed his mind and went out be-Phari-ore the people.
- 20. And on the morning of the next day, ewas commanded to affault the enemy, and m the ive them battle.
 - 21. And when Henry, chief captain of the of Britain, was told that the people of e Provinces were coming towards him, he ant the stores, the baggage, and all the stuff at appertained to the host, away; and nephausen, chief captain of the German solere, had charge thereof.

ptain whofe

d to o the

f capder of is or

Lud, them

e, but

, and

m the nimsell n new-

nen of

- 22. Now Henry was troubled when he fav 27. the people of the Provinces, inasmuch as h was perfuaded they defigned to feize th stores.
- 23. Therefore, he led forth the choice men of Britain, and fearing that there would be a fore conflict, he fent for a large numbe of the foldiers that were with Kniphausen, th German captain, beside a company of horse men, to strenghen his host.
- 24. Then he led forth the men of war, an they moved towards the people of the Provi ces, who followed after Lee.
- 25. And it came to pass, when Lee saw in with L the design of the men of Britain, he sent wa messenger to Scott, who had under him a large as off number of valiant men; and the words lafthe n put into the messenger's mouth, were near wally w on this wife, faying:
- 26. When thou comest to Scott, say the unto him: thus faith Lee the captain, Tari thou in yonder wood until I fend thee word

Scott p notion

> e tho vell, a

oft, i eople

28. hem,

ince c o refr nd fai

29. 1

30. ar, er e fav 27. And the messenger departed: howbeit, but perceiving that part of the host were in e the notion, and not knowing the cause thereof, e thought it expedient to remove; and Maxrell, a valiant man, and a chief officer in the oft, followed after him; and the host of the cople of the Provinces were confused.

28. And the men of Britain pursued after horse hem, until they came to a town in the proince of Jersey, and there the people halted refresh themselves, for they were weary ad faint with heat.

29. And the chief captain, George, queried faw in the Lee concerning the battle: now this ne sent was a man of a haughty spirit, and he a large as offended at the words that proceeded out ords I fine mouth of George, and he spake unadvie near day with his lips.

> 30. But it was fo, that after the men of ar, even the host of the people of the Pro-fay the , Tari e word

as h

choic

woul

umbe

en, th

r, an

Provid

vinces, were refreshed, they took courag and affaulted the men of Britain.

31, And when the battle waxed hot, Geor fent two captains* with their companies, of the right and on the left of the hoft of Britain

32. But it came to pass, before they cou get to the appointed place, the night approach ed, and the people betook themselves to re

33. And George the chief captain, wrappe his cloak about him, and reposed himself u der a tree; and the warriors of the greath, t Sanhedrim lay on the ground, round abo him.

34. Now there were flain and taken capti of the men of Britain, three hundred to fcore and ten persons, and two score a nineteen were found dead on the field of b tle, on whose bodies were no wounds, they perished with the heat; for it was int midst of summer.

35. oft of oft m almu

ating t iors.

36. 1 ne peo red tw

37. N ole awa the I

me to hich is urfued 1

eary.

38. No rough

ay froi indred

39. TI

^{*} Generals Poor, and Woodford.

35. And Monckton, a valiant man of the of Britain, fell in the battle; and the of mourned for him with a great mourning; asmuch as he was prudent in all matters reing to the war, and one of the chief wariors.

36. And there were flain and wounded of e people of the Provinces, about two hunted two fcore and ten persons.

37. Now it came to pass, while it was yet ght, that the host of Britain departed, and oleaway like men ashamed, and the people the Provinces knew it not; and the host me to a certain place called Sandy-hook, hich is nigh unto the fea-coast, and George usued them not, for the people were very eary.

38. Now as the host of Britain were passing as into tough the province of Jersey, there fell ay from the host first and last, about eight ndred of the German foldiers.

39. Then after these things, Henry went cou

roac

urag

Geor

s, 0

ritai

to re rapp

self u e gre d abo

capti red to ore a

dofb ds, t

over to the city of York, and all the people followed after him.

40. And the people rejoiced, inasmuch as they had escaped from the host of Columbia, for they had learned to sear; neither did they decide the servants of the great Sanhe drim as at the beginning.

CHAP. XXXIX.

The French fleet arrive at the Delaware, and pursue the British fleet. Their design frustrated—disabled by a storm—rendezvous at Baton. Action on Rhode Island.

AND it was so, that when the king so Gaul had sitted out a sleet of ships, he set them to the land of Columbia to help the people of the Provinces, and to sight with the ships of the king of Britain.

2. But it came to pass, that the navy the king of Britain escaped out of the rive even befor

and to

3.

Britai mies, when

Gaul, the sh

5. Britain men,

the cit

bestirre anothe the me titude

the str

even the great river Delaware, a few days before the fleet of the king of Gaul arrived; and the fervants of the king were vexed besufe of this thing.

- 3. For verily, had the ships of the king of Britain remained until the arrival of their enemies, they would have been like unto a lion, when he is taken in the net of the hunters.
- 4. Howbeit, the servants of the king of Gaul, pursued after the men of Britain, and the ships came before the harbor wherein the navy of Britain had taken shelter, even before the city of New-York.
- 5. And when the servants of the king of Britain, even the mariners and all the valiant men, saw the ships of their enemies, they bestirred themselves, and encouraged one another, and there was great strife amongst the men of war, inasmuch as the whole multitude desired to go forth to the battle; it was the strife of honor, and was decided by lot.

navy ne rive

cople

ch a

mbia

r did

Sanhe

e, and

frustra

at Bo

cing

he ser

the per

with th

6. Nevertheless the ships of the king of Gaul were quiet, and remained eleven days without doing any thing against the ships of their enemies, and on the twelfth day they hoisted up their anchors, and steered their course to the Island of Rhode.

7. Now there was on the Island, a garrison of foldiers, fervants to the king of Britain; and it was determined by George, the chief captain of all the armies of Columbia, to take the garrifon captives.

8. But the enterprise failed, and the cause thereof was on this wife: for it came to pals, that the chief captain of the ships of the king of Britain, purfued after the ships of the king of Gaul; and it was even fo, that as they were preparing for an affault, lo! a great florm arose and dispersed the ships.

9. And the navy of Gaul was damaged, and suffered much by the storm, fo that they of of t were fain to flee to the town of Boston, to emen repair the ships that were hurt.

10. etwee n the

on, ar ween

Vajor (surpi nearl

comm Nov

in, w hief ca leek f

llowed pen co

2. An

ed to d

10. Howbeit, there was a sharp conflict etween the people of the Provinces who were n the Island, and the soldiers of the garrion, and there fell down flain on each fide, beween two and three hundred men.

CHAP. XL.

lajor General Grey, with a party of the British, surprise and put to death with their bayonets, nearly a whole regiment of American dragoons commanded by Col. Baylor, at Old Tapaan.

Now there was a man in the host of Briin, whose sur-name was Grey; he was a lief captain in the host, and he went forth feek forage; and certain of the valiant men llowed after him, and they went into the en country.

maged, 2. And it was told a certain captain of the hat they of the people of the Provinces, how that ton, themen of Britain were gone forth to forage ld to distress the husbandmen.

rison tain;

aul

ith-

heir

isted

le to

chief take

cause o país, e king

e king as they t storm

- 3. Then he gathered together a band of men, and they were gathered together:
- 4. And the fur-name of the captain wa Baylor; he commanded a company of horse men: and they took their way towards a cer tain place, called in the vernacular tongue Old Tapaan; and being weary with har travelling, they tarried there.
- 5. And when it was night, and the horse men were fallen asleep; lo! the men of Bradl nati tain, who followed after Grey, fell fudden Euro upon them, and flew them with a greate ad daughter.
- 6. Howbeit, a certain captain of the me of Britain, spared about forty persons, as they became captive to the men of Britain he was not like unto Grey, the captain, f his bowels yearned towards the people, wh they pleaded for their lives.
- 7. O mercy, how amiable art thou at times! and what is the warrior without the is he not a barbarian? a monster set loose

cour ator h

all me

8.

hadov fame; virtue

vither

9. (

nd thy

10. nd the nighty elves, brength

he pri umble

n end.

11. 5

nd o n wa

norse

a cer

ngue

har

horfe

of Br

dden

gre

he me

ou at

out the

courge the human race, on whom the crenor hath fet a mark, like he did on Cain, that Il men may shun him as the destroyer.

- 8. The glory of Britain passeth away like a hadow; her degenerate fons consume her ame; she is verily, like unto a harlot, whose intue has vanished, and whose beauty is withered.
- 9. O Albion, thou wast once the desire of Il nations! thou fat as a queen in the midst Lurope! the mildness of thy laws were he admiration and envy of thy neighbours, and thy fons were honored in foreign lands.
- 10. But now thou art lightly esteemed, ns, at and the people whom thou scornest are become Britain nighty in power; yea, they fay within themain, felves, The mighty are fallen! and by the e, whe rength of our arms, we have brought down he pride of Britain! her haughty spirit is umbled! the days of her triumphing is at n end.
- t loofe 11. Say no more amongst yourselves, We will be avenged on fuch a nation; for lo! you could not stand before this people.

ntfloti 4

CHAP. XLI.

The British forces are successful under General Prevost, and colonel Campbell, and establish themselves in Savannah.

AND it came to pass, about the end of the year, that there was war in the Southern Provinces, even in Georgia.

- 2. And the men of Britain gathered themfelves together under a certain captain, whose fur-name was Campbell; he was from the country of Caledonia, and a fervant of the king of Britain.
- 3. And the people of the Provinces were gathered together under Robert,* who was a chief captain under the great Sanhedrim.

4. A pppose hem is

5. A ent a mas Ballong

6. N ad an

he me

vere g

7. A nuch a ound a ble of ti nd fou ives.

8. M

Savann

^{*} General Robert Howe.

- 4. And he went forth before the people, to ppose the soldiers of Britain, and waited for hem in the way.
- 5. And when Campbell heard thereof, he ent a mighty man of valor, whose fur name ras Baird, and a company of soldiers went long with him.
- 6. Now these men took a curcuit, and they ad an Ethiopian for a guide; and when they ad gotten to the place appointed them, then he men of Britain who were with Campbell he captain, rushed upon the people who vere gathered together under Robert.
- 7. And the people were discomsited, inasnuch as the men of Britain environed them ound about; and there were flain of the peoof the ole of the Provinces, about one hundred men, nd four hundred and fifteen were made capives.
 - 8. Moreover, they took a strong hold, hat was built upon the river, even the river avannah, and two score and eight destroying eneral

tablif

! you

ad of thern

themwhole

n the

were

wasa

1.

engines, the ships and the merchandize; sur thermore, they took captive, one score an eighteen officers, and one score and the mortars, part of which were made of brass and part of iron.

9. The chief town of the province, and a bundance of spoil, and large stores of provision for the host; all these things did to men of Britain take in the space of a few hour

- 10. And after this, it came to pass, that chief captain, whose sur-name was Preva and a large company of the servants of the king of Britain, joined the former company and they became one band, and pitched the tents in that place.
- 11. Then the people of the Provinces wh had escaped from the battle, sled up the rive and escaped, and many of them went to the own habitations; for their spirits were sunk en, because of the men of Britain.
 - 12. And there was peace throughout th

ovinc ere se

A and

eneral Point Amer

posted

THE

und fer

ne Ch

nd on aptain Arong

inces,

e was

uch s

novince of Georgia; and the king's courts ere fet up as in time past; and there was if and quietness in the land.

CHAP. XLII.

eneral Wayne's successful expedition at Stoney Point—the fort, after being in possession of the Americans a few days, is evacuated, and reposted by the British.

HEN it came to pass, in the one thouand seven hundred and seventy-ninth year of the Christian Hegira, in the seventh month, and on the sisteenth day of the month; a chief the aptain of the host of Columbia, went against strong hold, called by the people of the Proinces, Stoney Point.

2. The name of the captain, was Wayne, was one of the worthies who followed aftergeorge the chief captain, and his name was such fet by.

X

e; fur re an thre

f bras

and a

did th hour

that Preval

mpany d the

es wh he rive

e funk

out th

- 3. Now the hold was defended by valian men, and no man could approach nigh there to, but with great jeopardy: Howbeit Ways put his life in his hand, and the men who were with him, were men of valour.
- 4. And it was about the eleventh hour of the night, when the people went against the hold to take it.
- 5. And two small companies, twenty is each company, with their captains, Gibbs and Knox, went before the men of war; and these were called the forlorn hope.
- 6. And it was so, as they came nigh unt the hold, the men of Britain shot at the from the walls, and seventeen of each com pany were slain.
- 7. Nevertheless, Wayne and the men who were with him, rushed forwards, as a wide wasting stream, and gat into the hold, and the garrison beholding the valiant acts of the men of war, their spirits sunk within them.
 - 8. Then they delivered up the hold and a hat wa who to

9. A he kin and fiv

were m

inces,

men.

captair them a tious c

12.

gold o

wroug

the ch

valian

ther

Wayn

n wh

our

nst th

enty

Gibbon

F; an

unt

t then

h con

en wh

a wid

d, an

of th

nem.

and a

hat was therein, unto the chief captain, Wayne, who took the garrison captive.

- 9. And there were flain of the servants of the king, about threescore and three persons, and five hundred and two score and three men, were made captives.
- 10. And there fell of the people of the Provinces, about fourscore and eighteen valiant men.
- aptains: moreover, they gave to each of them a medal, whereon was engraved, a cu-tious device emblematical of their exploit.
- 12. To Wayne, they gave a medal of fine gold curiously wrought; and to the other two captains,* to each of them a silver one, wrought in like manner.
- 13. Furthermore, they congratulated George, the chief captain, inalmuch as he by his wil-
 - * Lieut. Col. Fleury, and Maj. Stewart.

dom, had projected the enterprise, and had the direction of the undertaking.

14. And the armour-bearer of Wayne, wa promoted to be a captain: but the people spared the garrison, and did not put then to death, as the men of Britain had done.

d when tidings came to Henry, how strong hold was taken, he gathered together an army and came out to take it again from the people of the Provinces.

16. But when George heard thereof, h thought it not convenient to defend the hold inasmuch, as it would cost the lives of many in a f men, and the hold was not fo defirable a pol fession as to make it worth the life of one of the people.

17. So the people were commanded to de desira part from thence, after they had destroyed pass, the works, and removed the implements of gover war, and all the stuff that was therein.

18. And Henry, who was the king's chief captain, took the hold on the third day after hat th offeffi

> spain a ceed

N t he mo o the

2. he S

Gibra 3.

nd hat the people of the Provinces had gotten offession thereof.

e, wa

people

then

ne.

y, hov

thered

again

of, h e hold

s chief

y after

CHAP. XLIII.

pain declares war against Great Britain. ceedings of the British in Carolina.

N the fixth month, on the fixteenth day of he month, the king of Spain joined himself othe enemies of the king of Britain.

- 2. For the fervants of George the king had f many a a former war, taken a strong hold from e a pol the Spanish king, the name thereof was one of Gibralter.
- 3. It was fituated near the fea, and was a to de desirable place, inasmuch as no ship could troyed pass, without first obtaining permission of the ents of governor of the garrison.
 - 4. Moreover it was built upon a rock, that looked towards the four corners of the earth to the North and to the South to the East and to the West.

X 2

- 5. And the king of Spain beheld the hold with an envious eye, inafmuch as it was near unto his kingdom, and had been taken from him by the servants of George the king, at un awares.
- 6. So he brought a strong army against it even a very great multitude, and he planted batteries against it, and essayed to beat down the walls thereof, but he could not prevail for the hold was very strong, and valiant men defended the place, and shot down the fervants of the king from the battlements thereof
- 7. Moreover the fervants of the king of Pro Gaul, even a mighty army came against the ptain, hold, and joined themselves to the servants emen of the king of Spain; the bellowing of the de of the stroying engines, was fuch as had not been known in the reign of George the king, nor in 11,] the reign of his father, nor his father's father Sou

8. A Elliot, great h

failed t cast do n the

he bo of the

9. F this t ere at the p e hath

10. K eing m

arth.

and

hold

near

from

at un

nst it

lanted

down

evail

it men

he fer

nereof

ot been

8. And the governor, whose fur-name was Elliot, and all the foldiers in the hold, gat great honor; the servants of the two kings, filed to accomplish their enterprise, but were all down in their minds, as thou mayest read the book of Ramsay the scribe, and also in he book of the siege, written by an officer f the garrison.

9. For the scribe holdeth it not expedient this time, to record the acts of nations who ere at war with the king of Britain, fave onthe people of the Provinces, with whom hath sojourned from the days of his youth.

to. Know then, that the great Sanhedrim, ing mindful of their brethren in the Southing of Provinces, appointed Lincoln to be chief nst the ptain, who was to order the battle against ervant emen of Britain, and to lead forth the peothe dese of the Provinces against them.

, noring it. He was a valiant man, and dwelt in father Southern province, called Carolina, and the chief city of the province was named

12. This province was the Columbian Aceldema:* rage and revenge twin-monsters from the infernal regions, stalked from house to house! and from cottage to cottage!

13. Their voracious jaws distilled huma gore! and their impious hands were besmear' with the blood of thousands!

14. Mercy! the darling offspring of he ven! the friend of man! beheld with a glidening eye their destructive progress, and dropt a tear for the madness and folly of ma bloodshed, she slew to the bright courts of he father, where she bewailed in secret the dieffects of destructive war!

16. Here those who were brethren, the so of one mother, strove together in the siel neighbour made war upon neighbour!

* The field of blood.

hofe of fr

watch watch

17. he dis

er of

m;" a ot evil

crets;

enot t

19. T

ou shan, if t

rectitu

20. V

in, sh

med hose who had been united by the strong bands f friendship, slew each other! yea, they vatched by the way-side, as the panther ratcheth for the fawn in the forest!

17. Nevertheless, they called themselves he disciples of the great Prophet and Founer of the Christian sect; who is called in the atin tongue " Jefu Chifti Salvator Hominm;" and who faid to his followers, "Resist ot evil, and love your enemies."

18. " My foul, come not thou within their crets; unto their affemblies, mine honor, enot thou united; fo shalt thou be at peace, d thy reward shall be fure."

19. The storms and tempests that overtake the die intemperate, shall not come near thee; ou shalt enjoy with rapture the feast of rean, if thy feet turn not aside from the paths rectitude.

our! a 20. Wisdom shall dwell with thee, she all make thee acquainted with thy divine oin, she will shew thee what a wonderful

Acel fron

use to 191 numa

mear

of he aglil , an

of mai eity ar

s of h

the fo the fiel thing is man! "How noble in reason! how excellent in faculties! in form and moving how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like God! The wonder of angels, the paragono animals !? - dan's come add to association oung

CHAP. XLIV.

Major Lee surprises the British garrison. Powles Hook. Unsuccessful expedition again Penobscott.

NOW there was a certain young man fro Virginia, and his name was Lee.*

- 2. He was a star of the first magnitude the rifing empire of Columbia, he was a chief; h among the warriors of the Provinces.
- 3. His rising glory shone forth like t beams of the fun, his valiant acts eclipsed t

* Major Lee.

fame o the Wa

4. A n the of the

the me

3 407 10 13

5. A Lee, n

hose l he gre

6. AI

he garr

7. Ar arrison

e garri

ken caj

8. Thi oung m

aces ho

ame of his companions; they beheld in him the Washington of a future day.

4. And it came to pass, in the same year, the fixth month, on the nineteenth day fthe month, that the young man, even the young man Lee, went against a garrison of he men of Britain, at Powles Hook.

- 5. And there was but a small company with lee, nevertheless they were valiant men, hose hearts were true, and whose love for ison. The great Sanhedrim was perfect.
- 6. And the number of men who went against he garrison, were about three hundred two an from fore and ten men.
- 7. And lo! when they came against the arrifon and affaulted it, the men of Britain sach ed; howbeit, one score and ten persons of egarrison were slain, and eight score were ken captives.
 - 8. This was one of the valiant acts of the ung man Lee; and the princes of the Proaces honored him with many honors.

again

ge ja

hov

ing

hov

ke

on o

5 51

itude

like t ipfed t 9. Moreover, they gave him a medal of pure gold, of fine carved work, wrought by the hands of a cunning workman, that his children and his children's children to many generations, might know of his valiant acts and emulate his fame.

that the men of Britain, even a small company of them, were prosperous in another place even at Penobscot; where they built a strong hold, and placed a garrison of soldiers there in; and the name of the captain of the garrison, was Macleane.

Boston, knew of a certainty that the men of Britain were strengthening themselves at Perobscot they were troubled.

us go against the servants of the king of Br tain, and chace them from our borders before they become too strong for us, (for the hole was not yet finished.) 13. elves hips, ountr

vas ca

gainst urned th upo

15. And to looming

the ga

16. Hople of the left fulled 1

e Prov

ld for

al of it by

at his many acts

nings.

ompa

place

fron

own o

at Pen

the hol

13. And the men of war gathered themelves together, and they prepared armed lips, and Saltonstall * a mighty man of war, as captain of the ships; Lovel † a man of that ountry, went forth before the men of war.

14. And the people went forth willingly gainst the men of Britain, for their wrath urned against the king, even as the fire burnhupon the altar.

15. And when the captain of the garrison there as told that the people of the Provinces were garri oming against him, he encouraged the men the garrison to strengthen the hold.

16. Howbeit, it was not finished when the men o cople of the Provinces came against it; netheles Macleane the captain of the garrison, fused to deliver the hold to the people of e Provinces.

Come le 17. And when they had fought against the g of Brald for the space of fourteen days, and were rs befor *Com Saltenstall. + General Lovel.

weary because the men of Britain held it a gainst them.

18. Then the chief men of war among the people, consulted together, what the should do, and they faid amongst themselves Let us even now take the strong hold by force and let the young men go forth in their might and scale the walls thereof; so will the gar rison be fmitten with fear, and we will tak them captives.

19. But it came to pass, that while the per ple were affembled together about this thing lo! the tall ships* of the king of Britain, a peared nigh unto the hold.

20. Then were the people difmayed, in much as they knew that the ships were strong and mighty, and that the destroying engin in the ships were many in number.

21. And it was fo, that the mariners outh; the king's ships, were too hard for the mades it of B the w the m

22. own p

Souther towa Nov

and of 2. It

y the he Nor aft; a

ereof,

nd mile

dree th

^{*} Commanded by Sir George Collier.

it a

ongl the

elves force night

ne gar II tak

d, ina e strot

riners

engin

r.

of Boston, and they were fain to slee into he wilderness, and leave the ships a prey to he men of Britain.

22. And the people went every man to his wn place, and the garrifon was faved.

CHAP. XLV.

he per Southern expeditions—General Prevost marches thing towards Charlestown, &c.

in, a Now the war raged in many places in the and of Columbia:

2. It is a mighty continent, and is bounded y the lands and feas near the Artic Pole, on le North; and by the Atlantic sea on the aft; and by the Southern ocean on the outh; and by the Pacific ocean, which dithe m des it from Asia on the West; the length ereof, being between eight and nine thound miles, from North to South; and about iree thousand miles is the breadth thereof.

numb

was a

ince,

f Brita

nd faic

hy ther

truth,

t in yo

- 3. It is a land which our fore-fathers knew name not, even Solomon with all his wisdom was stranger to it.
- 4. The country was called Columbia, i 7. similitude to the name of a famous sea cap inces tain, * a native of Genoa, who through man one sc perils arrived on the coast thereof, in the ons w fourteen hundred and ninety-fecond year of the the Christian Hegira, on the tenth month, by the the seventeenth day of the month, was the hildre land found out.
- 5. And it came to pass, that the servan of the king of Britain in the Southern pr 8. T. vince, even in Georgia, moved towards Por in pitc royal in Carolina, and landed on the Islat at me to take possession of it.
- 6. But it came to pass, that Moultrie, mighty man of war, drove them off Island; and a great part of the officers mongst the men of Britain, were slain;

Christopher Columbus.

knew name of their captain was Gardiner*; and the number of the men who followed after him, was about two hundred.

was

ia, i

Tervan

oultrie,

off

fficers

lain;

7. And there fell of the people of the Proinces, eight persons, and the wounded were man one score and two men. Now one of the perin the ons who was flain, was Wilkins; he had charge year of the destroying engines, and was beloved nth, by the people; he was the father of several was the hildren, and was the first officer in the proince, that was flain in the war with the men f Britan.

ern pr 8. Then the servants of the king of Brids Por in pitched their tents at Ebenezer, and they e Islat at messengers amongst the sect of the tories, d said: If now ye are the king's friends, by then do ye delay to shew yourselves men truth, when the enemies of the king are t in your borders? Thus did the men of ^{*} Major Gardiner.

Britain stir up the sect of the tories to fight against their brethren.

9. And when the tories had heard all the words of the msengers, they came out of their lurking places and armed themselves, and set out to strengthen the men of Britain.

try, they plundered the inhabitants and spoiled their goods.

- they gathered themselves together and pursued after them, and a certain man whose sur name was Pickens,* went before them.
- 12. And they overtook the fect of the to ties at a brook of water, called Kettle Creek and they slew two score of them, and recovered the spoil, and their chief man was slain whose name was Boyd.†
- 13. And the residue were discomsited at fled to their own houses, and the people

* Col. Pickins.

† Col. Boyd.

he Payen :

ain w Savan

14.

under other opposi

name fervant the riv

16. tain of came u

people ty-two

17.

Il the ut of elves,

counfpoil.

raged purfu fe sur

the to Creek reco s flair

ted an eople

yd.

fight he Provinces hanged five of them on a tree, ven as a shepherd hangeth a dog for worryng the sheep.

- 14. Now the servants of the king of Briain were encamped on one fide of the river ritain. Savannah, and the people of the Provinces inder Lincoln, a chief captain, were on the other fide thereof, even at the Black Swamp pposite to Augusta.
 - 15. And Lincoln sent a chief captain whose name was Ash,* and fifteen hundred of the bervants of the great Sanhedrim, paffed over the river, and they encamped at Briar Creek.
 - 16. But it came to pass that Prevost, captain of the fervants of the king of Britain, came upon them at unawares, and many of them fled; and seven score and fifty of the people were flain, and one hundred and fixty-two were taken captive.
 - 17. And Moultrie, knowing of a certainty that the men of Britain were strong and many, he retired from them.

* General Ash.

- 18. Then Lincoln the chief captain, fenthere hundred of the men who followed alte him, to help the people who were wit Moultrie.
- 19. But the greater part of the peop's fol lowed after Lincoln, who was minded to g to the chief town of the Province of Gorgia.
- 20. But when he was told that Prevost the chief captain of the king's servants, was on his way to the chief town* in the province of the South, then he pursued after him, even to Charlestown.
- 21. Now the men of Britain took the high way along the sea-coast, and Moultrie and the men who were with him, retired from the servants of the king.
- 22. And the men of Britain went on their way and the inhabitants of the town mad

* Charlestown.

haste to battlern

destroy

23. the tox

men;

the gre

Genera Prop

ing i

Ani

men of what n

Britair

and of

id m

, sen

d afte

wit

e fol

to g orgia.

ost th

vas o nce o

, ever

e high

nd th

m th

n thei

made

haste to strengthen themselves, and they built battlements round about, and planted the destroying engines thereon.

23. And there were gathered together in the town, three thousand and three hundred men; who were all true men and servants to the great Sanhedrim.

CHAP. XLVI.

General Prevost before Charlestown—Sundry Propositions rejected by the British; who being informed of the approach of the Americans, filed off towards the Islands near the sea.

AND as Prevost the chief captain, came high unto the town, the inhabitants and the men of war consulted amongst themselves, in what manner they should receive the men of Britain.

2. And they fent messengers to Prevost, and offered in the name of the inhabitants of the province, to remain quiet, and wait the issue of the war between the king of Britain and the people of the Provinces.

- 3. And they spake and said: If the king of Britain should prove too strong for the people of the Provinces, then we will be subject to the king; but if the people of the Provinces should prove too strong for the king of Britain, then we will serve the great Sanhe drim, and be as the rest of the Provinces.
- 4. Howbeit, Prevost would hearken to none of these things, but commanded that the men in the town should deliver themselves captives to the servants of the king of Britain.
- 5. Notwithstanding, when Prevost was told that Lincoln was nigh at hand, and a lagre company with him, he departed from the town so the sea-coast, not very far from the town.
- 6. And there they pitched their tents; and the people of the Provinces, under Lincoln.

so pito

7. Anthe

inces, nen of

8. And the slves

ontinu ninute

fthe pad ten

9. A nd he he kir

fhis 1

10.

h pitched their tents nigh unto the men of

- 7. And it came to pass, in the fixth month, athe twentieth day of the month; that a-out twelve hundred of the people of the Pronces, attacked about seven hundred of the en of Britain at Stono Ferry.
- 8. And the men of Britain were very strong, or they had cast up banks to secure themelves against their enemies; and the battle ontinued for the space of one and twenty inutes, and there were slain and wounded sthe people of the Provinces, seven score and ten persons.
 - 9. And Roberts,* a mighty man of valor, ras slain; he was from the country of Albion, and helped the people against the servants of he king; he had been a warrior in the land shis nativity, in the days of his youth.
 - * Col. Roberts.

ait th Britain

e king ne peo Tubječ Provin

sing o Sanhe

cen to ed tha nfelve of Bri

a lagre m the

s; and Lincoln

fited and grew weary of the war, and wen to their own houses, and followed after Lin coln the chief captain no more.

- parted, and halted not until they came to Port-Royal, where they left a garrison; and the captain of the garrison was named Mail land.†
- until they came to Savannah, the place of the encampment.
- 13. Now they plundered the inhabitants and gat much spoil; howbeit, it was no much to their honour, and the people of the land eyed them with an ewil eye.

hend all ... 'Col. Meitland.

Count full

aga

thief came v

annal o driv

m pr

2. A

Britain p the

rout, ain ga

3. N

Wen

r Lin

fo de

ne to

; and

Mait

r wa

of thei

oitants

vas no

of the

CHAP. XLVII.

Count D'Estaing arrives on the coast—Unsuccess.

full expedition of the French and Americans against Savannah.

NOW it came to pass, that D'Estaing, hief captain of the navy of the king of Gaul, ame with the king's ships into the river Samnah, to help the people of the Provinces of drive the men of Britain from the southern province, even from Georgia.

- 2. And the ships cast anchor in the river, igh unto the strong hold which the men of Britain occupied; moreover, they blocked the pthe harbour so that no ship could pass in tout, except those to whom the chief capain gave permission.
 - 3. Now there were in the river, four ships*
 - * 1 Fifty-gun ship, and 3 Frigates.

that belonged to the king of Britain; and of the James * a famous, sea-captain and servant to t is f the king of Britain, was the commander of the ships.

- 4. And it was fo, that the ships and a their tackling, fell a prey into the hands of D'Estaing.
- 5. And when the people of the Provinces groves heard that D'Estaing had come into the rive with a large company of foldiers and mariners to fight against the garrison and to take it,
- 6. Then they rejoiced with an exceeding great joy, and they faid amongst themselves at act. Verily the men of Britain are entrapt, an we will take them even as partriges are take in a net.
- 7. For will they not be enclosed round that fle bout, even by the waters of the river, and Alle the king's ships, on the one side, and by mighty army on the other fide; so we wi enter into their strong places, and the hear

Sir James Wallace.

8. very own f f the

and fo

9. heir

he clo heir la

10.

ther; in, e

II. dthem

aul,

orce th

; and of their valiant men will melt like wax, when ant to is spread before the fire.

- 8. Then there will be rest in our land, and very man shall set under the shade of his nd allown forest, as in days past, and the shouting nds of the warrior shall be turned into melody, and fongs of gladness shall be heard in the vinces groyes.
- 9. The affrighted virgins shall return to heir cottages, they shall gather together at he close of the day, when they rest from ceedin heir labour, and tell to each other the valinselves at acts of their beloveds.
- 10. Thus did the people encourage each ther; for they looked on the men of Briin, even as the eagle looketh upon the fawn hat sleepeth upon the fides of the mountains er, and Alleghany.
- 11. They came forth in troops, and joinwe will themselves to the servants of the king of aul, they esteemed it but a light thing to rce their strong holds, inasmuch as their

ler o

e rive

ariners ke it,

ot, an e take

ound

nd by e hear

courage was revived by the arrival of the

- 12. Now when D'Estaing was before the hold, and before the people of the Provinces under Lincoln had arrived, he commanded Prevost, the captain of the garrison, to deliver up the hold to the king his master.
- 13. Now Prevost answered D'Estaing wardly, and the words that he spake were words of subtilty and D'Estaing was beguiled thereby.
- 14. For Prevost spake after this manner faying: Speak clearly now to thy servan and plain, that I may understand; so will fend an answer back to thee, touching a those things, whereof thou hast signified the pleasure.
- is not for me O ye men of Britain! it is not for me to propose terms to you. Is it not the part of the besieged to propose such matters fend engin

for h

fort, who f

ison, and fa

fend, war a engine

ily th

18. Speak

hat I

ing's

fend therefore in time, before the destroying engines begin to cast forth their thunders.

16. Now Prevest wanted only to gain time, for he expected to be strengthened by a large company of the foldiers of Britain, from Beaufort, who were commaned by a valiant man, whose fur-name was Maitland,

17. Then Prevost the captain of the garison, spake smooth words unto D'Estaing, and faid: Suffer thy servant, I pray thee, to have time to confider of a fuitable answer to fend, and that I may confult with the men of war about this matter, and let the destroying engines cease to utter their thunders; for veily thou knowest, that the thoughts of the leart are confused thereby.

18. Then D'Estaing answered and said: peak now to me, and fay how long wilt thou, hat I wait for thy answer?

19. Then faid Prevost, the captain of the t not the ing's garrison: If thou wilt grant to thy fer-

Z 2

anded o de

e the

vinces

the

wari word guiled

anner iervan o will

ning al ied th

said: it is no matters

vants twenty and four hours, then will ned t we return an answer to all that thou halt pians proposed.

20. And D'Estaing hearkened unto the words of Prevost, for he knew not that he fpake the words of fubtilty; and he grant ed the petition of the garrison.

21. And it came to pass, that before the end of the given time, that Maitland, and the foldiers of the king of Britain, gat fafe into the hold; and the men of war shouted with a great shout.

22. And on the evening of the same day the army of the people of the Provinces, un der Lincoln, and the army of the king of Gaul were joined together, and became one band.

23. And they besieged the hold, and raise banks against it, and they planted the de stroying engines on the banks which they ha cast up.

24. And the men of the garrison strength nder

ich n

25. an to

ant o fthe

ermis ave li

26.

aing a nasmu

ntend

imfel.

27. e giv

and ch he ca

out th

will ned the hold, and feveral hundred of Ethia half pians were employed to work day and night nder the direction of a man well skilled in ch matters, whose sur-name was Moncrief.*

to the re the

d, and

at fafe

houted

e day

es, un

f Gaul

band.

d raise

he de

iey ha

rength

hat he 25. Now when the destroying engines begrant an to utter their thunders, Prevost the ferant of the king of Britain, and chief captain fthe garrison, sent out a messenger to request ermission for all the women and children to ave liberty to go out of the hold.

> 26. Howbeit, the chief captains, D'Esaing and Lincoln, refused to grant his request, nasmuch as they suspected that Prevost only atended to deceive them, as he had shewn imself to be a crafty man at the beginning.

27. Moreover, they expected the hold would given up in a shorter time, if the women and children were confined therein, and that he captain made a shew of pity, to lengthen out the fiege.

^{*} Major Moncrief.

28. But it came to pals, that the chief en gineers were consulted about the events of the he ho siege; who reported to the chief captains ons that the hold was too strong to be taken i elche that way, but with great loss of time.

2 9. It was therefore concluded, to scale th walls thereof, and to storm the battlements

30. And on the ninth day of the tenth month in the one thousand seven hundred and eighty ninth year of the Christian Hegira, was th two armies gathered together; even the arm of the king of Gaul, and the host of the people of ple of the Provinces.

- 31. The foldiers of the king of Gaul, wer in number three thousand five hundred fight ing men; and of the servants of the great San hedrim, fix hundred valiant men, and three ifon, hundred two score and ten persons from highty Charlestown, who went willingly to the battle Fere f
- 32. They went on towards the hold lik lions, and like fierce lions they rushed on their enemies!

33.

nany

34. round

ng en reat 1

35.

he fe eople

aski, into d

36.

of defe

heir e

was th

n thei

- niefen 33. But it came to pass, that the men in of the he hold stood ready, every man with his weaptains ons of war; and the destroying engines aken i elched out their thunders, and cast down nany to the earth!
- caleth 34. And the men of war were fain to give ments found, and fled from the fury of the destroymonth og engines; and the men of the garrison got eighty reat honor.
- 35. And there were flain and wounded of nearm he servants of the king of Gaul, six hunhe peo red one score and seventeen men; and of the cople of the Provinces, two hundred. Po-, wer wki, a notable warrior, was wounded even d fight into death.
- eat San 36. Now the number of the men in the gard three ison, was about three thousand, who were s from highty men of valor; and not many of them ebattle were slain, inasmuch as they were in a place old lik f defence, and fecure from the affaults of heir enemies.

CHAP. XLVIII.

Subsequent operations to the Southward. General Clinton besieges Charlestown. General Lincoln capitulates, &c.

NOW when it was told to Clinton, chie captain of the men of Britain, who were warring with the people of the Provinces in the land of Columbia, that D'Estaing was beat en in battle, and had left the coast.

- 2. Then he prepared to go to the Southern Provinces, and renew the war in those parts: for he thirsted after honor, and the renown of the warrior was precious in his sight.
- 3. Therefore he gathered together a choice company, and put them into the ships of the king his master; and Arbulbnot was captain of the ships.
- 4. And he left Kniphausen to be captain in his stead, in the city of New-York.

nd great

6. Invere in

troyin

7. In and eight

ain las

rom (

8. A. stard,

Mand,

9.

- 5. Then the ships, with the armed men, adgreat store of implements for war, launchforth into the great deep.
- 6. Now the voyage was perilous and they ere in great danger, and the horses designed or the war were lost, and many of the detoying engines; nevertheless, the men got fe to land.
- 7. In the year one thousand seven hundred s best and eighty, in the second month, on the eleenth day of the month, did the men of Briin land; and the place where they landed, as about two hundred and forty furlongs om Charlestown, the chief city of the South rovince, called Carolina.
- choice 8. And they pitched their tents on John's of the land, at Stono ferry; and not many days aptain fterwards, they gained possession of James' land, and a certain place called in the lanwage of that country, Wappoo Cut.
 - 9. Then they pitched their tents on the

Gene Genera

chie e war

in the

uthern parts: enown

ain in

banks of the river, even Ashley river, opportunity fite to the city.

- 10. Now the governor of the province whose name was Rutledge, commanded all the people to come forth against their might adversaries, the men of Britain.
- 11. Howbeit, they were not mindful obey the governor; for the spirits of the per ple were quenched, they remembered th battle at Savannah, and fear took hold their minds.
- 12. Nevertheless, the people who were the town, behaved themselves valiantly, an toiled hard to strengthen the town; and Line pro coln was over the men of war.
- 13. And the men of Britain were strength ened by twelve hundred men from Savannah and they besieged the city round about.
- 14. And they cast up banks against the cials. I ty, and prepared to batter the walls thereof and the town's men also made ready for the tain battle.

15. 4 ver,

van, ot at

16. onth.

nat Cli

ned by ork.

> 17. 7 y, th

e tow: nger t

18. E

the n ould erein.

foug

oppo

vinc

all th

night

lful (

nold d

vannah

it.

15. And the ships of the king moved up the ver, and as they passed by the Island of Sulvan, Pinckney, a captain and a valiant man, ot at the ships and they were marred.

16. And it came to pass, in the fourth onth, on the twentieth day of the month; at Clinton, the king's captain, was strengthhe per led by three thousand men, from the city of ork. ed th

17. Therefore, on the morning of the next y, the men of war, even the chief men in were intown confulted together, and fent a mefly, an oger to Clinton the king's captain, with cernd Lin proposals.

18. But he would not hearken to the words rength the messenger, for he supposed that he ould shortly take the city and all that was erein.

the co 19. Then the people who were with Linhereof fought valiantly, and shot at the men of for the tain from the battlements, and from the walls of the city; and moreover they hope hat w that their brethren in the Provinces, would Bri come to their help.

A a

20. But when all hopes were fled, and the men of Britain were preparing to affault the town; the men of war who were therein judged it to be most expedient to hearkent the words of Clinton the king's captain, for they could not long withstand the force ofth destroying engines, which cast out of the mouths fearful things, and horrible to nam

21. They were called bombs, and we made of iron; they fell into the town, the burst asunder, and the broken pieces there flew about the streets of the city: and w unto that man that was smitten by them! Y verily, for they marred whatfoever th touched, and respected not the person of an

22. And in the fifth month, on the elever day of the month, the city was delivered to the men of Britain; and the men of w

23. eslie,

ritain

24.

Briti ve per es, ab

> 25. E the to the : oufan ves, w

the P oying woul

nd th

ilt th

e of th

of the

nam

d we

n, the

there

and w m! Y

er th

n of an elever

vered

en of v

hope hat were therein, became captives to the men Britain.

> 23. And on the morning of the next day, eslie, a captain and servant of the king of itain, took possession of the town.

herein 24. Now the flain and wounded of the men kent Britain, were two hundred three score and in, for repersons; and of the people of the Provins, about the fame number.

> 25. And the number of the captives taken the town, were five thousand men; howbethe foldiers of the garrison were only two oufand five hundred: and amongst the caples, were a large number of the chief men the Province; and four hundred of the deoying engines were taken.

CHAP. XLIX.

Subsequent operations in South Carolina, 1780.

AND it came to pass, in the fifth month hall b on the twenty-second day of the month, the byal] Clinton fent forth a decree throughout all the fm Southern provinces.

- 2. And the writing of the decree was mad known to all the people; and the substance the decree was on this wife:
- 3. That inafmuch as the fervants of the great king, the king of Britain, have ove come all those who rose up against him;
- 4. Therefore, be it known unto all pe ple, unto whom this decree shall come well the inhabitants of the cities as of the fo elts,
- 5. That from and after the date hereof, any one shall be found to disobey the con nands ower

6. 7 heir

rey t

7.]

nainin nitted fthis

nd w ient;

8. I ence a ceptre

heir re ook.

9. A

nands of the king, or oppose his princely ower, either in word or deed;

- 6. Their houses shall be taken from them, heir lands and their flocks shall become a tey to the fervants of the king; and they month hall be accounted as aliens and enemies to his h, the byal house, and be deprived from beholding all the fmiles of his benign countenance.
- 7. Furthermore, if there are any yet reas mad naining in these Provinces, who have comtance nitted grievous fins against the person or laws fthis great king, whose power is unbounded, nd whose mercy is great towards the disobeient :
 - 8. Let them instantly come into our preence and confess their crimes, and the royal ceptre shall be extended towards them, and heir rebellion shall be blotted out of the king's ook.
 - 9. And they shall be called the king's friends,

A a 2

1780.

s of the ve ove

m; all pe come

the fo

ereof, the con

and be promoted to honor; yea, they shall have a name amongst his chief fervants.

10. Now the men of Britain were lifted up in their minds, for they supposed that the fpirit of rebellion was quenched in the South ern Provinces, and that the people were sub-

- 11. Howbeit, fearing lest their brethren from the other provinces, would come and stir them up to rebel, they placed garrison of foldiers in many places in the province.
- 12. Then Clinton the king's captain, lef the province, and went back again to the city of York, and great part of the host went will him; howbeit, he left four thousand valian men, to keep the Southern province; and Cornwallis was chief captain over the men o war.
 - 13. Now, though the inhabitants wer heir fa humbled, and the fear of the men of Brill be tain weighed down their spirits, nevertheless they fecretly defired their overthrow.

14. nd e

hey w rim:

15. ountr

ants des o

umpte. 16.

vas va ke ho

orest ince.

17. nawar

f defe

18.

ed up at the rim:

ethren

ice. in, lef he cit at with valian ; and

theles

shall 14. And they communed together in secret, nd encouraged one another to hope that hey were not forgotten by the great Sanhe-

- south 15. Now there was a valiant man of that e sub-country, who had not submitted to the ferants of the king; he was as a thorn in the des of the men of war, and his name was ne and umpter.*
- rrison 16. Marion, also was next unto him, and ras valiant in battle: these two men were ke hornets; they let the men of Britain have orest all the while they remained in the proince.
- 17. They frequently came upon them at nawares, and furprifed them in their places men of defence.
- 18. Succeeding generations will hear of s wer heir fame, and rejoice, and their valiant acts of Brill be known in distant kingdoms; strangers shall praise them in the streets of the ci ty; their names shall be mentioned among the valiant of the earth; even as the worthic of David, are mentioned in the Book of the Chronicles of the kings of Ifrael.

^{*} Col. Sumpter.

CHAP. L.

The Battle of Camden successful on the part the British. 1780.

Now the princes of the Provinces, eve he fer the great Sanhedrim, were troubled at the tidings from the Southern province.

- 2. And they confulted together, how the and the should help their brethren who were oppres doration ed by the servants of the king of Britain.
- 3. And it came to pass, that they cast the paly ni eyes on Horatio,* remembering his valia core and acts, and how he took captive the Norther of we army.

* General Gates.

4. hey a oopp provin

5. . fter h pla nd he

reat S le of oft of

> 6. E ocked

7. N

epend

nongl

the ci 4. And when a convenient time was come, hey appointed Horatio to lead forth an army orthic oppose the men of Britain in the Southern of the province, even in Carolina.

- 5. And Horatio and the men who followed fter him, journeyed forwards, and came to place, the name thereof was Clermont; nd he published a decree in the name of the reat Sanhedrim, wherein he invited the peole of the province to join themselves to the oft of Columbia, who were come to drive s, eve he servants of the king from their borders.
- 6. And it was fo, that a great multitude ocked to the banners of the great Sanhedrim; ow the and the number of the people who were with oppres foratio, was about four thousand men.
- 7. Nevertheless, there were amongst them aft the paly nine hundred fighting men, and three valia core and ten horsemen; the residue of the orther of were called militia, who were not to be epended upon in the day of battle.
 - 8. And when Cornwallis knew of a certain-

part

17.430

d at th

in.

ty that Horatio was coming to offer him battle, the per he haftened to meet him, and about one thoufand and feven hundred footmen, and three man, hundred horsemen followed after him.

9. And they came to Camden, nigh where Horatio was encamped, in the eighth month on the fifteenth day of the month; and when the fun was fet, the army of Britain wen forth to fall upon the people of the Provinces, in their camp at Clermont.

10. On the same night did Horatio go th int forth, and the host of the people followed after him; and it came to pass, that they were met by the fervants of the king of Britain and Armand* a chief captain of the army, and who led the horsemen, was assaulted by the horsemen of Britain, and the men who were with Armand were discomfited and fled.

11. Then were the men of war confused and wist not what they should do: howbeit kept

12. lay ap

vas 1

nd it inia, were to ain, v

13.

North Britain w on

ehave

14. lace hem f

hem u orfem

^{*} Col. Armand.

attle, he people were brought into right order and thousept their places; nevertheless, a valiant three man, in whom Horatio put great confidence, vas flain.

where

lowed

men

12. And when the dawning of the next onth day appeared, there was a very fierce battle; when and it came to pass, that the men from Virwent inia, even the militia of that province rovin were terrified, and fled from the men of Briain, who rushed upon them as the horse rushtio goth into the battle.

13. The militia also from the province of lorth Carolina, they fled from the men of Britain : howbeit, the people of the Provinces army, who were fighting on the right* of the host, faulted ehaved valiantly.

ed and 14. Nevertheless, they were fain to give lace to the foldiers of Britain, who drave hem from off the field of battle, and pursued nfused hem upon swift horses, and the captain of the owbeit orsemen was named Tarleton.

^{*} Right Wing.

15. Now there was a foreigner who had inces joined himself to the people of the Provinces. and was skilful in war; he was next to Hora Corne tio, he was stiled a Baron, and his name was breng Kalb; this man was fore wounded and taken captive, and the next day he died, for his wounds were grievous; and the princes of the Provinces ordered a monument to be erec ted to commemorate his worthy acts.

- 16. And the men of Britain took from Ho ratio, eight of the destroying engines, and of carriages,* two hundred, and great store of goods and stuff for the host.
- 17. And many men were wounded and flain in the battle: and after these things, many of the people of the Provinces fell away to the men of Britain, for they were restrained by fear from helping their brethren any more.
- 18. Now when tidings came to the king's chief counsellors, that the people of the Pro-

king,

19.

re in eeing ng up

ad th

Major tive p up ar a gre and a

Fergu oners. HE

ho was

had nces.

taker

r his

es o

erec

m Ho

, and

t store

ed and

hings,

laway estrain

en any

inces were smitten before the servants of the ing, they were very joyful, and they praised Hora Cornwallis the captain; and they prepared to e was drengthen themselves yet more and more.

19. Verily they were like unto men who re in danger of drowning in deep waters, who eing the small branches of the willow floatg upon the furface, they hastily grasp them, nd their hopes perish.

CHAP. LI.

lajor Ferguson of the 71st. Regiment, an active partisan, stimulates the disaffected to take up arms in support of the British governmenta great number of this description embodies, and after an obstinate resistance are defeated— Ferguson is slain, and the residue made prisoners.

king's HERE was a man in the army of Britain, he Pro ho was zealous to ferve the king, and he was a valiant man; he stirred up the people to join the men of Britain against the people even against the servants of the great San hedrim.

Bb

- 2. And he went to the dwelling places of the sect of the tories, and encouraged then to fight under the banner of George the king and to make war upon their brethren.
- 3. And there were gathered together, large company of the sect of the tories, unde Ferguson, and they were encamped on King' Mountain, and they were encouraged by the servants of the king of Britain.
- 4. And it came to pass, that when it was known unto the people of the Province that the sect of the tories were encamped of King's Mountain, and that they were encouraged by the servants of the king of Britain
- 5. Then was the wrath of the five chie men kindled against the sect of the tories, an against the servants of the king, was the wrath kindled.

6. men

and to Camp

of No

cente growe

lance 7.

d rou Provin Iriven

owbeind sho lerguso.

8. T hen tl

ere all

6. And they gathered together an army of men, who went forth against the sect of the tories, who were encamped on King's Mount; and the names of the five chief men, were ces of Campbell, Cleveland, Shelby, Servier, and then M'Dowell; the first was from the province king of North Carolina, and the rest were from he province of Virginia, where the fweet cented plant groweth, even as the cowslips under groweth on the pastures of Albion, for abun-King, dance.

- by the 7. And the sect of the tories were environdround about; and as the people of the rovinces ascended the mountain, they were riven back again by the fect of the tories: owbeit, they remained near the mountain, nd shot at the people on the mountain, and erguson was flain.
- 8. Then was the fect of the tories fore awe chie lazed, and their spirits failed within them ies, an hen they saw their champion was slain, and was the ey let fall their weapons of war, and they ere all taken captive.

eople eople

San

her,

it wa ovinces nped of

encou Britain

- 9. And the number of the fect of the tories who were taken captive, was about eight hundred men.
- 10. And the flain and wounded were three thems hundred persons, and of the people of the Provinces there were not many flain.
- 11. Howbeit, a valiant man whose sur name was Williams, was flain; he was an e nemy to the king, and fought to oppose to the utmost, the designs of the chief coun fellor of the realm of Britain.
- 12. And it was fo, that when the feet of the tories had submitted, the people of the Provinces hanged ten men of them by th neck, and they were strangled with rope made of the hempen weed, until they wer dead.
- 13. And when it was made known to Corn wallis that Ferguson was flain, he was troubled and leaving a few men at Camden, he fle to Wennsborough. Then the people in th

South and w

14.

made drim.

15. near t liger

16. laces,

ain at r, wa

f the o fort eight

für

Southern province who loved not the king, and who defired to change;

14. They took courage, and gathered three themselves together under Sumpter, who was f the made a chief captain* by the great Sanhedrim.

15. He concealed himself and his men. an e wear the rivers, even the Broad river, the ofe to liger river, and the river Evorce.

count 16. And they came out of their lurking laces, and they fell upon the men of Briain at unawares: now this man, even Sumpof the r, was as a thorn in the fides of the fervants f the king of Britain, and they feared to o forth in fmall companies.

* General.

B b 2

rope ver wer o Corn ubled

he fle

e in th

sect o

by th

CHAP. LII.

General Arnold's treachery discovered. Andre taken and executed.

AND it came to pass, in the one thousand feven hundred and eightieth year of the Chris tian Hegira, in the ninth month, on the twen ty-first day of the month, that Satan entered the heart of Benedict.

- 2. And he tempted him to deliver up the strong hold,* of which George the chief cap tain, had made him governor, (even to the fervants of the king of Britain;) for Henr the chief captain, had offered him large stor of gold, and of filver; moreover, he promded mised he should be a chief captain in the arm of Britain.
- 3. And Henry fent a young man whom h loved to manage this business with Benedical

West Point.

and t was b name

n the he br

4. one of f Bri

iver, 5.

Benedi he yo

6. 1 onful bere lawnii

7. A one poved

and the young man's name was Andre; he was beloved by the host of Britain, and his name was much fet by; he was a chief man* n the host, and valiant in war, and where Andre he brave were, there was he.

4. And the young man, Andre, went into outand one of the small armed vessels, of the king Christ Britain, and the vessel moved up the North twen liver, not many furlongs from the hold.

- 5. And when the evening was far spent, Benedict fent a boat to the vessel, to bring up the he young man, Andre, to land.
- 6. And when he was come fafe to land, he to the confulted with Benedict concerning all things Henry hereof he had written to Henry. And the ge stor lawning of the day appeared, when they had he promded their business.
 - 7. And when the young man would have one back again to the veffel, lo! she had poved down the river; for the people of the ntered

ef cap

he arm

hom h Benedici

Adjutant General.

Provinces had annoyed the vessel with some of the destroying engines; and the boatmen feared to row the boat to the vessel.

8. And Benedict spake to Andre, nearly on this wife: Behold! now the veffel in which thou camest is removed, and fear hath taken hold of the boatmen; therefore, it will be better for thee to tarry with me this night, and on the morrow, verily, thou shalt go on thy way, and fome of the young men shall conduct thee to the city.

o. So the young man, even Andre, tarried with Benedict; and fearing lest some of the people of the Provinces should take him for a servant of the king of Britain, he put of his foldier's apparel, and arrayed himfelf in plain clothing, and changed his name.

10. And when a convenient time was come he took his leave of Benedict who gave him a written paper, called by the people in those days, a pass; and it was so, when any of the people were shewn the written paper, they eed of uffere

11. 7 ward

nd :

bout

nen w

12. nen,

that p the J

13. re du efore Brit

ilty of

14. hewed

oam afte,

er of

some affered the man to hold on his way in peace.

atmen 11. Then went Andre forth, and journeyed wards the city, even the city of New York. nd as he was musing upon those things which bout which Henry had fent him, lo! three taken men were a lett to him in the way.

> 12. And the young man called out to the en, and queried with them, faying: From that part of the country are ye, and where the place of your rest?

13. And the men answered and said: We tarried te dwellers and inhabitants in the country of the efore thee, and we are servants to the king im for Britain. Howbeit, they spake in the subput of their hearts.

14. Then the young man rejoiced, and newed not his pass, but said: Even as you are, ve him am I; my business is great, and requires those afte, therefore stay me not for I am an offiany of er of the king, and the chief captain hath r, they eed of me.

rly on will be night.

go on 1 shall

self in come.

15. Now Andre wist not that the men wer enemies: howbeit, they laid hold on him and took him to their captain; and they found written papers in the hand writing of Benedit and the plot was found out.

16. Then the captain* of the band, fen the written papers that were found upon th young man, by a messenger, to George, the chief captain; and the young man, even the young man Andre, he also sent a letter to the chief captain; for he was a ready writer, and his words were enticing: the found thereof was as the found of a well-tuned instrument

17. And Andre also sent a written letter to Benedict, and informed him that he was taken captive, and his journey frustrated.

18. And when Benedict read the letter, his fure, lips quivered, and he was fore amazed, and fake he hastily called for his young men who were faithful to him, and he gat into a boat, and 22.

* Col. Jameson.

he me hich .

19. ad rec

enedic e roc

almu

inces

reat h lfa va

20. A aco

ptains en A

21.

m, ood ac

ihmer eyou

wer

him

found

, fen

on th

to the

etter to o were

he men rowed the boat to the armed vessel in hich Andre had failed from the city.

19. Now when George, the chief captain, enedic ad received the letters, he was aftonished; asmuch, as he had furely believed, that medict was a true man, and immoveable as e rock on the fea-shore! For had not the inces of the Provinces dignified him with e, the eat honor? inasmuch as he had shewn himen the fa valiant man in battle.

r, and 20. And George the chief captain, appointnereof a council of his chief men, even the chief ment ptains of the host; and the young man, en Andre, was brought before the council.

21. And when the council queried with taken m, concerning those things whereof he od accused, he answered with dignity, comer, his sure, and truth; his magnanimity did not d, and fake him, in the hour of extremity.

at, and 22. His Judges, charmed with his accom-Aments, were willing to forget the foe, in eyouthful warrior; they would gladly have found some other object, to facrifice upon the altar of justice, and public opinion!

23. They regretted the fatal necessity o cutting off from fociety, in the prime of life accom a youth, whose engaging behaviour had cap tivated their affections! A shining model of all that was excellent! A Christian, a gentle man, a scholar, a hero!

24. Here the scribe would willingly draw with d a veil over the closing scene! suffice it to say ing cou that he died regretted by a host of foes; no ands l personally so, but to the cause for which h fell.

25. Even the hardy veteran, whose ner mons of ous arm, had dealt death and destruction and en the well fought field, felt the force of hugguen manity; and the tear of fenfibility trickle down his fun-burnt cheek!

26. Even the scribe, at this late hour, hat he dea caught the foft contagion; and is not ashame to acknowledge, that the fate of Andre, et tered deep into his foul.

vour c

rel; a

his b he fo death,

23.

24. 0 Ben

25.

dains

26.

n the 22. Ye fair daughters of Albion! lay aside your ornaments, your filk and scarlet appaity o tel; and put on mourning for Andre! The of life accomplished Andre is no more!

d cap

del o

gentle

nich h

trickle

afhame

dre, et

- 23. But in the midst of your forrow, let his be your consolation: Andre died not as he fool dieth! Superior to the terrors of eath, he beheld his last moments approach y drawith decent fortitude, and a ferene and pleasto faying countenance! Thousands and tens of thoues; no ands lament his early fall!
- 24. This was the fatal fruit of treachery! Denedict, how art thou fallen! The dee nervenons of destruction laugh at thy defection, ction i and enjoy with malicious pleasure, the conof hu equences of thy fall!
- 25. The monuments of thy victory on the lains of Saratoga, ferve only to blaze forth ur, hat he death of thy fame.
 - 26. Thy name shall no more be mentioned in the fongs of the virgins, nor shall the crown of honour encircle thy temples.

27. Will not every one that meets the point with the finger, and fay: Lo! ther goeth the man who facrificed his honour of the altar of mammon, and bartered away h good name for the fake of filthy lucre?

CHAP. LIII.

General Green is appointed to the command of the Britain Southern army, in the room of General Gate Successful expedition of Lieutenant Col. Was ington, &c.

N the year of the Christian Hegira, of thousand seven hundred and eighty, in fixth month, on the fixteenth day of t month, the refidue of the army of Columb in the Southern province, collected together the at a certain place called Hillsborough.

2. upon ame t

had he ny, h

aptair could :

were f

3. 4 even 1 reproa

hat th

4. E hief c Inowe

aptain. our bre

5. A

he kin

1 th

ther

?

1 Gate

ra, o

of t

- 2. On the same day did Nathaniel * take pon him the office of chief captain: for it the same to pass, that when the great Sanhedrim had heard that Horatiot and the Southern arur of my, had been beaten by Cornwallis, the king's yay his aptain, and that the warriors of Columbia wild not stand before the men of Britain, they were fore displeased.
- 3. And their countenances fell, and they, even the princes of the Provinces, fecretly reproached Horatio; for it grieved them, hat the army was smitten before the men of d of the Britain.
- 4. And they communed with George the . Was thief captain, after this manner, saying: Inowest thou not, that Cornwallis the king's aptain, hath beaten Horatio in battle, and that in the brethren have fled from the servants of he king?
- olumb 5. And George said, yea verily, I know it : togetheren the princes of the provinces, furthermore spake and said: It is expedient that we send another captain in the room of Horatio, that he may go forth before the men of war; so will the spirits of the people revive, and peradventure they will stand before their enemies. Speak therefore, all that is in thin heart, and say if thou knowest any man in the host of the people, that will answer the expectations and desire of the princes of the Provinces.

General Green. † General Gates.

- 6. Then answered George the chief captain and said: there is a man in the army of Columbia, in whom is the spirit of wisdom and understanding, his name is Nathaniel; prudence walketh on his right hand, and integrity and perseverance are his constant companions.
- 7. And the princes of the Provinces heark ened to the voice of the chief captain, for the had determined beforehand, to rmove Hore tio; inasmuch as he had sled from the se vants of the king, and his former services were not regarded.

for the e

9. Bard " ma

" lea

" the

" fur " roo

was a army came before

lifted

that 8. Howbeit, Horatio was not cast down f Ho. for these things; for the spirit of a man was in him, and wisdom fortified his mind against the evils that were allotted to him.

> 9. He remembered that the celebrated Bard* of Albion said: "This is the state of "man:-To-day he puts forth the tender " leaves of hope, to-morrow bloffoms, and " bears his blushing honours thick upon him; "the third day comes a frost, a killing frost; " and when he thinks, good eafy man, full "furely his greatness is a ripening—nips his "root, and then he falls!"

10. And it came to pass, that Nathaniel was appointed chief captain of the Southern army; and he fet out on his journey, and came to Hillsborough on the day of the month before-mentioned.

11. Now the heart of Nathaniel was not lifted up because of this thing; inasmuch as men evive.

C c 2

their thine an in er the

aptain of Co

of the

m and ; pru d inte com

heark or the

e Hord the fe es wer

^{*} Shakespeare.

Horatio, his brother in the war, was abased eyed : in the eyes of the people; moreover he knew Elermo that Horatio was a valiant man, and he treat- at of 1 ed him with the respect due to an elder bro- ing's ther.

12. Furthermore, he justified him in all companies; and in his letters to the princes the fect of the Provinces, the members of the great and the Sanhedrim, he spake in praise of Horatio; and and wit to them he faid: In no part of his conduct, efence has Horatio been to blame, he has done his losed i duty as chief captain, and verily no man can long. enfure to himself success; for victory is not at the command of the fons of men.

13. And it was fo, that not many hours of get after that Nathaniel had affumed the command effroyi of the army, that a messenger came and bout to brought tidings, that one of the Lieutenants* from the Columbian army, had been out with a number of men to feek forage for the hoft,

14. And it came to pass, that as they jour- atil he

he arm

15.

16. N cunni

17. F ewed d e fashi

^{*} Lieut. Col. Washington.

new

all

can ot at

ours

ants*

with host.

fed eyed along the way, they came nigh unto lermont, the dwelling place of one of the eat. at of the tories who had joined himself to the oro. sing's fervants, and was made a captain* in e army of Britain.

15. Now there were about five score of nces he sect of the tories collected at the house, reat and they had strengthened themselves within and and without; and they had made a place of luct, efence called a Block-house, and a ditch ene his losed it round about; so that it was very rong.

16. Notwithstanding, the lieutenant being cunning man, and well knowing he could ot get at the house except he had some of the nand telroying engines with him, therefore he went and bout to devise a cunning device.

17. He went into the forest of pines, and ewed down one of the tall trees thereof, and fashioned it with the axe of the workman jour- atil he brought it to the likeness of one of the destroying engines, that were used to bat 21. ter down the walls of strong holds, and the vinces men stood ready, as they were wont to de the gr when the engine is ready to vomit out it thy ra thunders.

^{*} Col. Rigely.

18. And when the sect of the tories behel the wooden engine, their countenances fell for they knew the force of the engines, an choice that they could not withstand their enemies the fat they shot at the house, therefore they delive pal wh ed themselves to be captives, at the first sured to mons.

19. And the foldiers, even the army of the people of the Provinces under Nathaniel, r joiced, inafmuch as they judged it a fign future success.

20. Now the number of men who follow after Nathaniel, were about two thousan and they were in distress; for the men Britain occupied the country round abou and Nathaniel knew not how he should con nue to supply the army with food.

22. vants was th

Genera unde trem

ANI that N

at th

one ba

o bat 21. For the army of the people of the Production of the minces, had no money, except the money of to de the great Sanhedrim, which was made of filtout thy rags, and the husbandmen loathed to see it.

behel wants of the king had in abundance; this it is fell was that allured them! for this they fold the choice lambs from the flock, the bullocks and mies the fatted calves from the stalls, the principle leliver pal wheat and the fine flour; yea, they ventured their lives in pursuit thereof.

of th

iel, r

fign

llow

ousan

men

abou

d con

CHAP. LIV.

General Green divides his force. The division under General Morgan goes to the Western extremity of South Carolina; defeats Tarleton at the Cowpens.

AND after these things it came to pass, that Nathaniel divided the host into two bands, one band was commanded by himself; and

Morgan, a valiant man from the Southern province, went before the other band; and they journeyed Westward.

- 2. And Nathaniel, with the residue of the host, also journeyed forwards until he came to the river, even the river Pedee, and he encamped on the North border thereof.
- 3. And Morgan and the men who were with him, arrived at the district of Ninety.six where they pitched their tents.
- 4. And when it was told to Cornwallis, that the people of the Provinces had made an e ruption in that quarter, he fent Tarleton, man in whom he placed great confidence, to drive the people of the Provinces from thence whose
- 5. And about eleven hundred of the choice to flee warriors of Britain, followed after Tarleton and two of the destroying engines were with them.
 - 6. And the two armies came in fight of Britain

* Gen. Morgan.

each (battle

7. delay. ed wit

an aff his en

withst

8. renow aged t

emies the ho engine

day, 1

9. 1 who w

oturn

Cols.

hern

and

of the

came nd he

were

y.fix

s, tha

an e eton,

ce, to

arleton

e with each other at the Cowpens, and they putthe battle in array, army against army.

- 7. Now Tarleton despised all thoughts of delay, and the maxims of prudence he treated with contempt; but rushed forwards as to an affured victory, and at the first onset drave his enemies before him, for they could not withstand the first charge.
- 8. But it came to pass, that two captains,* renowned for warlike atchievements, encourged the men to turn about and face their enemies; and he who had taken the tories at the house, with the appearance of a wooden engine, this man turned the fortune of the lay, by furiously charging a British captain, whose sur-name was Ogilvie, whom he caused choice o flee before him.
- 9. And about the same time, a valiant mant who was renowned in war, animated the men oturn about, who rushed upon the men of ght OBritain and discomfited them.

Cols. Pickens and Washington + Col. Howard.

to. So the warriors of Britain fled, ever he m the horsemen thereof, and the destroying en cople gines were taken; three hundred of the ferved, an ants of the king were flain and wounded, and ace of five hundred made captives, five fcore of ut hir warlike horses, carriages for the use of the aptain hoft, one score and fifteen. These were al taken by the people of the Provinces, in the space of a few hours.

- 11. And the residue of the men of Britain e men who went out against Morgan the captain ver Ca fled to Cornwallis, and reported all the new sy that of the Battle.
- 12. Then was Cornwallis exceeding wroth inafmuch as he expected no fuch thing from a people whom he had despised, and had anded lately vanquished.
- 13. Then he hastily collected his army togen, eve ther and went in pursuit of the people of theices re Provinces, under Morgan, for he hoped in as regain the captives.

14. And when it was told Nathaniel, th

15. in ha rovino

over.

16. N ght, t s incr

ever he men of Britain were pursuing after the en cople, he left the place where he was encampferved, and put the men of war under the guid-, and ace of a captain whose sur-name was Huger; re of at himself set out to join the army under the of the aptain, Morgan.

15. And it was so, that the army of Briin hafted to pursue after the people of the rovinces, and so hot was the pursuit, that Britain e men of Britain came to the borders of the aptain ver Catawba, on the evening of the same e new by that the people of the Provinces had croffover.

wroth 16. Now it came to pass, that when it was g from ght, there was a storm, and the rains dehad anded in great abundance, and the river increased to a mighty stream; and the ny togoth, even the army of the people of the Proe of the ces rejoiced, and confidered the falling noped in as the interpolition of the Supreme Be-

iel, th ere al

in the

D d

17. And when the waters of the river were fallen, Cornwallis, still continued to pursue after the people, and came to the river Yadkin, and at this place also he was fain to encamp, as the rain descended and swelled the river so that the army could not pass; how beit, the host of Columbia had crossed the river, for it had not risen with the rain when they passed over.

- 18. Now while the men of Britain wer detained on the other fide of the river, lo! the two bands of the host were united; thus the people of the provinces became one army, at the first; howbeit they were not yet able to withstand the men of Britain.
- 19. Then the people of the Provinces whe followed after Nathaniel, moved forward and crossed over the river Dan into the province of Virginia, and the men of Britain followed hard after them.
- 20. And Cornwallis the king's chief-ca tain, encourged the people of the provin to cause

wea:

grea torie

he ser Picker the m

passing three ties, a

went l

24.

fer van

to come forth to the help of the king, and he caused the royal standard to be set up, that the people might slock to it, but they were weary.

- 21. He also sent Tarleton, in whom he greatly confided, to assemble the sect of the tories who dwelt on the borders of the Deep river.
- 22. And when Nathaniel heard thereof, he sent two chosen men, whose sirnames were Pickens and Lee,* in pursuit of Tarleton, and the men of Britain who were with him.
- 23. And it came to pass, as they were passing along, that they were met by about three hundred and sifty of the sect of the toties, and a man whose sirname was Pyles† went before them.
- 24. And the tories taking these men for servants of the king of Britain, saluted them n wer lo!th

were

urfue

Yad.

o en

ed the

how

d the

wher

nus th my, a

able t

ces whorward

the pr itain fo

hief ca provin

^{*} Gen. Pickens, and Col. Lee.

† Col. Pyles.

as friends; but they were foon flain by the horsemen under Lee and Pickens, and there was a great discomfiture; and the tories were fore amazed, inafmuch as they regarded not their words, and flew them when they cried out "God fave the king." And when Tarleton heard thereof, he fled back again to the main army, and on the way he slew several of the tories, whom he took to be friends to the great Sanhedrim.

CHAP. LV.

A reinforcement from Virginia, stimulates Gene. ral Green to make a stand against Cornwalli -Is defeated, and retires to Speedwell Iron works.

AND it came to pass, that four hundred were t men, whose hearts were warmed with thell me love of liberty, came from the province of Virginia, and from the adjoining province even from North Carolina.

2. of val militia again

3. army. they Dan.

were : verthe and w

went :

never

4. . the pe him, ain, a numbe

5.

2. And they were led by two mighty men of valour: and also two whole brigades of militia. These came to the help of Nathaniel, against Cornwallis and the men of Britain.

- 3. Then Nathaniel gathered together his army, and it was gathered together; and they passed over the river, even the river Dan. Now the number of the men who nds to went forth to fight with the men of Britain, were about four thousand four hundred; neverthess, many of these were husbandmen, and were unacquainted with battles, and had never seen the strife of the warriors.
- 4. And Cornwallis rejoiced when he faw Gene the people of the Provinces coming against nwalling, for he trusted in the valiant men of Briain, and to his skill in battle. Now the number of the fighting men with Cornwallis, andred were two thousand four hundred; these were th thell men of valour and skilled in war.
 - 5. And when they had put the battle in ar-

D d 2

there were d not cried

y the

o the

Carle-

nce of ovince

ray, the men of Britain rushed forwards in three columns, and the foremost company gave way; for it came to pass, that when the men of Britain were advancing, that a captain called out to another captain, saying Take care lest the men of Britain surround thee!

- 6. And when the foremost company heard the words of the captain, they fainted in their minds and fled.
- 7. But all did not flee, as the first company did; but there were many fought with the men of Britain, even the men from Virginia a country renowned for hospitality; the stood their ground and behaved themselve valiantly; they were led by a man on whom fear made no impression, his sirname was Stephens, who notwithstanding he was for wounded, staid on the sield of battle.
- 8. And the battle waxed hot, and continued for the space of one hour and thirty min utes, bia, v haz,

9. the vivalian they h

was w

the ped dred p whose

from gines.

of the eighty tents.

+

^{*} Front Line. † Gen. Stephens.

utes, according to the great dial of Columds in bia, which is equal to the ancient dial of Ahaz, king of Ifrael.

any*

when

hat

ying

round

heard

1 thei

ompa

th th

rginia

thel

nfelve

whon

ie wa

s for ontinu

ty min

ns.

- 9. Howbeit, the men of Britain gained the victory, but not without the loss of many valiant men who were flain in the battle; they had also to mourn for the loss of two valiant captains*, moreover a chief captain † was wounded.
- 10. And there were flain and wounded of the people of the Provinces, about four hundred perfons, and a valiant captain was flain, whose firname was Anderson. 1.
- 11. And the servants of the king took from Nathaniel, four of the destroying engines.
- 12. And Nathaniel collected the remnant of the host, and fled to Speedwell, about eighty furlongs off, and there he pitched his tents.
 - * Cols. Webster and Stuart.
 - † Maj. Anderson. † Gen. O'Harra

13. Now Cornwallis boasted of the victory that he had gained, and fent forth a written depar paper, wherein he invited the inhabitants to that w join the fervants of the king, promising par- Britai don and favour to fuch as had revolted from the king, if they had made their fubmission before the twentieth day of the next month; being the fourth month, in the year of the Christian Hegira, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-one.

14. Notwithstanding Cornwallis and the men of Britain, had gotten the victory of Nathaniel and the people of the Provinces; yet he was not eafy, but was troubled in his mind.

15. Now there was an officer, and a fervant of the king of Britain, who sojourned in Wilmington, a town in the Northern province, even in Carolina; this man was to men o have supplied and affisted Cornwallis and the vince. men of Britain, but the fear of the armed men of Columbia fell upon him, and prevent ed him.

16.

17. gather fued a arrive

and th

18. the ar countr Virgin

19. most e benefi the So

perfua

20.

ctory 16. So the army of Britain, were fain to ritten depart, for they stood in need of those things that were at Wilmington: and the men of ats to g par-Britain journeyed forwards.

17. And when Nathaniel heard thereof, he gathered together the men of war, and purued after the host of Britain, until they had of the prived at Ramsay's mill on the Deep river, hun-and there the people of the Provinces halted.

18. And when the people were refreshed, d the the army of Britain took their way across the ry of country from Wilmington to Petersburg, in Virginia.

19. And Nathaniel believing it would be most expedient, and withal, greatly to the ervant benefit of the people, to pass on directly for ded in the Southern province; * therefore being fully persuaded in his own mind, he ordered the was to men of war to direct their course to that prond the vince.

20. Howbeit, he fent a captaint and horfeission onth:

from

nces in his

armed event

⁺ Col. Lee. South Carolina.

men to the chief captain at Marion, whose men of camp was on the banks of the river Santee and the horsemen took their way to the cam of Marion; howbeit, it was a difficult way and the journey was long and perilous; not withstanding, they arrived at the camp on th Santee, in the space of eight days, and re ported the words of the chief captain to Ma rion.

- 21. Then Nathaniel departed from the Deep river, to go on his way to Camden is the Southern province.
- 22. And it was fo, that while Nathanie was going on his way to the Southern pro vince, that Marion and Lee with their com friends panies, befieged a strong hold, occupied by ginia, the men of Britain.
- 23. And they erected a bank against it and shot at the men who were therein, it 2. A that they feared to shew their faces; for the tain, men who were with Marion and Lee would were v shoot to a hair's breadth, they were chosen the che here w

were ta

General army Rare Came

can a

No wallis v the pe

about e

hof

itee

cami

way

not

n th

d re

Ma

the en i

banie

pro

com

ft it

n, f

men of valour, and where the valiant were, here were they. And the men in the hold were taken captive.

CHAP. LVI.

General Green, with the American Southern army, encamp within a mile of Camden. Lord Rawdon, with nine hundred men, are in Camden-They make a sally upon the American army, and gain the victory.

Now it came to pass, that while Cornwallis was endeavouring to establish the king's friends and his laws, in the Province of Vired by ginia, that Nathaniel came with the host of the people of the Provinces, and encamped about eight furlongs from Camden.

2. And Rawdon, a lord of the realm of Brior the tain, was in the town of Camden; and there would were with him in the town, nine hundred of hose the choice warriors of Britain.

3. And there were with Nathaniel, abou twelve hundred men; howbeit, three hundred of these were husbandmen, called militia.

4. And it was so, that as Nathaniel wa waiting for the men of Britain to come ou of the town, (for his fingers itched to b dealing with them) lo! according to his de fire, a meslenger came and said: Ye men of Columbia, arm yourselves, for your enemies are at hand!

- 5. Then the men of war made themselves and fift ready, and Nathaniel animated with his voice the men of war.
- 6. And it came to pass, that the men of Britain came on like the young lions of the forest! they tarried not, but rushed into the 11. battle, and there was a fierce encounter, and ritain the fervants of the king prevailed.
- 7. For when the armies joined battle, two mil companies of the people of the Provinces fled, the nd the ning,

8. H ts to

ue of

irlong

9. A to Ca

es th aptive

10. anged

he arr rs.

amde

antee

abou

ndre

ia.

nis de

nen or

emies

ien o

of the

nd the residue were confused because of this ing, and they fled also.

- 8. Howbeit, Nathaniel suffered not his spiel was to fail, but he collected together the refine ou ue of the host, and encamped about forty to burlongs off.
- 9. And the men of Britain went back again to Camden. Now the people of the Provines that fell in the battle, and were taken aptive, were in number about two hundred selves and fifty persons.
- s voice 10. Now Nathaniel caused eight men to be anged up by the neck, because they had left he army; now these men were called desert-
- to the 11. And Rawdon, the lord of the realm of , and ritain, not inclining to tarry any longer at amden, he left it, and journeyed to the river antee: howbeit he first burned the prison, , two mill for grinding the corn, and a number es fled the houses in the town.

E e

even the people of the Provinces, mightily increased in the Southern province; and they were fain to call in their men of war, who were in fundry strong holds in the province.

Provinces, Fort Mott, surrendered to the chief captain, Sumpter: next unto that, was Fort Granby; this was a strong hold, and defended by three hundred, two score and twelve men, who gave themselves up to be captives to the valiant captain, Lee; and there was also with the captain, a young man from the province of Jersey, his name was James, he was like the wild colt of Arabia and fear was a stranger to his heart.

14. Thus the men of Britain lost their post and strong holds, in the space of a few days ed Silver Bluff: and the garrison were take captive by the young men who followed after the ca

called also fe the ca

from the Expanded Natha

fo enc

hundr

Colum follow

men w

the you wards

the captain, Lee; howbeit, Rudolph, a man of valour, led forth the last company.

ain

rtili

her

who

ce.

fth

th

wa

an

an

o b

an

ma

e wa

rabia

pol

day

1 cal

take

afte

- called by the name of the British captain, this also fell to the people of the Provinces, under the captains Lee and Pickens; and the captives that were taken, were in number three hundred men, chiefly of the sect of the tories.
- 17. Thus were the men of Britain driven from one place to another, until they came to the Eutaw Springs, where they halted; and Nathaniel and the army of Columbia, they also encamped near the men of Britain.
- 13. And Nathaniel numbered the men of Columbia, even the host of the people that followed after him, and the number of the men were two thousand fighting men.
- 19. And it came to pass, that as some of the young men went forth from the host, towards the army of Britain, they were met in the way by two companies of the men of Britain; and the din of Battle was heard!

^{*} Fort Cornwallis.

- 20. The found of the warriors reached the camp; the valiant rushed to the battle! The hosts were engaged, and sierce was the strife of the warriors!
- 21. The men of the provinces of Virginia and Maryland, were foremost in the rough front of the battle; their captains, Williams and Campbell, led them to glory and victory! The renowned warriors of Britain sled, who were once so terrible in war!
- king, were taken captives; their bonds were made easy, for they were taken by a generous foe! But Campbell was slain! he died in the bed of honor, and his name shall not perish!
- 23. Nathaniel beheld with joy, the rising fame of Columbia; he pursued after the men of Britain, but he could not overtake the swift-tooted warriors of the king.

tives eleve

valiar

the fie the ri when days,

forrow mourn the pa hear t the na

wife

eyes to 26.

i-

10

he

fe

nia

gh

inis

y!

ho

the

ere

ous

the ish!

fing

men

wift-

24. The flain and wounded, and the captives of the men of Britain, were in number, eleven hundred; and there fell in the battle, of the people of the Provinces, five hundred valiant men.

25. The way-faring man, as he passeth by the field where the valiant fought, will feel the rising sigh! The starting tear will come, when he remembers the friend of his early days, who fell in the battle!

26. The mother will often, with flow and forrowful steps, visit the fatal spot! and mourn the loss of the beloved of her youth, the partner of her cares! The children will hear the sad tale, and their wrath will rise at the name of Britain! O Albion! surely thy wise men were infatuated, they shut their eyes to their true interest, and became fools!

Ecz

CHAP. LVII.

Cornwallis is strengthened by the royal forces, under Phillips and Arnold—Traverses the country—Is feebly opposed by the Americans.

NOW Cornwallis, the king's chief captain in the Southern Provinces, was lifted up in his heart; for he had a in contemplation to subdue the whole land, and establish his name amongst the sons of men, as a warrior of the first degree.

- 2. He sent forth the soldiers of Britain in troops, throughout the province of Virginia, who dispersed and put to slight the men of Columbia; for they were too few to stand before him.
- 3. For it came to pass, that Benedict and Phillips, with about fifteen hundred of the servants of the king, came in the tall ships of the Island of Britain, and strengthened his army.

4. The form the anhedr

nd abo umbia,

5. And f Brita f Brita

hrough he rive

os, the

verthele

7. No

met toge and Corn

they we

es,

the

ap-

ted

la-

lish

ar-

in

iia,

Co-

be-

and

the

nips

his

- 4. Then was Fayette, the young nobleman from the Kingdom of Gaul, fent by the great anhedrim, to oppose the men of Britain; and about three thousand of the men of Combia, was with Fayette.
- 5. And Cornwallis led forth the valiant men f Britain, and journeyed from Petersburg James' river; and when the men of war were all passed over the river, they journeyed brough the county of Hanover, and came to he river Pamunky, so called by the Barbarins, the native inhabitants of the land.
- 6. Now the army of Columbia was too weak of fight with the servants of the king; newertheless, they followed close after them, and watched their steps.
- 7. Now the princes* of the province, were net together about the affairs of the province; and Cornwallis sent Tarleton to the place where they were assembled together, even to Charlotteville.

^{*} Affembly.

- 8. And when the affembly of the prince or the heard thereof, they rose up and fled; howber the sto it, feven of them were taken captive.
- 9. And Simcoe, a chief servant of the king d his and a captain in the host; he also was sent ained th destroy the stores, that were collected at then Co certain place,* but the people had remove hed and them; nevertheless, the men of Britain de stroyed the property of the inhabitants in the atention parts.
- 10. And Fayette gained the love of all the people; inafmuch, as his goings forth befor the people, was with wisdom and prudence
- 11. And it came to pass not long after, that the chief captain, Wayne, came to the help Fayette; and there were with Wayne the chie who were captain, eight hundred valiant men.
- 12. Now Cornwallis had gotten between the army of the people of the Provinces and the even a stores, and he deemed it a thing impossible iamsbu

* Point of Fork,

13. H

14. T

gain to 15. A inces, rength

teuben : var, an

15. A

Maulted

rince or the people who were with Fayette to get owher the stores.

- king of his men by an unfrequented way, and entrained the stores that were at Albemarle; and then Cornwallis heard thereof, he was astonnove hed and fore troubled.
- thol atentions were discovered, journeyed back gain to Richmond.
- left inces, who were with Fayette, was again ence trengthened, by the warriors of the Baron the the bear and Fayette drew forth the men of the people war, and magnified the number of the people the who were with him.
- n the f the people of the Provinces was strong, the wen a very great multitude, he fled to Wilsiamsburgh; where the rear of the host was saulted by some of the warriors of Columbia, under a mighty man of valor, whole Britain name was Butler.*

17. Now about this time, Henry, chief cap tain of all the armies of the king, in the land over, h of Columbia, let in a fear that he was not faf forth to in the city of York; inasmuch as he had numbe heard, that it was in the heart of George the the hol chief captain, to come against the town; and that the servants of the king of Gaul, were to be joined with the host of the people of the Provinces, in affaulting the town.

- 18. And he fent messengers to Cornwallis to advertise him of his danger, that he migh fend to the city of York, fome of the valian men who were with him.
- 19. And Cornwallis, deeming it expedien to obey the command of Henry, and confider ing that his army would be weakened there by, he made ready to pass over the river to more fecure place, even to Portsmouth.
 - 20. And it was so, that as the army of Col. Butler.

that the that the

21. Cornw drawn

22. affonis not eaf

the me time w

field of

23. fnare t heart,

Provin

24. the ri hof Britain was preparing to pass over the river, that the chief captain, Wayne, was informed cap that the greater part of the army was passed land over, he took with him the men whom he led t safe forth to battle, who were eight hundred in number, that they might affault the rear of the host.

had

e the

and

ere to

of th

vallis

nigh

alian

dien

fider

there

r to a ny o

- 21. And lo! when he came to the river, Cornwallis, with a great part of the host were drawn up in battle array, to fight with him.
- 22. Then was Wayne the chief captain, aftonished: howbeit, he was a man that was not easily discomfited; he therefore fell upon the men of Britain, and when a convenient time was come, he led away his men from the field of battle.
- 23. And Cornwallis thinking that it was a hare to divert him from the purposes of his heart, he purfued not after the people of the Provinces, and they escaped.
- 24. Then the men of Britain passed over the river; and about this time, Cornwallis received a letter from Henry, and it was written in the letter, that Cornwallis might keep the foldiers he had with him, for the fervice of the king in those parts; and he was also advised in the letter, to occupy some convenient place, where the ships of the king, and the host of Britain might be secure.

25. And it was so, that after the chief men had consulted together; the town of York, and the Point of Gloucester were chosen, and there the host encamped; and they strengthened themselves there, and it became a place of defence.

Genera

force

peak

close

No armies

was str

in the gether

titude:

were a

beau, 2

2. A

of the c

ed men

CHAP. LVIII.

General Washington puts the American army in motion; and in conjunction with the French forces, marches to York-town. Count de Grasse arrives with the French fleet, at the Chesapeak. The British under Cornwallis, are closely invested, and finally capitulate.

NOW when George the captain, of all the armies of Columbia, was told that Cornwallis was strengthening himselfin the town of York, in the province of Virginia; he gathered together all the valiant men, even a great multitude: and the servants of the king of Gaul were also gathered together, under Rochambeau, a chief captain of the King of Gaul.

2. And they journeyed along the high way of the country, and the husbandmen rejoiced, has much as they were not spoiled by the armed men, in their passing along the way.

F f

writkeep

was fer-

con-

men ork.

and

ngthplace 3. And the host of Columbia drew night unto the town, where the men of Britain were encamped, and they hastened, that they might come to the end of their journey; in assume, as they counted it a thing that was certain, that the men in the town would fall a prey to the people of the Provinces.

4. For it came to pass, that the strong armed ships of the king of Gaul, appeared in the mouth of the river; and the marines cast forth the anchors, and the ships were fast ened by strong cables, so that they were a lett to the ships of the king of Britain, that passed that way.

as his enemies surrounded him on every side and he was filled with indignation, because of these things; yea, he was like the sierce lion, when he is pursued by the hunter: he shakes his mane in anger, his active power are stimulated by sierce wrath! he soams?

the r

6. chief

of the

7. parts they

fury!
of, an neight

8. Nand the hem in the hear and the hear and

and br warrio hey

hope!

nigh the mouth, and fuddenly springs upon the were daring foe!

- 6. Such was the wrath of Cornwallis the chief captain; accustomed to victory, hescorned to be hemmed within the narrow enclosures of the town, but often broke forth upon the men of war, like a mighty torrent!
- 7. The destroying engines from the ramed in parts of the town, declared his displeasure! riner they cast out their thunders with ten-fold fury! the earth trembled at the found thereof, and great was the astonishment of the neighbouring husbandmen.
- 8. Nevertheless, George the chief captain, and the valiant men of Columbia, regarded hem not; they were in one mind, and were pecaul not easily turned: they shot into the town, and brake down the walls thereof! the choice varriors of Britain were smitten to the earth! hey were discomfited, for there was no pope!

arm

they

in.

was

d fall

vere , that

fmud ry fide

e fierd er: h

power oams 2

9. They walked to and fro, as men who appear had loft their way in the defart! they started river, aside at the noise of the destroying engines! was C they gat into their close places of defence! they had no rest! The valiant men were dismayed! their finews were relaxed, because of the destruction both within and without.

10. Now after the space of nine days, when should the defenced places of the men of Britain were of twe destroyed, by the destroying engines, and many of the men of war were deceased, and Comm many of the chief warriors were flain; then the bu it was, that Cornwallis endeavoured to escape agreen from the town.

11. And he caused the boats to be in readiness, and when it was night, many of the armed men were put into the boats, and passed over the river.

12. But it came to pass, that a great storm arose and dispersed the boats, and frustrated the defigns of the chief captain.

13. And when the morning of the next day were t

14. writte in he

15.

16. Cornavi destroy

hunde camp.

17. enth n who

rted

nes!

ice!

dif.

ause

ut.

when

were

and

readi-

arm-

storm

trated

st day

appeared, the men who had passed over the river, returned back again to the town; then was Cornwallis discomfited, and his thoughts were troubled.

- 14. Howbeit, feeing no remedy, he fent a written letter to George the chief captain, wherein he proposed that the destroying engines hould cease to utter thunders, for the space of twenty-four hours.
- 15. And also, that suitable men, called and Commissioners, should be appointed to settle then the business of the siege, and write down the scape agreement between the two chief captains.
- 16. Then George the chief captain, did as Cornwallis had defired him; he caused the lestroying engines to cease from uttering their passed hunders, and filence pervaded the whole camp.
 - 17. And on the nineteenth day of the enth month, in the one thousand seven hundred and eighty.first year of the Christian Hegira, was the town given up to the people of the Provinces; and all the armed men were made captives, and the instruments of war, and the treasures of the king of Britain were taken.

Ff2

18. Now when the report thereof, was spread abroad into all lands, it was cause of associations as a strange thing to hear of an army of the king of Britain, going into captivity; furthermore, it was known that Cornwallis was a mighty man of valor, and the men of Britain who were with him, were all valiant men.

they were confounded! they shut their earsa the report thereof: they said one to another lo! now the sons of Belial, even the sector the whigs, seigneth this thing out of their own mouths, that the king's friends may be discouraged. The

in N Brita

dom tive;

who filen their

was

anot grea it gr

riors

Hele of were

war,

were

was

range f Brire, it

nighty n who

earsa other

f their

CHAP. LIX.

The news of the capture of Cornwallis arrives in England—Debates in Parliament.

NOW when tidings came to the king of Britain, and the great council of the kingdom, that the Southern army was taken captive; they gazed upon each other as men who had lost their wits!

- 2. They essayed to speak, but their tongues clave to the roof of their mouths! they were silent through grief, for a season! Howbeit, their enemies caused them to speak, and there was a great wrath amongst the counsellors!
- 3. And one spake after this manner, and another after that manner, and there was great confusion amongst them! for they took it greatly to heart, that the same of the warriors of Britain was fallen.

4. Now it came to pass, in the fourth month, in the next year after that Cornwallis was taken captive; that there was a great battle on the waters of the mighty ocean, between the ships of the king of Britain; and the ships of the king of Gaul: on the twelfth day of the month was the battle fought.

5. And the navy of Britain triumphed over the ships of the king of Gaul, and there was a great slaughter; and de Grasse the great sea-captain, was taken captive; and many of the ships of the king of Gaul, were destroyed by Rodney, chief captain of the navy of Britain.

6. Tremendous was the noise of the destroying engines, the sea-monsters sled at the report thereof! they hid themselves under the rocks! at the bottom of the mountains, they were gathered together! fear and amazement seized them, they trembled even in their ancient habitations!

7. Was man created for these things? Was it dei noble stroy rathe breth acts of virtue of the enjoy plenis

The Is ack

warrin defire ed ma rth

llis

eat

be-

ind

fth

ver

ere

the

and

ere

na-

de-

the

the

hey

ze-

in

Was

it designed by the great Creator, that the noblest workmanship of his hands should destroy each other? Nay verily! Was it not rather his intention, that they should love as brethren, and be continually exercised in acts of benevolence and mercy? Were these virtues more generally cultivated in the hearts of the people, the whole creation would again enjoy its sabbath, and the earth would be replenished with joy and gladness.

CHAP. LX.

The Independence of the thirteen United States, acknowledged in Europe. Peace is declared.

NOW the nations and kings, who were warring together, grew weary thereof, and desired peace, inasmuch as the sword devoured many of their valiant men, and they were not a whit the better for it : what they gained in one place, they often lost as much in another.

- 2. Nevertheless, it went to the heart of the king of Britain, that he must lose his posfessions in the land of Columbia; howbeit, there was no remedy, for his treasure was expended, and the people were weary of the war.
- 3. Then he consented that there should be sioned peace, and that the people of the Provinces "Who should be governed by their own People, in- shall be dependent of the kingdom of Britain; and tains, he refigned unto them his power and kingly nations authority.
- 4. And the Provinces in the land of Columbia, were called by a new name,* and they became one people, and the great Sanhedrim ruled over them.
 - 5. And on the twentieth day of the second
 - * United States of North America.

month and eig gira, v

Britain

.6. F of the and the

the wh

7. N

8. 66 plow-ff hooks!

nation,

9. T hall b

and blo

red

no-

of oof-

eit.

was

the

Co-

and

San-

ond

month, in the one thousand seven hundred and eighty-second year of the Christian Hegira, was peace proclaimed: and the men of Britain departed from the land of Columbia.

- 6. And each man of the host of the people of the Provinces, went to his own house; and there was joy and gladness throughout the whole land.
- 7. May it be a prelude to that peace, menibe ioned in the book of the Prophet Isaiah:
 "When the mountain of the Lord's house in shall be established upon the tops of the mounand tains, and be exalted above the hills, and all agly nations shall flow unto it!"
 - 8. "And they shall beat their swords into plow-shares, and their spears into pruning-looks! Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more!
 - 9. The wilderness and the solitary place hall be glad, and the desart shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose!"

pressed with this idea, and animated with the prospect of the dawning of that glorious morn, shall henceforth seek the shade of retirement, and repose himself under the canopy of peace, regardless of censure or praise; well knowing, that when a sew more suns have rolled their cares away, he will be perfectly insense ble both to the one and the other.

im-

the

orn,

nent,

eace.

now.

olled

sensi.

Columbiad;

OR A

POEM

ON THE

AMERICAN WAR,

IN THIRTEEN CANTOES.

By RICHARD SNOWDEN.

Baltimore:

Printed by W. PECHIN, No. 10, Second-street.

Preface.

THE Author of the following work, having for several years desired and expected to see the great events that brought about the American Revolution, in a poetical dress, but disappointed in his hopes, he ventured to make the attempt himself:—and if this short essay should prove a stimulous to some one more favoured of the Muses, who will undertake the arduous task, and carry it through upon a more extensive scale, he shall think himself so far fortunate, that his labor has not been in vain. With this introduction (and as far as he knows his own heart) divested of all vanity as an Author, Poet, or Historian, or whaever you may please to call him—He offers this epitome on the AMERICAN WAR to the candid public, and ushers it into the world as an erphan, without any other patronage than its own merit.

His a Say, What " His Mone How 'Twas Far fre Fearle: And th The fo Unseer Behind They I Fierce Diflodg To the

From t

Ah! This ho

THE

Columbiad, go.

CANTO I.

vears

ed in

fthis

oured rry it

elf so

b this

ted of

u may

CAN as an

HAT chief I fing : Columbia's fav'rite fon, His acts record, and glorious conquests won! Say, heav'nly muse! whence first his fame began, What the first glories of this matchless man! In carly life he fought the prize of fame; "His foul impell'd him to the martial plain." Monongahela's rapid streams can tell How the war rag'd, what hapless heroes fell ! 'Twas there bold Braddock led the British band. Far from fair Albion, their native land : Fearless they march'd, close form'd in dread array, And through the forest cut their rugged way : The foe at hand, disputes the dreadful pass, Unfeen they war, from trees and tangled grafs. Behind thick shades impervious to the eye, They lift the tube and leaden deaths let fly. Fierce to the charge the British troops advance, Dislodge the tawny foe and fons of France. To these dark forests form a fafe retreat, From thence they war, and Albion's fons defeat.

Ah! what avails the victor's boasted might? This hour victorious, next a shameful flight.

Brave Braddock, first of all the martial train, Press'd the cold earth, and bit th'ensanguin'd plain!
A crimson stood swift issued from his breast,
His armour stain'd, and drench'd his scarlet vest!
Then dire dismay oppress'd each warriors soul,
And chilling fear and dread, unman'd the whole.

Till Washington !—a name forever dear!
Reviv'd their ardor, and dispell'd their fear.
Dauntless he fac'd the late insulting foe,
And set them bounds, o'er which they feard to go;
Snatch'd the stol'n laurels from the tawny race,
Redeem'd the day, and dignify'd—disgrace.
A host acclaim him with deserv'd applause,
His country's champion in fair freedom's cause.
High in the list of warring-chiefs he stands,
The dread of France, and all the Indian bands.

When peace at length resum'd her gentle sway,
And dreadful heroes threw their arms away;
No more his conq'ring sword slam'd round the land,
Then agriculture smil'd beneath his hand.
The arts of peace were open to his view:—
The friend sincere, and to his country true.
Domestic cares his leisue hours employ,
And the chaste Anna, shares in all his joy.

Were it my lot, 'midst such lov'd scenes to dwell,
Joyful I'd bid th' ambitious world farewell:
But fate has six'd to man eternal bounds,
And sternly barr'd the high and spacious mounds,
Yet will I sing amidst the storms of life,
And bravely combat in the glorious strife.
Nor meanly bow to fortune's gilded shrine,
While time shall last, and honest virtue's mine.
The sickle goddess hates the whining wretch,
Who meanly truekles to be great or rich;

She hur His visi

Colu

More portion of the blick And we Divinel

In jocu Sure th Rapture

Where

Year
No foe
The tra
And ch
Nor an Purfu'd Around Here fa
Lord of
With lo

* The generation of the genera

Him felf

Sure fce

in the c per'd fo the clou She hurls him headlong from his fancied height, His visions vanish, and he sinks in night.

Columbia's fons now freed from wars' alarm, More peaceful fcenes their manly bosoms warm; Ceres and Pan, delighted, both furvey
The blissful fcenes, and mix in sportive play;
And when the sun withdraws his fervid rays,
Divinely sing beneath the spreading bays;
Where manly youths, and fairest maids are seen.
In jocund mirth upon the level green.—
Sure this is bliss, that to the heart imparts Raptures divine, beyond the reach of arts.

Years roll'd on years in this delightful strain,
No foe to dread, no harmless infants stain.
The tranquil swain went whistling on his way,
And cheerful, labour'd till the close of day;
Nor anxious thoughs of fearful woes to come,
Pursu'd his footsteps to his cheerful home.
Around his fire the little group repair,—
Here sat his wise,—his friend and children—there:
Lord of his hut,—he sagely reads the news,
With look important, as poor parson Hewes;
Decides with ease the fate of mighty kings:—
Himself more mighty, as he reads—or sings.*
Sure scenes like these will never know alloy,

^{*} The author thinks it necessary, and a duty he owes to the rising generation, thus publicly to caution school-masters (in country places especially) to pay a more strict attention to the children under their care: to keep them from that detestable method of tuning their lessons over, at their seats. Thus they acquire a bad habit, which they may never shake off; occasioned principally from the inattention or stupidity of teachers. Children should by all means be taught to read with the natural inflexions of the voice, as in speaking.

[†] I have often spent part of a Winter evening by the fire side, and in the company of those useful citizens, sneeringly term'd by the pamper'd sons of luxury, closurs and rustics; and have discovered through the clouds of obscurity, the seeds of genius, that with proper cultiva-

This fure is happiness and perfect joy.

Thus have I feen upon the close of day, Soft gentle zephyrs on the ocean play, Pleas'd with the prospect, fondly have I gaz'd, And the great architect of nature prais'd: But, chang'd how foon! to what it was before-The winds howl dreadful, and the billows roar; They lift their foaming tops in dread array-The fons of Neptune hail the Dawning day. The day, alas! no cheering com fort brings, The tumult thickens, and the death-bell rings. Some climb the frouds, the tatter'd fails to reeve, Others apart-in filent anguish grieve; The pilot's skill evades the broken waves, The bark fecures, the fearful crew he faves; Safe into port conducts them all at last, Pleas'd they carefs, for joy at dangers past.

So far'd Columbia's generous race of men,
Nor knew what florms were gath'ring thick on them.
Such direful florms no bard did ever fing,
Rais'd by great George, fam'd Albion's scepter'd king.
By want oppress'd, by sycophants amus'd,
And by his venal fervants long abus'd.—
His empty coffers call forth all the skill, Of the sage North, prime minister at will;

tion, like the diamond from the hands of the lapidary, would thine with distinguished lustre; and here perhaps, my readers will not be offended if I quote a few lines from Gay's beautiful elegy, written in a country church yard, as it is not very foreign to the purpose.

" Perhaps in this neglected fpot is laid,

" Some heart once pregnant with celestial fire;

"Hands, that the rod of empire might have fway'd,

" Or wak'd to extacy the living lyre.

" Some village Hampden, who with dauntle's breaft,

"The ittle tyrant of his fields withstood;

" Some mute inglorious Milton here may rest,

" Some Cromwell, guilties of his country's blood."

Who f While Yet win Alone
The P Must fe
Pleas
His win
The ro
The pe
Then I
And st
Easy a
But ah

Soo!
She fig
With
To feel Nor in
But on Propp'd
All bat
"Such Stern

For thi

All! Ah! w

They'r

Who fear d no adverse storms, or vile disgrace, While he posses'd his royal master's grace. Yet wife to bar against all future blame, Alone he ne'er would play a desp'rate game. The Peers and Commons in full Parliament, Must seal his plans, and give their full consent.

Pleas'd with this thought, he moves the king to fend His writs imperial, to each trusty friend:
The royal mandate goes through all the land,
The peers assemble at the king's command;—
Then North appear'd in all the pomp of pow'r,
And shew'd a bait most tempting to devour.
To tax Columbia's sons, the darling theme,— Easy and safe both lords and commons deem;
But ah! what woes! how many Britons fell
For this one cause!—be mine the task to tell.

CANTO II.

m.

king.

not be tren in Soon as Columbia heard the stern decree,
She sighing, said, my sons shall yet be free.
With eager haste, to Albion's shore she moves,
To seek Britannia in her native groves:

Nor in the groves, nor at the court was she,
But on the margin of the rolling sea!
Propp'd on a rock—beneath the willow's shade,
All bath'd in tears—she found the lovely maid,
"Such tears as patriots shed, when o'er the land.
Stern despotism shakes her iron hand."

All hail, Britannia!—thus Columbia faid:— Ah! why this forrow:—are thy offspring dead?
'I would they were, Britannia quick reply'd—
They're dead to fame—to baseness close ally'd:

Thy fons, thy happy fons, shall yet be free, And in their land enjoy bleft Liberty. The heavenly plant uprooted in this isle, Shall on the banks of the Potowmac fmile: There dwells a Son, to freedom ever dear, Shall guard its trunk, its tender branches rear. Where it shall form a broad and spacious shade, Till every tyrant's head is lowly laid: Each fon of liberty shall thence repair, And find repose and perfect fafety—there. Thus spake the maid-and slowly wav'd her hand, Then pensive, -mov'd along the furf-beat strand. Her fading splendor and departing fame, Columbia faw, and felt an honest pain. Her own bleft shores, then claim'd her guardian care, Her fons to rouze, and guide the threat'ning war.

The chiefs of Boston caught the sacred sire—
First selt the force of Briton's vengesulire:
Their port shut up—by foreign troops posses'd—
Their commerce ruin'd, and by soes oppres'd.
Brave, they sustain the surious wrath of Gage,
Affert their rights, and boldly shew their rage:
Destroy the weed, deep charg'd with suture woe,
And in the deep the baneful plant they throw.
For this, the king burn'd with revengesulire,
North fann'd the slame and spread the raging sire.

Sudden, the troops depart from Albion's coast,
And proudly vain, their martial prowess boast.
Dreaming of conquest, vainly they repeat,
Battles unfought, and future foes defeat;
Till rich with spoils, and sated with applause,
Home they return—brave champions of the laws.
Thus, they with pleasing thoughts the hours beguile,
And fondly deem'd to see their native isle.
Vain boast, vain hope! their native plains no more
Those eyes shall see—clos'd on a foreign shore: n death' reathles Nor wife To close Vidows hefe mo nd in th The king Delude Vorth gu lis hear Dr felt, lurs'd in ar from on of ar ritanni Thick lo ommot uch as Vhen th That de Thus na

THE Deep-th
The fire
The fire

o prov

* Ti as certain

and fea:

n death's eternal fleep forever bound, reathless, they lie extended on the ground. for wife, nor child, nor faithful friend was near, o close their eyes, or drop the parting tear: Vidows and orphans flock around the coast,hese mourn their husbands, those their fathers lost; nd in the violence of grief they swear, The king and North shall all their loss repair.

Deluded fouls! nor prayers nor tears prevail, Worth guides the storm, and proudly rules the gale. His heart no moving plaint did ever move, rfelt, I ween, the fost delights of love. furs'd in the school of tyranny and strife, ar from the scenes of iweet domestic life; on of ambition, tool of royal pow'rritannia trembled on his natal hour: hick louring clouds hung threat'ning o'er the land, raphetic fions of dreadful woes at hand; ommotions dire, that threaten'd instant deathuch as when Gromwell drew his lateit breath; When the fierce winds flew howling o'er the ifle, hat death, well pleas'd, affum'd a horrid smile. hus nature oft, in dreadful form appears, To prove our virtue, or alarm our fears.

CANTO III.

I HE thundering cannon now were heard afar, Deep-throated engines, threat'ning dreadful war : The streaming meteors* glide along the sky, The shepherds gaze with terror in each eye:-The village teacher looks profoundly wise, and scares the crowd with frightful prophesies, le,

^{*} The Aurora Borealis, by many of the country people effeemed as ce tain figns of divine displeasure, foretelling bloody wars and dreadful convultions nigh at hand.

Confus'd and struck with sear, amaz'd they stand, Brood o'er the woes denounc'd against the land; Sign of sierce wrath, and suture woes to men! Prognostics dire in every cloud is seen! They smite their breasts while tears of sorrow flow, Then home return, with pensive steps—and slow.

O bleft † fimplicity! much envied lot!

Short are thy pains, thy forrows foon forgot;

The breath of morn dispels each wayward fear,

Jocund and free, to chase the bounding deer:

The echoing horn resounds from hill to hill,

The nimble stag eludes the hunter's skill;

At length grown weary in the dangerous chase,

His head declines, unequal in his pace.

When lo!—the well-known cry assails each ear,

The stag is down—the end of hopes and fear.

Convivial mirth soon ends the cheerful day,

And each contented, homeward, bends his way.

Such rural sports no more the muse shall sing,
War, dreadful war! shall tune each sounding string.
Divine Urania!——all my soul inspire!
Teach me to sing with true poetic fire;
From all obstructions purge the visual ray,
And burst upon me in a flood of day;

† It has long been my opinion, that a larger share of real happinese is to be sound in the cortage of the sarmer, and that he enjoys a more exquisite relish of the comforts of life, than is to be sound in the study of the philosopher, or in the palaces of the great; his desires are naturally within a small compass and easily gratified. On the contrary, the man of sensitity, who possesses an uncommon share of understanding, improved by education, is more feelingly alive to the woes incident to humanity: true i is, he has also a more elevated notion of things, and can enjoy the feast of reason in a superior manner; yet even this he ps to embitter the cup already lagely impregnated with the warmwood and the gall, the draught prepared for a lamakind: and which, I think, better illustrated by Pope, in the following lines:

"Painful pre-eminence! you feef to view,
"Above life's weakness, and its comforts too."

hen thregardle olumbia oftem to the fons rom the and on the arade as eas'd t

While the

There
infung lither
inft plan
hence, Iwas the age faw
lofind he le vaint Vould d

See, half bour lake the did drive less bedien lowe less lothe f olumbi

hen thu

cornful

hen through the fields of poefy I'll steer, egardless of the taunting critics sneer. olumbia now, her hardy sons engage, oftem the torrent of Great Britain's rage; som whose dread navy, moor'd in Boston bay, ter sons pour forth, in terrible array. som the ship-sides the troops in haste descend, and on the strand each meets a long-lost friend: arade and martial shew, their sears beguile; teas'd they cares, and hope assumes a smile. Thile the loud cannon roar'd from shore to shore the tyrant's voice! first argument of power.—

There stands a mount, well known to modern same, fung by bards—and Bunker's hill the name: hither Columbia's sons in haste repair, is plant the standard of true freedom there; hence, from the ramparts shot into the town—swas there brave Warren gain'd the matyr's crown. We saw and stood amaz'd, and inly griev'd befind his sanguine hopes so much deceiv'd. We vainly thought the shining glare of arms, sould daunt the foe, unus'd to war's alarms. Hen thus to Howe, his brother in the war, cornful he spake, to hide his inward sear:——

See, how rebellion lifts its hated form—althound by fate to perish in the storm;
lake thou these men, in battle often try'd,
and drive those rebels to the swelling tide;
there let the fish devour their vile remains,
send their treason—such their only gains.
The bedient to command, the troops march forth,
showe leads the van, proud of his fancy'd worth;
to the fam'd mount arriv'd, brave they ascend, solumbia's sons as valiantly defend;

ıg.

ppinese a more fludy natuntrary, undere wees

ton of et even the the

es:

Th' important post both armies strive to gain, One to possess-the other to maintain: Long time in even scales the contest hung, Fierce to the last, as when it first begun. Brave Warren like the god of war blaz'd forth. For freedom fought, impell'd by innate worth; Boldly he charg'd the fierce impetuous foe, Then nobly fell beneath a fatal blow. His grateful country long shall mourn his fate, And future fons his virtues emulate.— Confusion now, and wild uproar took place. The falling Britons fill'd each vacant place : They faw their valiant fons in battle lost-Twelve hundred lay upon th' enfanguin'd coaft, Fresh British troops then pour'd from all the town, Gage stood aloof, and answered groan for groan. Columbia's fons betray'd no figns of fear, Each brandish'd in his hand a shining spear : Just then Minerva came, a heavenly form, And warn'd them quick to shun the threat'ning storm Her powerful voice the victors* all obey, And left the mount before the close of day: Slow their descent, no foe hung on the rear, And British troops were taught at last to fear.

Long time within the town the Britons staid,
To fight reluctant, of their foes afraid.
To Nova-Scotia they at length repair,
There seek repose from all the toils of war;
And patient, wait a fresh supply of arms,
Securely hous'd, and screen'd from war's alarms.

Th'ex
Full fra
The br
Bellow
Dread

The ty

Revolv Frankli Whofe The m Mature Rando Good f Washin Ponder Clad in Againf 7effers Of Ind Adams Perfua. Dickin Like L Yet he Refolv Kinsey

Gadsde

Living

And GA

^{*} The Americans in this battle, might justly be termed the victors, as they reaped all the advantages incident to a victory. The minds of the British were impressed with a formidable idea of their courage, and it had an influence upon their suture operations; inasmuch as they considered them as an enemy, with whom, if they gained any advantages, they must pay dearly for the possession.

Th' expected fuccours fafe arrive in port, Full fraught with implements of deadly fort : The brazen tubes with loud disploded roar, Bellow'd tremendous on the hostile shore : Dread harbinger offate! the voice of war! The tyrant's thunder, threatening from afar.

CANTO IV.

I HE Congress now, in folemn council sate, Revolv'd each scheme, and urg'd the close debate. Franklin in politics grown old and sage-Whose name adorns the philosophic page! The main-spring he, to great Columbia's cause, Mature in wisdom, wonth' world's applause! Randolph harangu'd, and charm'd th' admiring throng, Good sense and truth flow'd from his tuneful tongue. Washington, for noblest deeds by heaven design'd. Ponder'd each scheme in his capacious mind; Clad in bright arms, he rush'd into the field, Against the foe his conquering sword to wield. Jefferson, who pen'd the glorious plan, Of Independence and the Rights of Man. Adams, the Cato of our modern days, Persuasive spoke, and gain'd deserved praise, Dickinson was smooth, his thoughts were much for peace, Like Lucias spoke, and wish'd the war to cease: Yet he was prompt at freedom's powerful call, Refolv'd with her to rife, or nobly fall. Kinsey, for modest worth we all revere,ninds of Gadsden the prince of eloquence was there. Livingston, for pointed wit and jests severe; And Clark, for biting farcasms we fear.

courage, as they advan-

Hh

These were the chiefs, and others we could name, Who first oppos'd great Albion's lawless claim; Justice they sought in every varied form, Then feiz'd the helm, and boldly rul'd the storm, Awful the scene! the waves incessant roar, Doubts now torment, and dangers stalk before; Plung'd in a lab'rinth of perplexing cares, Death shakes his dart !- destruction wildly stares ! These high-soul'd chiefs were yet unaw'd by fear, No point they vary from the course they steer; Freedom the port, the end of all their pain, Herculian labours must the prize obtain; The blood of thousands ratify the deed,-The parent's fins shall make the children bleed : Then from their ashes gentle peace shall rise, As fragrant incense :- grateful to the skies.

CANTO V.

To Abram's plains where Wolf and Montcalm bled,
A hardy band the brave Montgomery led:
O cruel fates!—Ah! why did ye fore doom
A chief fo worthy, to an early tomb!
Macpherson too, and Cheeseman nobly fell!—
The Northern raven croak'd their fun'ral knell.
Impetuous Arnold gain'd his country's praife,
High in the front, his manly voice he rais'd!—
Howell † for focial virtues fam'd afar,
Shone in the ranks, and urg'd the dreadful war!
His graceful form express'd a noble mind,
The foul of honour!—friend of human kind!—
A tear be had for tragic tales of woe;
The wounded foldier felt his pity flow.

Gov. Howell, of New Jersey.

His he Their Ye he Your Other Whof These

Throu

On Bold 1 Behol Wher Carle This Cauti The t Mont Each Intre Who 'Till O'erl Drav Nor l That Rush Lo! The ! In th Thus This

Like

See y

Whe

How

In di

His heart, his purse, to these are open still,
Their cares he softens, and their wants sulfil.
Ye heavenly powers! such virtue be your care,
Your choicest blessings let this patriot share!
Others there were whom we forbear to name,
Whose deeds shine glorious in the lists of same.
These daring chiefs whom naught could e'er dismay,
Through hosts of soes and dangers cut their way.

On high designs each leader's thoughts were bent, Bold was their plan, but fatal th' event :-Behold them now before the fatal town, Where Wolf was flain, supporting Britain's crown. Carleton the British chief, beheld from far,-This band of heroes, threat'ning dreadful war :-Cautious to guard, and fave the town from harms, The troops he musters, and each chief he warns. Montgomery now divides his little hoft, Each valiant leader eyes the dang'rous post! Intrepid Arnold led one veteran band, Who bravely march'd along the neighb'ring strand; 'Till to the town's extremest verge they came, O'erleap'd the walls, and won eternal fame :-Drave in the foe from all the outer posts, Nor knew he yet of brave Monigomery lost !-That daring chief, inflam'd with martial fire ! Rush'd on the foe, and made them quick retire! Lo! on the ramparts brandishing his spear, The hero stood-disdaining flight or fear : In that dread moment, as he gain'd the walls. Thus to his friends the gallant leader calls :-This hour be men, exert your utmost might, Like th' fierce tiger-terrible in fight! See you gay troops already smit with fear, When on their walls but few of us appear; How will they shudder when our martial band. In dread array—rush in from yonder strand!—

Thus spoke the chief, with martial ardour fir'd, His brave example all his friends inspir'd. Just as he spoke, a ball like lightning sped-He now lies number'd with the mighty dead !-The valiant Cheeseman too, in death's embrace, Press'd the cold earth, in one sad hour and place! Thou too, Macpherson !- honour'd with thy fall The hostile ground, and hard unfeeling wall! To your remains, due rites great Carleton paid, And in the clay-cold bed your ashes laid! The starting tear stood ready in his eye, As the dead heroes past in silence by !-Montgomery flain !- then Carleton turn'd to meet Arnold's brave troops, who made a good retreat: War, sickness, famine, hence the host annoy. Mock their great hopes, and all their plans destroy.

The British chief* now sought the sickly train, Restor'd their health, and sent them home again:
Save a small remnant, who escap'd by slight,
And sav'd themselves by dint of mortal might;
Explor'd the desart-wild with ardent eye,
Brav'd the cold winds, and snows mountaneous high!
Th' insulting soe hung on their broken rear,
Maxwell wheel'd round, and chill'd their souls with sear.
Like as the lioness her young befriends,
From danger guards them and from snares defends;
So from the Britons Maxwell wheel'd and turn'd,
While sierce resentment in his bosom burn'd;
Then lastly, lodg'd them in the well-known post;
Weary and faint—the gleanings of a host!

Where There The tr'Twa Th' pon his The re Below The His na Who

From Here Swee His m In his The Sterlin And

Eage The Thol

Wayı

With

Crea And The

As th

The Mak

^{*} General Carleton's humanity to the prisoners, is generally acknowledged: had all the British officers behaved in the same manner, they would be justly entitled to that envied pre-eminence which their fore-sathers acquired throughout the world, for their humane and generous treatment of prisoners.

[†] Ticonderoga.

CANTO VI.

On the Long Isle, where losty forests grow, Where the full-tide in mighty torrents flow; There Britain's navy form'd in proud array, The troops pour forth, in tinsel trappings gay; 'Twas then Columbia's chief prepar'd to meet Th' powerful force, emerging from the fleet. On his sole arm his country's fate did stand, The ruler he, and leader of each band: Belov'd by all—rever'd throughout the host, The soldier's pride, Columbia's greatest boast!—His name sounds dreadful to vindictive North, Who hates the man, but still reveres his worth.

From rank to rank the hero mov'd along;
Here gallant Humphreys charm'd the list'ning throng!
Sweetly he sung amidst the clang of arms—
His numbers smooth, replete with winning charms!
In him there shone a great and god-like mind!—
The poet's wreath around the laurel twin'd.
Sterling in search of same, in arms appear'd,
And Sullivan in even balance steer'd:
Wayne, like a comet blaz'd along the field,
With ardour sought—unknowing how to yield!

Each army now, in firm battalia stood,
Eager to bathe their hands in hostile blood!—
The cause they fight for, animates them high;
Those war for honour, these for liberty.
Dread preparation of approaching war,
As the loud thunder threatens from afar!
Creation trembles at the dreadful sound,
And men and steeds fall prostrate on the ground!
The guilty wretch, swift slies before the storm,
Makes hasty vows his conduct to reform;

But all too late !- nor shelter is there nigh, That can refist th' artillery of the sky !-Onward it moves, in fearful terrors bound, Th' imprison'd winds increase the awful found; Thus they collected, all at once discharge Their ten-fold fury, on the world at large !-The British troops were seen at first to move, Then march'd in secret to the heights above; By artifice they feiz'd th' important post : Washington beheld, and faw the day was loft. Then as a lion, from the hunter's aim, Slowly he stalks-but sudden turns again! The skilful marksman feels a chilling fear, Nor dares to trust the dart or flying spear. So mov'd the chief, and most divinely brave! Himself expos'd, the weary'd troops to fave!-Yet there were flain, on this difalt'rous day, Some noble youths,* who fcorn'd to run away.

And now the chiefs in council were conven'd, To leave the Isle, the wisest course was deem'd. Lo! to the rivers utmost verge they come, Then panic ftruck, anticipate their doom! Aghast they stand-the winds obstruct their way, The waves roar dreadful in the distant bay !-Then Washington's great foul was closely prov'd, When on the margin of the flood he stood : Just so look'd Moses on the Egyptian coast, Fleeing before the mighty Pharaoh's hoft! Before him roar'd the deep and raging flood; Behind was Pharoah, thirsting for his blood! A dire dilemma ! - no mortal arm could fave ! Behind was death, -before the fearful wave! The troubled deep, then felt the potent rod, And swift retir'd, before the omniscient God!-

* Maryland Line.

The host Thus, do

In that Devoutly
Thick cle Favor'd of
With gra
Prostrate Again, we
And on es
The wine
Veer'd q Mifflin by Ere the

The rive

And Sol

From preserved grade gra

All friend The fad e Till Ind

ree fron

The host in fafety, past the spacious breach:
Thus, doubting mortals heaven descends to teach.

In that dread moment, as Columbia's bands,
Devoutly rais'd to heaven their suppl'ant hands;
Thick clouds of mist the weary host enclose—Favor'd of heaven, and shielded from their foes:
With grateful rapture they beheld the sign:
Prostrate they fell—and own'd the hand divine!
Again, was heaven's omnipotence reveal'd,
And on each mind, its awful fiat seal'd.
The winds, obedient to th' omnific power, Veer'd quick about, and gently wast them o'erMifflin brought off the last remaining few,
Ere the warm sun had drank the morning dew!
The river pass'd, the clouds dispersed away,
And Sol transcendant, beam'd transparent day.

From past events let erring mortals trust,leaven guards with tender care, the good and just. The British chiefs altonish'd, fain would know, What mighty miracle had fav'd the foe !ome said enchantments hung about the Isle! Or heaven propititions, on their cause did smile. Then Howe, deep pond'ring in his mighty mind Each hattle's iffue, was to peace inclin'd: lis delegated powers he then reveal'd-In herald brought them to th' tented field: To Washington, first chief of all the host, n vain he came—his labour all was loft. The rubicon was past, and peace no more, Inites proud Albion with Columbia's shore: All friendly intercourse must now subside,— The fad effects of tyranny and pride! Till INDEPENDENCE reigns throughout the land, free from the shackles of each foreign band.

CANTO VII.

HE Southern States now claim the muse's care, Fierce British wrath, alike extended there. Parker and Clinton, cloth'd in terror came,-But Lee and Moultrie won the prize of fame ! The Britons flee, the ships in haste depart : The chiefs aftonished us'd their utmost art. Surpriz'd they faw Columbia's fons engage Old Veteran troops, with more than martial rage! Then join'd the host, where Howe in power supreme, Still talk'd of riches, and of conquest dream'd, But ah, what woes! what thirst for human gore, Now fierce prevail'd along the Southern shore !-There whigs and tories, stung by deadly hate, On murther bend-rush'd blindly on their fate! By the high ways, beneath a spreading tree, Man watch'd for man, as for an enemy! Demonic rage first spurr'd the tories on: The whigs revenge, and thus their woes prolong. Widows and orphans, multiply amain; Those mourn their husbands, these their fathers slain! Such curfed wrath man's dignity degrades-Such cruel murthers, stain the Gallic page !-Death's meagre jaws with terrible uproar, Clatter'd around, befinear'd with human gore! His lacerated limbs his pains beguile-The spouting blood diffus'd a horrid smile! Then as a vulture, fealting on his pray, He tore the flesh, and bore his prize away !-

Oh! that some seraph from the climes above,
Would swift descend, and teach the law of love:
That men in peace, their shorten'd lives might spend,
And guardian angels all their steps defend!
Drive curst ambition to his native hell,
That man no more his maker's laws rebel:

And down Brood of That was And pur That dear The who The vital With and Proud of Aspiring, On oth Hatch'd I for other inflames of dreads the Britishd bent hen pour apine ar luth'd wind the footnote with movement and the footnote wards a second the foo

Columbia

Columb
he favag
he fortre
ad left to the W

or from ls brave

numero

And dove-like peace, with wide extended wings,
Brood o'er the land and change th' hearts of kings;
That wars may ceafe—the earth its fabbath know,
And pure delights from heavenly fountains flow.
That deathful strife and bloody crimes may cease,
The whole creation wrapt in boundless peace;
The vital spirit purify'd by love,
With ardent slights shall pierce the heights above,
Proud of its dignity and heavenly birth:
Aspiring, soar, and spurn this planet earth!——

On other scenes the muse, alas-must dwell, fatch'd by the furies, in the depths of hell! for other prospects kindling sierce desire, Mames their minds, and fets their fouls on fire: dreadful pause enlu'd, when o'er the flood, olumbia's host in firm batalia stood. the British chief, still lur'd by thirst of fame, and bent on plunder, from the Island * came; hen pour d his thousands on the neighbouring shore, apine and murther stalk'd along before !luth'd with success, they strut along the ground, nain! and the fam'd Fort triumphantly furround : Vith moving tears the foldiers begg'd their lives: ain th' attempt !- by ruthless foes furpriz'd. owards and tyrants ne'er forgive a oe, or from their principles a jot will go.

Columbia's chief beheld, with tearful eyes he favage butchery, and dread furprise!— he fortress seized, the troops dispers'd away, and lest the chief, to mourn that hapless day!
the White-Plains reluctant he retir'd, is brave-example a small band inspir'd, spend, howe follow'd close, and to the field he led numerous host, to warlike actions bred:

Long Island.

Full foon the battle join'd, with jarring found,
Men, steeds, and arms, lay mingled on the ground!
Thus a small remnant, like the rugged oak,
Sustain'd the storm, nor from their leader broke.
See them retiring from the haughty foe—
With hearts oppress'd, and stung with gen'rous woe;
They turn their eyes upon the victor host,
And frown tremendous—as the Briton's boast:
Then brave, resolve to rush amidst the foe,
And end their sorrows by a desperate blow.

Thus they awhile, by jarring passions tos'd-Now they defend, and next defert their post: Tortur'd with doubts, and harrass'd out with care, To heaven's high court preferr'd this ardent pray'r: O thou, whose eye discerns our inmost thoughts; Who's rod in mercy-scourges man for faults! If thou halt feen Columbia's fons remiss; Thyself chastise them, when they do amis :-On thee we call, thy powerful aid invoke, On thee rely and deprecate thy stroke! Inspire each patriot with thy facred fire, Inform their minds, and grant our just desire. Teach Britain's king the law of right and wrong: Oh, fave Columbia! and her race prolong; Numbers in vain oppose thy dread decree, If thou art for us, we will yet be free.

Thus pray'd the men, inur'd to every storm;
Whom death oft threaten'd, in each frightful form!
They now retreat before superior might:
Wisdom commands to shun th' unequal sight.
Through the rich plains, where Ceres loves to dwell,
Where beauteous maids their am'rous ditties tell;
(New Jersey call'd) the scatter'd remnant slies,
The soe pursues, the straggling culprit dies!
And now to Delaware's majestic stream;
This band of heroes in the evening came;

fpa Flor nd o'er ermanie Vho boa reat W ext rou hen to heir fri gregiou eafts, w Vas it fo o Itrip c o force he fathe That win Vhar cho or the v eeking to avain he he maid Again t is well-k he valiar efolv'd w bove all is courag tung by is brave he facred o arms tl he Hessia obstacle

o danger

nward th

nd feize 1

spaffous boats they cross the rapid tide. nd o'er the deep in circling eddies ride. ermanic troops, then quarter'd in the town.* Thoboalt their prowers and their high renown. reat Washington despis'd, and the brave host. ext roundly swore Columbia's cause was lost. hen to the farms, in troops they post away. heir friends th y plunder in the open day. gregious tools, ungrateful tools of power; eafts, wanting reason, never their friends devour. Vas it for this you left your native shore, o thrip the peafant and industrious poor? o force the virgin to your loath'd embrace. he father Itab, before his daughter's face? What winged vengeance waits the horrid deed? That chosen curse has heaven in wrath decreed. or the vile wretch who spilt the parents blood, teking to fave his child—his best belov'd? vain he pled, in vain the virgin cry'd, he maid was ruin'd, and the father dy'd. Again the chief prepares to fave the land, is well-known voice is heard along the strand; he valiant remnant muster'd at the call; efolv'd with him to conquer or to fall: bove all pain, all passion and all pride, is courage rifes as the flowing tide; ung by reproach, by love of country fir'd, is brave example other chiefs inspir'd orm! he facred unction spread throughout the host; o arms they fly, then feize th' envied post, he Hessians droop and give the town for lost. well, obstacles could stop their bold career, dangers daunt or chill their hearts with fear! award they rush, -regardless of their fate, nd feize the town the foe possess'd of late:

* Trenton.

The German troops so terrible in name, Submissive yield, and mourn their ravish'd same. Disgrace and shame oppress'd the British chief; Loud broken murmurs spoke his poignant grief.

The captive foe, a motley numerous band, Then cross'd the tide to wait the chief's command: Who followed foon, and with his gallant band, Confults new measures to redeem the land. Cornwallis now encamp'd within the town, Haughty and proud, and thirsting for renown; He the chief leader of the British van, Scorning the foe, the battle first began: The winding Sandpink the fierce hofts divide, The bridge to storm and gain the other side, Was the great object of each warring hoft, And all prepare to leize the dangerous post. The Jersey troops full in the front of war, Wait the strong torrent threatening from afar. Columbia's chief, to mighty cares refign'd, His labouring foul to noble acts inclin'd; Each post he visits with paternal care. Examines cool, the dreadful scenes of war!

Here valiant Hugg* in dreadful thunder tost, Nhe whirling balls among the British host:
Ellis † in arms long try'd beheld the foe;
Impatient waits to give the fatal blow!
His voice like distant thunder rolls along,
Like mighty Ajax in great Homer's song.
The Britons hear, and stand in wild affright,
They wheel, they turn, then save themselves in slight.
The Hessian troops close form'd in dread array,
Fearless came on, and wedg'd the narrow way:

* Major Samuel Hugg, of the artillery.
† Major General Ellis, of the militia—State of New-Jersey:

For on Then of And de

Rend t

Thus
Their y
Great And no
Sol now
The var
One no
In Free
In him t

Ingeniou

Theie vi

LO! inca

Ingloriou They unf A death-like filence, and a dread suspense,
For one small moment chain'd the active sense!
Then quick as lightning the loud cannons toar,
And death and slaughter stalk'd along the shore:
"Victors and vanquish'd join promisenous cries, Rend the wide arch, and pierce the vaulted skies."

Thus man with man in horrid strife engage,
Their visage gloomy—terrible their rage!
Great Washington beheld the glorious strife,
And nobly shew'd a brave contempt of life:
Sol now retir'd behind the western main,
The vanquish'd Britons mourn their heroes slain!
One noble chief Columbia lost that day,
In Freedom's cause he bore superior sway:
In him there shone a bright and manly slame,
The grateful muse records this parriot's same!
Ingenious, open—generous, brave and free,
These virtues Morris* all assibe to thee!

ールとくくとものやのかりかりとうとして

CANTO VIII.

The incautious Britons lose another post;
The British rear in Princeton idly sought lnglorious ea e, whilst others nobly fought;
They unsuspicious, saunter round the town, ght.

erfey:

Col. Anthony Morris of Philadelphia.

I i

Fearless of danger, or great Washington.
To take them by surprise the chief prepares,
Each leader anxious, in the danger shares:
Just as Aurora ting'd the eastern sky,
Columbia's host and matchless chief drew nigh;
In terrors clad, they rush'd into the field:
Success attends—the haughty Britons yield!—

Delusive hope had lull'd the British chief,
His soul indignant, scorn'd to yield belief:
Thus far out-witted by an abler hand:
He stamp'd, he rav'd, and madden'd round the land.
He vainly thought the soe an easy prey;
And watch'd impatient for the break of day:
The nightly fires the British host deceives,
They sure of conquest, took their wonted ease:
Vainly secure, and scorning all surprise,
Supine repose, and close their weary eyes.
Delusive dreams, weak phantoms of the night,
Presents the soe in wild disorder'd slight!
And now surrounded by their puissant bands,
Before them bend, and raise their suppliant hands.

Thus visions oft the sons of men deceive,
And pleasing dreams the troubled souls relieve:
But now when morning rose, amaz'd they sound
The soe they sought decamp'd from off the ground!
Perplex'd with doubts, alive to every sear,
Intent they stood—and trembled for the rear.
Nor stood they long, to camp a soldier came,
With hair erect! and blaz'd Columbia's same.

Told
And to Fortur
The I
A had Their
On bo
And h
The n Launce
Then Rapin
In my Wrap
At I
As the

At I As the The tr And m Their The di Philad Where Send to And be Join'd And for By Eri

Made !

And fto

Told how the field was strew'd with Britons slain,
And that three hundred wore the victors chain!

Fortune chang'd sides on that auspicious day;
The haughty Britons sullen stalk'd away.

A hasty march to Brunswick sav'd the foe,
Their towering hopes of conquest now laid low:
On board their ships in wild consussion run,
And hail with joy the friendly setting-sun;
The navy groan'd beneath the guilty load, Launch'd from the shore where late it proudly rode;
Then sought inglorious, some more peaceful shore,
Rapine and murder stalk'd along before!
In mystic darkness, Howe's designs were bound,
Wrapt up in shades—a mystery—prosound!

At length the clouds and mists disperse away, As the tall ships appear'd in Ches'peak bay; The troops all land :- a formidable hoft, And march in halte along the fertile coaft. Their object now to every man was known: The dazzling prize, Penn's rich and spacious town: Philadelphia call'd, where Congress held their seat, Where men from foreign climes were us'd to meet; Here merchants wealthy as Peruvian Dons, Send to the camp their brave and gallant fons; And beauteous virgins, for the public weal, Join'd with the matrons at the spinning wheel! And for a time disdain'd to wear the cloth, By Eritons wove, and fcorn'd ignoble floth; Made haughty Albion stoop beneath their power, And stood the test of many a perilous hour!

Some mourn'd a brother or a lover flain,
By the fierce tyrants of the roaring main!
Who now approach'd the town in dread array,
And all the dreadful pomp of war display:
E'en Washington in vain oppos'd their power,
And fought their legions till the ev'ning hour.
Then o'er the plain, as far as eye could ken,
Ran the warm blood in streams from dying men:
The broken columns with confus'd dismay,
To the thick coppice leg'd their weary way.

The mighty chief unknowing how to yield,
Reluctant left the foe, and well fought field:
While the fience blood-hounds in the British pay, Snuff'd the dread carnage, and pursu'd their prey.
Cover'd with dust and blood besprinkled o'er,
Columbia's sons indignant march'd before.
Fierce was the fight, and terrible the foe,
Six hundred Britons sought the shades below;
And twice that number of Columbia's host;
Fell!—bravely fell—before the day was lost.—
Then thou sweet Liberty—dear lovely maid!
Dispell'd each fear, and thus divinely said:

O tried in erms! by stern affliction prov'd, Thus heaven in mercy, proves the wise and good! But know the day, the glorious day draws near, These haughty Britons in their turn shall fear; Shall leave your coast, and seek their native shore, Then arts and peace your losses shall restore.

Thus fpoke the maid, and chear'd each drooping foul, The kindling warmth foon spread throughout the whole;

Difpa But f Then Befor Seiz' Well The o The r Sudde And v But e *His fl But an The f The c Howe' Long At len Six hu Or tal Britain The re

But And cl The w Mud-F

Againi Their

Dispair no more impair'd their wonted might, But fled and mingled with the shades of night. Then Howe in all the pomp of martial pride, Before the host like Hudibrass did ride: Seiz'd the fair town in distant climes renown'd, Well pleas'd he heard his martial fame refound. The din of war* again affails his ears; The roaring cannon rais'd tumultuous fears; Sudden he ftarts; to arms-to arms !-he cri'd, And with fresh courage to the field he fled. But e'er he reach'detne fierce contending hosts, "His flying sqadrons shew'd the battle lost; But animated by his well-known fame, The flying troops returned to charge again; The contest then with tenfold fury rose; Howe's mighty force Columbia's sons oppose; Long they sustain'd the great unequal fight, At length retire before superior might. Six hundred of the fons of Freedom flain. Or taken captive on the adjacent plain; Britain too loft as many valiant men, The residue sled to the town again.

But now far greater toils their care employ,
And checks the torrent of licentious joy:
The well stow'd ships below the town appear,
Mud-Fort now stops their sterce and bold career.
Against their sides the storm of battle fell,
Their utmost efforts the mud-walls repel:

* Battle of Germantown.
I i 2

g foul,

Confus'd they stood in silent dread surprise, Their senses doubt the goodness of their eyes. Loud broken murmurs then were heard afar, And this the language of each British tar:

"What? are we foil'd by this small seeble force?

A paltry fort retards our headlong course?

A sleet well mann'd, with heavy metal stor'd,

Our admiral a samous British lord?

You seventy fours the terror of the main,

Now keep aloof,—regardless of their same!

These Howes have got the name of sighting sellows,

Mere wind and puss—just like our cook's old bellows!

Where's now the spirit of immortal Drake?

Who made the Spanish forts and castles shake?

Forts far superior in strength and size

To this old hen-coop!—a mere trap for slies!

Thus grumbled they with honest anguish torn,
While down the tide the shattered'd ships were borne:
At length grown weary of the dangerous post,
The gallant sew regain the Jersey coast:
But not till perils of gigantic size,
Of strength superior, struck their wond'ring eyes;
Then gallant Smith* by all his foes admir'd,
The guns dismantled, and the buildings sir'd,
Then with his little band secure retir'd.

CANTO IX.

NOW while great Washington with watchful care, Conducted all the dreadful scenes of war;

* Gen. Smith of Maryland.

Burg Thro Led o Scorn To Sa There Each Their Anar Impo True How But O And c Search Each (Nor w Since' That Nome On Fr Nor o The fa And V Like I Or wi

Nov

And fo Who f

Who t

Burgoyne with hafty strides and proud array, Through Canada puriu'd his hapless wav. Led on by thirst of fame, and martial heat, Scorning furprife, nor dreaming of defeat: To Saratoga's plains the warrior came, There lost his army, and there died his fame; Each Briton too a deadly wound receiv'd; Their pride was piqu'd, and all their hopes deceiv'd. An army captur'd !- A British army too !-Impossible !- but is it really true ? True as the Gospel !- Terrible to tell How the fam'd lion of Great Britain fell! But O, forbear, and spare her ancient same, And close the lips at Wolf's immortal name! Search all the records of devouring time, Each dry historian, and each book of rhyme; Nor will you find that Britons ever wore, Since Cesar's time, a foreign yoke before. That day was fatal to her boundless sway, No more her laws Columbia's fons obey! On Freedom's broad eternal base they stand, Nor own the guidance of a foreign land ! The fair inheritance her fons shall share, And Washington shall be their polar star; Like him refiltless crush the invading foe, Or wise in peace, contemn parade and show!

e:

re,

Now fay, O muse! what other worthies sought, And for their country glorious honors bought? Who stem'd the torrent of Burgoyne's career, Who taught the haughty soe at last to fear?

Whose future sons shall raise the grateful pile, And make the marble bust horoic smile?

As when brave Wayne retiring from the war, Smil'd at his wounds, and view'd each dreadful fcar! Was it not Gates to victory led the way, His the chief rule on that eventful day ? Bold Arnold too, with martial frenzy fir'd, Storm'd the strong works-the foe amaz'd retir'd. As the fea rolls, impell'd by furious blafts, O'erflows the vales, and laysthe country waste, No mortal hand can check its bold career, The swain surpris'd retreats with sudden fear! So roll'd the battle 'gainst the British host, And pour'd refiftless o'er their strongest posts: Freedom's brave fons hard press the mighty chief, Shut up each avenue, -and stop'd relief: Frazier the bravest of the warrior train, A noble chieftain, was among the flain. Bravely he fell; and with his latest breath, Inspired the Britons to revenge his death. The kindling flame with creeping vigor ran. Cours'd thro' their veins, and spread from man to man: But they impotent, all their courage fled, Mutter'd faint threats, then mourn'd the hero dead! Weaken'd by famine, by fierce foes oppress'd, Dispair now urg'd, and pride the thought repres'd: But still as each returning morn appear'd, The prospect darken'd, and far worse appear'd. In one fad hour death play'd a dreadful game,

Refolv Burgoy
A heral
Gates et
His fou
An anfo
Burgoy
The car
Ten th

Foreve:

STERN The rate of the character of the c

Chear

'Twas

Refolv d'all doubts, and reflive spirits tame;

Burgoyne appall'd with scenes of mighty woe,

A herald seat the terms of peace to know;

Gates ever-generous—and truly brave,

His soul heroic—wish'd the soe to save;

An answer seat, cloth'd in the garb of peace;

Burgoyne well pleas'd, consents the war shall cease.

The captive see from first to last were sound,

Ten thousand souls, upon the hossile ground.

Thus sunk Great Britain's sormidable mame,

Forever razed from the book of Fame.

CANTO X

STERN Wirter now in icy fetters bound;
The rapid streams, and pav'd the fertile ground;
The chief thus warn'd some shelter to prepare,
For the brave host,—his sirst prevailing care.
At Valley-Forge he trac'd a spacious camp;
'Twas rising ground, aloof from noisome damp;
In uncouth huts, form'd from the neighb'ring woods
They searless slept, and brav'd the wintry sloods.
Fierce northern blasts blew howling all around;
The snows descend and whiten all the ground.

Thus far'd the men, the bulwarks of the land,
Nor one that murmur'd at their chief's command;
Chearful their leader's call they all obey;
Secure each pais, and toil from day to day.
'Twas here the invigorating tidings came,
How royal Lewis back'd Columbia's claim!

man:

!!

The joyful news foon spread throughout the host, That friendly fleets were cruifing off the coaft: Charg'd with commission to block up the foe, And crush the British by one single blow ! Nor mis'd it much-few days had seal'd their doom, Had they not left the spacious town so soon. But Clinton fearful of some dangerous scheme, Pass'd o'er the river, and to Jersey came. Clinton was chief, and held furpreme command; Since Howe inglorious fought his native land : To the fea-shore the army took its way; The Jersey troops retard their furious way. By honor rous'd, by love of country fir'd, The youthful Davenport * his friends inspir'd: Gay without pride, from affectation free, True to his trust, an honelt man was he.

Columbia's host now press the British rear, Drive in their scouts, and fill their souls with fear.
On Monmouth's plains, where Lee in duty fail'd,
The British force and discipline prevail'd!
Night's sable curtain lent her powerful aid,
Under her ample covering they parade;
Then swiftly march; fear lends her nimble wings;
The morn arrives, the joyful Briton sings.
Lo! the tall ships appear as groves of trees;
Supinely waving to each gentle breeze:
With deafening shouts the woods re-echo round,
The shores reverberate the joyful sound!
Eight hundred Hessians weary of the war,
Forsake the host Columbia's gifts to share.

VV
Of Bur Amaz'd
And fel

Still fla

As the Corn In fouth In fam' His the D'Esta Unite th Each le For the As the Turns f His gla His rifin So look So thre Deep-tl Fierce ' Large h Shot the Vain te Secure!

Awful t

Six hun

^{*} Franklin Davenport Esq. of the state of New-Jersey:

CANTO XI.

W HAT said great North when news to Albion came Of Burgoyne captur'd, and brave Frazier slain? Amaz'd he stood—as one that lost his wit, And felt the terrors of a maniac sit.

Still flattering hope diffus'd a cheering ray, As the warm sun-beams on a winter's day.

Cornwallis faithful to his master's cause, In southern states restor'd Great Britain's laws In fam'd Savannah Prevost bore the fway, His the fole honor of one glorious day ! D'Estaing and Lincoln with a mighty hoft, Unite their strength to drive him from his post. Each leader skilful in the art of war, For the dread conflict hastily prepare: As the grim lion in his lonely den, Turns furious round, befet by dogs and men; His glaring optics dart pernicious fire, His rifing mane denotes his bursting ire: So look'd each Briton as the foe appear'd, So threaten'd they, for battle well prepar'd. Deep-throated cannon belch'd tremendous fire, Fierce warriors fought, and shew'd their vengeful ire; Large hollow ships with tenfold fury pent, Shot their red thunders, and thick lightnings fent! Vain terrors all-the Britons safe in hold, Securely fought, and fhew'd themselves most bold; Awful the feene! fierce horror stalk'd around, Six hundred French lay gasping on the ground:

Of Freedom's fons, two hundred bravely flain, And fierce Poulaski bit the enfanguin'd plain : Then dread dispair black as the shades of night, Chas'd the poor vanquilled from the dreadful fight, They thus repuls'd, the flege was infant rais'd; Prevost and Maitland ghin'd deserved praise. Ruin and routs sicceed : the featter'd bands Seek their own homes, their fields and fylvan lands, Yet some there were, whose hearts yet firm and true, Hover'd around, -and many Britains flew; Sumpter and Marian warm'd with martial heat, Now bravely war then prudently retreat: These gallant leaders of a chosen band, The brave defenders of their native land; Harrass'd the foe, and check'd their bold career, Dauntless in danger, strangers to all fear! Thus they the force of Britain long fustain'd, And oft they conquer'd, and bright laurels gain'd: 'Till Gates arriv'd, with larger force at hand, On Camden's plains assum'd the chief command.

This knew Cornwallis, and with martial pride,
Mov'd with spread banners and gigantic stride;
And as a stream made rapid by the rain,
He rush'd impetuous to the embattl'd plain.
Then host contending, met in horrid fray,
And some too fearful, threw their arms away.
Freedom's brave sons long held the doubtful fight,
But last were vanquish'd by superior might;
Thus British valor with fresh lustre shone;

Militia:

Fortun And fro The fic

Soon m

Here C

Say :
What of Who w
For mu
That ta
The ch
Fearleft
Brave,
The head
To win
Or fend
His bra

The cap And to But stop

The pr

Of war.
Pickens

Tarleton Three h

And fel

Here Gates, improvident, was overthrown. Fortune chang'd fides on that eventful day, And from the victor stole the prize away: The fickle goddess loves to shew her pranks, Regardless of entreaties, or of thanks: Soon may she change and in a lucky hour Lay low in dust the pride of British power.

ie,

Say muse, when Gates had run his martial race, What chief supply'd that fallen heroe's place? Who was the man, who his name could tell, For much depends on knowing men full well? That task was thine, great Washington I deem, The chosen hero was the valiant Greene. Fearless in danger-dreadful to the foe, Brave, but not rash, and void of empty show! The hero march'd to fave the fouthern states. To heal the wounds sustain'd by honest Gates : To win some laurels from the haughty foe, Or fend them howling to the shades below. His brave colleague, the valiant Morgan fought The prize of honour, and with Tarleton fought; The capering warrior deem'd the conquest won, And to the battle with mad fury run; But stop'd full short, wedg'd in the narrow way Of warring heroes, form'd in grim array : Pickens and Morgan the fierce war maintain'd; Tarleton was routed, and his troops detain'd. Three hundred Britons felt the stroke of death. And fell promiscuous on the parched heath!

Five hundred captives wore the victor's chain, The rest with Tarleton scour'd across the plain.

Morgan's brave band then march'd without delay, And through the forest chose their rugged way; To Yadkin's streams arriv'd with joy they found, The valliant Greene encamp'd upon the ground: There too was Lee, Virginia's boafted pride, With other heroes marching by his side. To them Cornwallis came with mighty force. And vow'd revenge for loss of Tarleton's horse; Two thousand veterans to the field he led, In war's dread fratagems completely bred; In Freedom's cause four thousand now were seen To oppose the foe, and follow after Greene. Numbers in vain mix in the field of fight, Where order rules not, and where fears affright. The foe came on with banners wide display'd, Sonorous music swell'd the grand parade! The new rais'd troops beheld their bold career. Aghast they stood-the slaves to coward fear! Their stay was short-too careful of their lives, Sprung from the field to feek their puling wives, O'er burning fands, a long and weary way, They pass'd inglorious many a sultry day; Base fears pusu'd them as they pass'd along, They heard, or thought they heard the martial fong: With hair erect, they caught each ruftling found, Still fear'd the foe encompass'd them around ! How many deaths the coward passes through? His fears how many, and his joys how few?

Lo! no And no Dread The do The w

To G

> The Yet I

Lice The Lo! now the battle clos'd with dreadful found,
And men and arms promiseuous strew'd the ground:
Dreadful the fight when two such hosts appear!
The day was Britain's, but it cost them dear.
The valiant Green then measur'd back the plain,
By forced marches to fair Camden came;
To Gates once fatal, and to him the same.

CANTO XII.

RAWDON a British peer beheld from far,
The valliant Green prepar'd for dreadful war;
And as the host with martial front drew nigh,
Great Rawdon mark'd him with a piercing eye;
And seized the moment when th' unwary soe
Was least prepar'd for any sudden blow:
Then rais'd his voice and thus his thoughts broke forth:
Ye generous Britons! men of mighty worth!
Think on your fathers same, and deeds of old;
Like them be valiant, and like them be bold:
Grasp well your arms, and play the men this day,
For the man dies that dares to run away!—
Rush on the soe, and with determin'd force Drive opposition from its headlong course.

Then on Columbia's host they furious ran,
The new rais'd troops a shameful slight began:
Yet long the arduous sight brave Green maintain, d,
A dear bought victory the Britons gain'd!
Licentious joys succeed, and wild uproar,
The haughty victors plunder rich and poor:

In boastful terms proclaim their martial feat, Yet fear to stay, and sound a glad retreat.

Thus have I seen some bully of the town,
Trumpet his same, and throw his weaker down;
At length the boaster met a stronger soe,
Who at one stroke laid his vile structure low:
Then as the owl who shuns the light of day,
The vanquish'd hero meanly slunk away;
The peaceful circle prais'd the friendly hand,
That still'd the tongue they never could command.

Twelve score and ten-the prime of all the host, In this last battle was untimely lost ! The British now from Camden fled in haste, The dwellings burn'd, and laid the country waste. Near filver Santee on whose winding shores, Weary and faint they spread their ample stores. Columbia's fons pursue the warlike foe, Despise soft eale, and meaner joys forego: A well-known fort* by art fecurely form'd, The valiant Sumpter seiz'd and bravely storm'd; Heroic Lee by youthful ardor fir'd, Fort Granby took-this action all admir'd: Fam'd Silver Bluff next prov'd the victor's might, This too was won by dint of mortal fight; Here Cooper fought the prize of martial fame, In youthful ardor to the field he came. Lee's brave example all the troops inspire, These sons of freedom breath'd heroic fire;

* Fort Mott.

Where Or ru

Gorn Collect The g Refolv Phillips Reviv' Arnold Now j Of Bri " Oh ! Thus tl Ravag' Fayette Their r Yet oft And ga Thus th

In Y Close b A place The tre

E'en Br

M_E

Where'er he turn'd they wheel'd without delay, Or rush'd intrepid thro' each dangerous way.

Cornwallis of his boasted laurels shorn, Collects his troops, and midway meets the storm; The gallant troops attend their leader's call, Refolv'd with him to conquer or to fall: Phillips and Arnold join'd the gallant troops, Reviv'd their ardour, and renew'd their hopes : Arnold once famous in fair Freedom's cause, Now join'd his country's foes and tyrant laws; Of British gold he purchas'd a large share; "Oh! what a dreadful falling off was there!" Thus they march'd on with pomp and martial shew, Ravag'd the country as they us'd to do! Fayette and Wayne in vain oppos'd their force, Their numbers small, and few their warlike horse; Yet oft a noble stand these heroes made, And gall'd the British from each friendly shade: Thus they would fight, retreat, and fight again; E'en Britons trembled at the name of Wayne.

In York-Town now the British troops reside, Close by the walls appear'd the flowing tide; A place for arms design'd for all the host, The troops industrious strengthen ev'ry post.

CANTO XIII.

METHINKS I hear divine Columbia fay:

Bear up, my fons, your valour still display;

The day draws near when peace shall bless the land, And Washington hall rule with equal hand : E'en now he comes, the conquering hero comes! To drive the Britons to their native homes ! To him has heaven decreed the glorious boon, To end this war before another moon! And as she spoke in her right hand there shone A laurel crown enwrought with curious stone; The dazzling prize a glorious lustre shed, Then swift descended on the hero's head. Now Rochambeau from France, a noble chief, By Louis fent to Washington's relief, With his gay troops he join'd the patriot hoft; With them surrounded every British post : Cornwalls, furious as the mountain boar, Then felt itrange fears he never felt before ; Within his breast a furious tempest rag'd, The gathering storm refus'd to be assuag'd; Fierce angry frowns his troubled foul exprest; Indignant murmurs swell'd each soldier's breast! One common cause the gallant troops inspire, Their wounded fame now sets their souls on fire, And barbarous Memory in cruel sport, Brings full in view the fields of Agincourt! Stung to the quick, their fiery eye-balls roll-Their leader scarce their swelling rage controul Eager to rush amid the host of foes, And wreak their vengeance with repeated blows. Delusive hope now darts a cheering ray, And now dispair the phentom scares away :

Deep-Down Expos' The ha Worn Wifdo Sad fac The pr Longt Nor fre But no Curnwa The un His mi The te Mild b The tr

Now
And fai Moor'd
Firm a
And as Unmov
Loud b
But cur
May he

And fu

Prolon Gently

Free fr

Deep-throated tubes discharge their pond'rous balls, Down fall the battlements and strong-built walls! Expos'd to view, and now a furer mark, The hapless Britons dread each latent spark; Worn down with toils and harrafs'd out with care, Wildom demands the gallant troops to spare : Sad facrifice for British pride to make! The precious fruits of blundering North's mistake. Long time they fought, and brave repuls'd the foe, Nor from his post a single man would go. But now by thousands press'd, by toil worn down, Cornwallis last consents to yield the town: The unwilling tear drop'd from his half-clos'd eye, His mighty foul oft heav'd a troubled figh: The terms were such as Lincoln late receiv'd, Mild beyond hope—the vanquish'd Britons live ! The troops march'd forth oppress'd with mighty woes, And fullen murmur'd 'midst ten thousand foes.

Now gentle Peace her downy pinions spread,
And fair Columbia rais'd her lofty head:
Moor'd safe in port, the bark of freedom rides,
Firm at the helm great Washington presides;
And as a rock deep rooted on the shore,
Unmov'd he hears the sons of riot roar;
Loud bawling patriots when they seek to rise,
But curs'd with power prove tyrants in disguise.
May heaven in mercy to our infant state,
Prolong his life, and stop the course of fate!
Gently then lead him down the vale of life,
Free from corroding cares, and anxious strife:

For fure if man was e'er defign'd to be Favour'd of heaven-then Washington is he! O for great Sidney's muse! and melting strains, As when he fung the fam'd Arcadian plains; In verse like his, how would Columbia shine-What glowing thoughts appear in every line !-How would he paint in strains sublimely gay, The rifing glories of our new-born day !-And in sweet numbers grateful to the ear, Sing the gay charms of each revolving year; The towering forests, and enchanting groves, Where the fierce Indian woos his tawny love; The conscious trees their blushing honors shed, And scatters fragrance on the verdant bed; Majestic rivers, never known to fong, Wind through the vales, and boldly sweep along; Upon whose banks cloth'd with eternal green, Large droves of herds, and fleecy flocks are feen: Th' enchanting subject wisely Irelign, To bards more favour'd of the muse divine! Some future Humphreys, whose tuneful breath Shall foothe the foul amidst the pangs of death. Then will Columbia o'er Europa shine, And the grand landscape swell in ev'ry line ! E'en now I see the glowing picture rise, While distant nations hail our western skies! Yet as I fing, how great the task appears! Warn'd by the muse, I yield to prudent sears.

20 JY 63

